It Sometimes Happens!

As the publisher of weekly newspapers well knows, it isn't easy to nail down "exclusive" stories or sit on a "scoop" several days until edition day.

One such fellow apparently missed by a few hours last week the chance to print one of the most important stories of his life — about himself. He is William O. Walker, Cleveland publisher of the Negro weekly newspaper Call and Post, which has a Columbus edition.

Friday evening Governor-elect James A. Rhodes announced that he had appointed Walker as director of the Department of Industrial Relations — the first Negro to become a member of the cabinet of an Ohio governor.

Walker's own paper, although datelined Saturday, is distributed earlier in the week. It missed the story completely. Rhodes, usually wise to the ways of publicity, apparently missed his timing on that one.

Jimmy has been a regular columnist in the Call and Post, penning a piece on Negro history.

The governor's selection of Mr. Walker is to be commended. He is an able business man and newspaper publisher.

Mr. Heer "Steps Up"

A bit of big news in Central Ohio this past week centered around Walter F. Heer, Sr.

He announced that he was resigning from the position as head of the Franklin County Democratic organization and at the same time was relinquishing management of the F. J. Heer Printing Co.

But Mr. Heer was careful to leave no impression that he is stepping down, or retiring. Instead he is merely taking another job and will devote his full time to other business interests.

And it stands to reason that he will be active in many ways in the civic affairs of this area.

While many people on the opposite side of the political fence have differed with him often over the past 30 years it is still a fact that he has contributed much to the growth of the community in this time.

We like his attitude toward this change. It is not retirement. He is not through. He is merely "stepping up" to a new position in our community. We wish him well.

JAMES WAGNER, executive secretary of the South Side YMCA, is shown Saturday as he helped carry his desk down the long flight of stairs to leave rented space occupied by the "Y" at 864 S. Third-st since 1917. The new building, now in operation at 190 Southwood-av, marks an end of an era for the organization and will be recognized at the 45th annual YMCA dinner at St. Paul's United Church of Christ on Monday, Jan. 21.

AT ST. PAUL'S

45th 'Y' Dinner Is End Of Era

After 45 years of South Side YMCA annual dinners, the feeling is strong that 1963 will be the end of an era.

During each of the past four and one-half decades, the dinner has been held in various locations throughout the South Side since the branch "Y" conducted its activities in rented quarters and had no facilities to host its own recognition event each year.

Now, the South Side has its own shiny new building at 190 Southwood-av. The dinner could have been held there this year, actually, since activities are being conducted there now, but the kitchen isn't, as yet, fully equipped.

Monday, Jan. 21, is the date for this year's event and it will be held at the St. Paul United Church of Christ, 225 E. Gates-st, beginning at 6:15 p.m. Cost is $1.50 per person.

According to South "Y" Executive Secretary James L. Wagner, the dinners from here on will be held in the new ultra-modern structure.

This 45th annual meeting of the South Side Branch YMCA is described by Wagner as "one of the opportunities we have to take a new look and, with new courage and inspiration, seek to carry on the good work that has been the responsibility of the South Side Branch YMCA in South Columbus since 1917.

Robert C. Cooper, general executive of the Columbus Metropolitan YMCA, will be the guest speaker in a program which includes a song-fest highlighted by the Optimist Junior Boys' Glee Club.

Special recognition will al-

Old Frank-rd Project Gets Beef-Up Job

The 30-year-old plan to link Frank and Refugee-rds between High-st and Lockbourne-rd, has grown into a $9.7 million project for a 4.3-mile, four-lane expressway.

Programmed for 1967, the expressway tentatively is planned to start at the South Freeway and dip under High-st south to parallel Fornof-rd. Bypassing the Buckeye

Major Construction Projects Are Planned For South Side

City expansion and development was the big story of 1962 and three South Side plans for construction seem to indicate that another chapter to that story is in order.

The city building department announced recently the three projects slated to begin soon in the South Side area and observers see it as a general trend toward "restoring" this side of town, feared by some civic leaders to be "dying."

The major one will be handled by Benny Newpoff of the Leonard Fence Co., 218 S. Champion-av.

Newpoff announced last week his intention to construct an ultra-modern 44-unit motel at 920 S. High-st just south of the Whittier, S. High-st intersection.

The new facility will be constructed on a 122 by 195-foot lot which means the razing of several antique structures standing there.

According to Newpoff, construction should start some time in February and will take "four or five" months to complete. Total cost of the project has been estimated at $200,000.

Newpoff also built the South Wind Villa Motel, directy across S. High-st from this prospective site, but sold it some months ago.

In other building action, a permit has been issued to construct a two-story, frame and brick veneer apartment building at 995 Thurman-av. These will be known as the Lockhurst Apartments, Inc.

Similiar structures will be erected at 1169, 1770 and 1[illegible] Lockbourne-rd. Herman Bauman is the contractor.

The Church of Christ in Christian Union is the third most recent building activity.

Located at 52 Reeb-av, the church plans to construct an addition and alteration to the brick church at a cost of $25,000.

C. C. Johnson and Sons will handle the construction, according to building permit officials.

Progress Report Due Next Week

Watch next week's edition for Hartley Newspapers' Annual Progress Report.

This year's special supplement will feature social, economic, religious, business, and education reports from Columbus area experts.

The report, complete with pictures, will give readers a comprehensive and detailed account of progress made here in 1962, and will outline trends in the various fields in 1963.

DANNY LEE YOUNG NAMED WINNER OF STORK DERBY ON SOUTH SIDE

First brand, spanking new citizen of 1963 on the South Side, registered under Stork Derby rules, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Jay J. Young, 868 Koebel-rd.

The newcomer made his debut at 5:22 a.m., Jan. 1, at Grant Hospital.

Little Danny Lee Young was the first born in the community, eligible under rules of the contest, to win the title of First South Side Baby, and the congratulatory prizes offered by area merchants.

The first child of Mr. and Mrs. Young, his birthdate was expected to be Dec. 22. Young is a forklift operator at Hill's Distributing Co., 2270 S. High-st.

A picture of the newcomer with his mother, and a story of the family will appear in next week's issue.

ICE SKATE FANS GET RECREATION DEPARTMENT AID

DESPITE THE FACT that this sign at Franklin Park p.m. on school days, from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. on Saturdays says "Not Responsible For Activities On The Ice," the Columbus Recreation Department reported this week that it is employing qualified ice skating instructors and supervisors to man five city parks. Besides Franklin, Schiller, Westgate, Goodale and Whetstone are now havens for the ice enthusiasts. Supervisors will be on the job from 4 to 10 p.m. on school days, from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. on Saturdays and from 1 to 10 p.m. on Sundays during those times when the ice will permit skating. Ice skating instruction will be offered at some ponds. The Parks and Forestry Department also is cooperating by maintaining the ice and providing wood-burning warming places.

HOMEOWNERS WANT FACTS

Winchester Estates Looks To Annexation

Efforts to have Harold L. Buchanan, acting planning director of the city of Columbus agree to appear before the Winchester Park Association have thus far been futile, according to information received from the group's president, Ed Popper, 3164 Saxton-ct.

Buchanan suggested the group submit its questions in letter form and he would reply. However, this was unsatisfactory to the association and Popper stated that he is trying to get Buchanan to send another representative to the next meeting scheduled Sunday, Jan. 13.

The association, which is made up of homeowners in the area, invited the residents of College Hill and Hillcrest to their last meeting to discuss the possibilities of annexation.

Interest in the plan was shown when about 40 people turned out for the meeting, held in Popper's home.

The only facts that Popper would confirm were that the meeting was held and the decision made to postpone any possible action until the facts could be learned.

However, according to one of the members of the association who attended, opinions on the matter were sharply divided.

She stated those who favor requesting annexation cited their beliefs that the move would bring lower taxes, bus transportation, street lights, garbage collection and city water.

Water for the community is now furnished through a private system owned by Burr Dawes.

Others expressed the opinion that the expense of street assessments might well outweigh any advantages, and brought out that the services anticipated from the city might not materialize.

Still others viewed the plan as "a little premature" and felt the community should wait upon an invitation to annex from the city.

The decision was made to withhold any action until more information on the matter could be obtained.

School Aspect Studied

One member reported that some of those in favor of the idea were under the impression that municipal annexation entails a change of school districts.

Asked for explanation, Phillip K. Williams, executive head of the Madison Local Schools, stated that there is no direct connection between the two.

Municipal annexation is a matter between the area in question and the city. Only the State Board of Education has the authority to change

CLEAR SAILING?

Sabin Shipment In For Sunday Sipping

By JOHN AUBLE, JR.

The airliner carrying Sabin Type III landed at Port Columbus Friday morning right on schedule and welcoming health officials on hand to greet the shipment couldn't help but hope that there'll be the same "clear sailing" during the administering.

They, of course, are very much aware of the doubts some persons have in their mind over the polio vaccine which will be distributed at 119 greater Columbus locations next Sunday, Jan. 6.

They are pinning most of their hopes on the fact that the vaccine was given a clean bill of health not only by local competent medical authorities but also, more recently, by the U.S. Surgeon General.

A cold winter wind was sweeping the Port Columbus runway as the American Airlines plane carrying the controversial Sabin pulled to a halt.

James E. Stein, Franklin County territorial manager for the Wyeth Laboratories (developers of the vaccine) was among the officials waiting for the shipment.

Stein explained that some 600,000 doses were being brought in for administering Sunday. 100,000 were shipped by plane and the rest will be brought in from Cincinnati by shuttle buses.

The precious serum was handled with care by the air-

TEN CASES OF Sabin Type III oral polio vaccine flew into Port Columbus Friday morning safe and sound and pretty stewardess Joyce Wisneski was on hand to be sure that the precious serum reached Columbus officials. Here, she's shown giving one of the cases to Robert McLoughlin, president of the Central Ohio Academy of Pharmacy. McLoughlin, along with four Wyeth Laboratories representatives, developers of the Sabin, were also at the airport to receive the shipment. Sabin will be administered Sunday, Jan. 6.

'Peppermint Chiffon Pie' Is Light, Refreshing Dessert

Pie for dessert is an American tradition. The crust and filling may be prepared in any number of ways to provide a rich, satisfying, or delicate and refreshing dish to compliment any menu plan.

As a refreshing dessert, peppermint chiffon pie is an unbaked pie variety.

The combination of a buttery, chocolate crumb crust and peppermint-flavored chiffon filling produces an eye and taste appealing treat to serve often. Made with nutritious milk and eggs, it is a dessert that is extra-rich in important food values.

For meals that are heavy and need a sparkling finish, peppermint chiffon pie is made to order. It is a convenient "make-ahead" dessert that will please every one.

PEPPERMINT CHIFFON PIE

Measurements Of Bagged Deer Racks Available

With the Ohio gun deer season three weeks past, many large deer racks are being reported, according to Ohio Division of Wildlife fieldmen and Buckeye deer hunters.

Max Shipley of 705 N. Ogden-av, Columbus taxidermist at 1001 W. Broad-st, and a Boone and Crockett Club enthusiast, reports he has 35 big Ohio heads on hand for mounting already.

"Many of them are Buckeye Big Buck Club size and some of them are big enough for Boone and Crockett Club," he commented.

Any deer hunter who killed an Ohio deer in fair chase is eligible for membership in Big Bucks. Deer taken during the 1962 season can't be meased before Feb. 15, 1963, as there is a 60-day shrinking period.

To have a rack measured, write to Big Buck, 1500 Dublin-rd, Columbus 12.

The mineral Mica can be made as thin as tissue paper.

Surburban Freight Reorganizes Sales, Operation Functions

A thoroughgoing change in operating strategy at Suburban Motor Freight, Inc., has been disclosed by James R. Riley, president. Sales and operations, for the first time in the company's 47-year history, are now functioning as separate units.

Division of sales and operations in the Columbus-based, national regular common carrier, explained Riley, has been brought about by the creation of a "diffuse marketing structure."

Riley announced that Jack L. Stewart, a vice-president and board member, has returned to Columbus to organize the independent marketing office. Stewart had been in Toledo for the past three years directing integration of a subsidiary, the Liberty Highway Co., with the parent line.

"Implementation and extension of organizational changes," said Riley, "including the headquarters staff, presages a number of new assignments."

Stewart has named two Suburban Motor Freight veterans to his staff: C. B. "Cy" Souders, sales manager, and William R. Barnhart, national accounts coordinator.

Founded in 1915, Suburban Motor Freight is one of the nation's largest highway regular common carriers. The company provides service in Indiana, Illinois, Kentucky, Ohio, Michigan and West Virginia, and interline accommodations to 41 other states and Canada.

field crew as the ten cardboard boxes were dislodged from a packing of dry ice used in the plane to keep the vaccine cold. The cartons were immediately shipped to the health department to be cold-storaged there.

Stein mentioned that four million doses of Wyeth Type III vaccine have been given in this country to date and that only one possible case of polio has developed coincident with the administration of the serum.

The final decision to proceed with immunization by Sabin III here was made by the Franklin County Sabin on Sunday Steering Committee.

One of the Committee's members, Robert McLoughlin, was also at Port Columbus to meet the shipment.

He said his committee — made up of respected medical authorities — have concurred with representatives of every segment of the community concerned with the problem.

"Every adult and child — even if they had a complete series of Salk shots and Type I and II Sabin vaccine — must take Type III in order to finish polio for good," McLaughlin emphasized.

The Sabin has the complete backing of the Academy of Medicine of Columbus and and Franklin County which cites the vaccine as "a community program which should receive everyone's support."

One of the most significant points in the controversy is the fact that it's among the safest of all preventative medicines, according to health officials, especially when administered during cold-weather months. McLoughlin pointed out that the risk of giving it in January weather is "virtually non-existent."

Wyeth representatives said "better than a half-million" persons received Type I vaccine and that "about a half-million" persons took Type II in the greater Columbus area.

"We have no reason now to believe that any less will take advantage of Type III," said Stein. "At least, we're planning on it happening this way and we're bringing in enough to meet this estimate."

Sabin Type III will be administered at 119 "stations" in and around the greater Columbus area. The ones located in Hartley Newspaper locations include:

Dr. Sabin To Speak

Dr. Albert Sabin, developer of the Sabin polio vaccine, will discuss Type III on WLW-C, TV 4's "Viewpoint" program Friday, Jan. 4, at 9:30 p.m. The Sabin will be administered Sunday, Jan. 6.

Guest panelist for this special program is Dr. Richard Fulton, president of the Columbus Academy of Medicine. Dr. Sabin is expected to answer questions from the panel concerning Sabin live virus polio vaccine Type III and the controversy over its use.

The program was pre-recorded Dec. 27 in Cincinnati for showing at the mentioned time slot.

March Of Dimes Helps Save Boy

Johnny Wilson, son of Mr. and Mrs. John A. Wilson of of 4889 Neff-rd, Grove City, celebrated his fourth birthday recently. It was a happy affair.

Yet at one time, Johnny's parents had little hope that he would live to celebrate even his first birthday. For he was born with the often fatal birth defect of water on the brain, or hydrocephalus.

Surgical treatment saved Johnny's life when he was three months old. At that time, doctors performed what is known as a shunt operation. They inserted in Johnny's head a plastic tube which allowed excess fluid from the brain to be harmlessly absorbed by the youngster's body.

Without the operation, fluid within the brain is prevented from taking its normal course, and causes the head to swell enormously. This is what had happened to Johnny. (If shunt surgery is not performed in time, mental retardation and blindness may ensue, even death, in certain cases.)

Since 1958, doctors have performed two other shunt operations and have treated Johnny for gastroenteritis and septicemia.

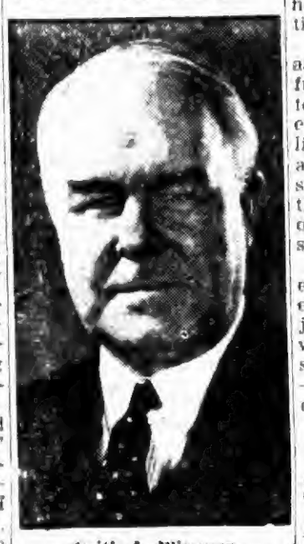
Today, Johnny leads a relatively healthy, happy and carefree life. Like any other little boy who lives on a farm, he loves to hug lambs, chase cows and tease chicks on the family's 100 acres.

He is a good example of thousands of afflicted children being helped to live nearly normal lives through a unique medical care program financed by the National Foundation - March of Dimes.

Babies with birth defects are born every other minute in the United States, 250,000 of them each year, almost 700 each day.

Johnny goes regularly to a special Birth Defects Clinical Study Center at Children's Hospital, supported by March of Dimes funds.

It is one of more than 30 similar centers across the nation set up for the study and treatment of birth defects.



At the center, trained specialists work together to help children with many kinds of birth defects, behalf.

Every four months, Johnny's mother drives him to the center for his check-up. A doctor always measures his head to make sure there is no change in size. Since 1959, his head size has remained relatively constant.

Johnny is growing up to be an impish, energetic and friendly little boy who likes to do everything and go everywhere. Especially, he likes to wheedle rides on a pony at the next farm. He'll settle, though, for a tour on the tractor with his mother or father, Julia and John Wilson.

Like Johnny, other afflicted children who receive proper treatment may live to enjoy shooting cap pistols, watching television, singing songs or playing a toy banjo —with the best of four-year-olds.

Let's Maintain Faith In Sabin

We're convinced! Sabin's safe.

When a newspaper is to take an editorial stand on a subject, the procedure is to check with men who know, men whose opinions are respected and men who have devoted many hours of research time to a particular situation.

Such is the case with Sabin Type III oral vaccine, the third and final installment in the fight against polio which will be administered in the greater Columbus area on Sunday, Jan. 6.

The men who know — medical officials across the country—have given the controversial vaccine their stamp of approval and that's good enough for us.

These competent medical men are urging everyone to take the final Sabin sip because they know you are 30 times more likely to contract polio Type III by not taking the vaccine than by taking it.

Besides that, any remote dangers of the vaccine are reduced to near nothingness by the fact that it's being administered in winter weather—non-polio season.

This effort needs the support of residents everywhere. Without the vaccine, a person will continue to be a potential polio carrier even if he's received Type I and II.

Even elderly persons, who may have an immunity to polio, can still be carriers of the disease.

For these reasons, Sabin Type III must be taken by everyone if we're to ever finish polio for good.

Winter Hunting Is Bonus To Sportsmen

INSIDE ON THE Outdoors By ROD COCHRAN

Starting off a new year with last year's hunting season still in progress is a bonus to sportsmen that has come about in recent years.

The rabbit season is open to Jan. 31, and cock pheasants may be taken on state hunting areas until that date. In the south hunting zone (check your hunting regulation digest to find it) either cock or hen pheasants may be taken through January. Ohio has the longest ruffed grouse season in the nation, and it extends to Feb. 23. Hunting raccoons and opossums is allowed until Feb. 15.

All of this adds up to plenty of outdoor fun for hunters who do not fear ice and snow. Hunting and fishing have become truly year around sports. With ice fishing to fill in a few gaps, the outdoorsman can easily pass the time until spring arrives.

A winter hunt has charms all its own, but you must be adequately dressed to enjoy them. With the snow crunching under foot, crisp air and a blue sky, you will find much of interest outdoors.

Dogs that are properly conditioned love to get out and hunt under these conditions. Beagles are not hampered by snow if it is not too deep, and can trail both rabbits and birds. Rabbits seem to enjoy the chase, and often run longer over snow than at any other time.

Observation is easy when the snow is on. Once in a while you can see the whole chase from the time a rabbit is jumped until it runs in a hole or is shot. A fox stands out boldly against a white background, and few can sneak out of a field without being seen if you are quiet and observant.

Winter birds enliven the scene at this season. Woodpeckers and nuthatches search bark crannies for insects and insect eggs. Brilliant cardinals and somber song sparrows are found where seeds and berries abound. Squirrels are out seeking buried treasures in the form of hickory nuts and acorns left from last fall.

Nature is never completely dormant. A superficial glance at a field or valley will give you the impression that it is barren. But closer observation will reveal many forms of life. Patterns of tracks betray the night time activity, and are fun to follow.

Actually, hunting is just an excuse to get outdoors in mid-winter, as it is at other seasons. A fellow would look pretty silly out tramping around in snow drifts in near zero temperatures. But if he has some dogs and a gun along, then he is participating in one of our national pastimes.

SECOND EDEN

In war
Good will is placed Upon a darkened shelf
While vicious dogs of hate patrol the earth.

In peace
The cruelty
Of conflict is condoned
While victor and the vanquished share
The loss.

Yet peace
Shall be but truce
Until men's hearts and minds
Unite to rebuild Eden on The earth.

"Peace in our time." So spoke Neville Chamberlain when he landed at Croyden after his fateful meeting in Munich with "Corporal" Hitler and the man Winston Churchhill called "that black-hearted blaggard," Benito Mussolini.

We know now, by hindsight, that the Fuehrer and Il Duce had the upper hand and could determine war or peace. Now they are gone, but other evil leaders still remain to darken the future.

It says here . . . . . Love is the only enduring foundation for the peace.

Leftovers ... by John McPeek

Fear Knowledge And You Block Truth

Many things disturb me:

Greed, cruelty, stupidity, selfishness, hatred, bigotry, injustice . . . to name a few.

But most reprehensible of all is fear of knowledge. If this great fear — the fear of seeking truth —were to be wiped out, I'm sure most of man's inhumanity to man would end.

McPeek

There are no greater cowards than those who draw back in frightened alarm when they are confronted with views and teachings that appear to disagree with their beliefs and standards.

This is why I hate censorship and all who have the unmitigated gall to set themselves up as "protectors" of their neighbors.

There are many physical things I fear. But I thank the heavens there is not one gram of fear of knowledge within me.

I have stated before that all men should have the right to view what they choose, hear what they choose and read what they choose.

I recently read Henry Miller's "Tropic of Cancer," a novel that for nearly 30 years was banned from publication in America, his native country.

It was banned for its "obscene filth." No one can deny that the book contains much filth — but it is the filth of man, a filth that not even the most blinded amongst us can't deny surrounds us.

Do not misunderstand — I am not writing this in defense of smut. I am against what is ugly in our lives as much as you may be. But how can we find truth if we cannot first recognize and understand evil?

And should any man be censored who writes with such penetration about today's youth, as Henry Miller does in the following:

"... Youth ends where manhood begins, it is said. A phrase without meaning, since from the beginning of history man has never enjoyed the full measure of youth or known the limitless possibilities of adulthood.

"How can one know the splendor and fullness of youth if one's energies are consumed in combating the errors and falsities of parents and ancestors? Is youth to waste its strength unlocking the grip of death? Is youth's only mission on earth to rebel, to destroy, to assassinate? Is youth only to be offered up to sacrifice?

"What of the dreams of youth? Are they always to be regarded as follies? Are they to be populated only with chimeras? . . . Stifle or deform youth's dreams and you destroy the creator. Where there has been no real youth there can be no real manhood.

"If society has come to resemble a collection of deformities, is it not the work of educators and preceptors?

"Today, as yesterday, the youth who would live his own life has no place to turn, no place to live his youth unless, retiring into his chrysalis, he closes all apertures and buries himself alive. The conception of our mother the earth being 'an egg which doth contain all good things in it' has undergone a profound change. The cosmic egg contains an addled yolk. This is the present view of mother earth.

"The psychoanalysts have traced the poison back to the womb, but to what avail? In the light of this profound discovery we are given permission . . . to step from one rotten egg into another. . .

"Why breed new monsters of negation and futility? Let society scotch its own rotten corpse! Let us have a new heaven and a new earth! — that was the sense of Rimbaud's obstinate revolt."

I don't know how the preceeding discourse on the spiritual suicide of modern youth affects you, but frankly, I eagerly will wade through 50 pages of "smut" to read one such illuminating passage.

Budget Meat Suggestions Given for Month

By ESTELLE B. FRANKS

THIS WEEK LOOK FOR:

Fruits — Bananas, apples, grapes, compare citrus prices.

Vegetables — Potatoes, yams, carrots, cabbage, celery, lettuce.

Other Foods — Thrifty meat cuts, large eggs, dairy products.

January is the month that finds housewives struggling even more to meet their weekly food budget. This is normally because they tended to forget their budget during the holidays.

Mrs. Franks

One way of bringing the budget back in line is to consider the more thrifty cuts of meat. There are numerous thrifty cuts that have the same kind of good flavor and nutrition as the more expensive cuts. In beef, there are chuck steaks, brisket, ox joints, stew meat, short ribs, pot roasts and ground beef.

In pork, you'll find that sausage meat, smoked picnics, pork hocks, shoulder steak and roasts and end-cut loin roasts and chops are possible on budget menus. Shoulder roasts from lamb and veal, as well these animals.

as stew meat, are some of the low priced cuts from

Canned meats are a [illegible] Mom because they're easy to prepare and a treat to the family because they're so tasty. All that is needed is a little imagination, a can opener and a supply of versatile meats-in-a-can.

Franks are good any time of year, and so is sauerkraut. The two foods are combined in the promotion "National Kraut and Frankfurter Week" beginning Jan. 24. Watch for your grocer to feature these at that time.

Frosting On The Cake

By

"UNCLE DOC" ROSS — U.S.A.

What this country needs is more cheerleaders and fewer belittlers.

More people are better off right now than any previous generation. Back breaking drudgery is still around for those who refused to go to school and "sharpen up the tools" that old Mother Nature gave them. But what we don't need is a growing army of sadsack crabbers about the entire educational set-up.

People who never taught a term of school in their lives and never went beyond the eighth grade constantly rave about "what ails our schools." Of course there still are defects and blind spots in every school system, but hungry-minded kids are exposed to more stimulation and inspiration than ever before.

Let's take an inventory of other great forces that operate every day in our urban centers to give ambitious youngsters a real start. Junior Achievement is one. High school age students of both sexes have to learn basic economics or their project goes down the drain.

Lions clubs, Kiwanis clubs, Sertoma clubs, and most recently Civitan clubs are each picking honest projects, and men of ability and purpose in life are putting time, brains and money back of such efforts. De Molay for Masonic youngsters and CYO for Catholic counterparts are influencing more teenagers than the general public knows about.

More and more high school coaches are now doing regular classroom teaching as part of their duty. That added contact enables them to sort out the dolts and make every attempt to show these indifferent youngsters what it really means to get all the education possible at a time when our social needs for skill and dedication are so desperately obvious.

What a tragedy it is that so many have only one idea about the whole school business, namely to reach the legal age for "dropping out" of school. Add to this folly the rash of green kid marriages and it becomes no mystery why this land is temporarily morally and spiritually ill.

Teachers and ministers who really love children are well aware that environment and outside social influences are either helpful or destructive, depending on how persistently parents back them up in their guidance efforts.

Conversely, any teacher today whose certificate means nothing more than a license to draw public money, has no moral right to such a license. Any church having a preacher that "the kids don't go for" is missing out dangerously because the only way to produce the new and solid citizens is to get 'em young and raise 'em right.

Cites Civic Apathy

To the Editor:

In the past, meetings of the Whitehall City Council have been well attended and people express their pros and cons but I have noticed a gradual decline in attendance.

Being a civic minded individual, I was concerned, worried and constantly seeking an answer!

I got my answer Tuesday night, Dec. 18.

Council was holding a public hearing on Ordinance 137-62 relative to apartments at Fairway-blvd and E. Main-st.

Mr. George Chamblin, 628 Fairway-blvd, speaking for himself and other property owners on Fairway-blvd, opposed the ordinance.

W. B. McKleskey also spoke in opposition.

Council by a unanimous vote adopted the ordinance, thereby allowing more apartments in Whitehall.

Before adjournment Councilman Ray Shipley commended the councilmen's "refusing to be pressured or blackmailed," as he put it, "by those people east of Hamilton-rd into rejecting the ordinance."

Woe be unto ye who dare oppose the powers that be.

Jesus Is Most Worthy Guide In New Year

The New Year celebrations are mileposts of life. New Year's Day is not different from other days of the calendar year, and yet so much seems to depend upon it.

The prophet had warned Israel, "Sanctify yourselves, for tomorrow the Lord will do wonders among you. You have not passed this way before."

Rev. Daniel

Like the Israelites, let us sanctify ourselves at the beginning of the new year that as we enter a strange land it may become a land of promise, even though it be filled full of uncertainties.

Our New Year's Eve joyousness ought to be checked by the sobering thought that is is serious business upon which we are engaged. We are not prompted by fear, but rather by a sense of uncertainty, together with the magnitude of the consequences any future conduct may involve.

The uncertainties of life loom ahead of us today, but life is not the only uncertainty in this new land of tomorrow. Those who are living prosperously today may become hungry. Those who are enjoying radiant health today may tomorrow find their lives enslaved by pain and suffering. The choice dreams of our hearts may be blasted. The vision we have had of the future may prove to be but a mirage.

But while the new year is full of uncertainties, there are many certainties as well.

There will be "wars and rumors of war." Sin will continue in this new year of our Lord. There will be adultery of the soul and of the body. There will be thievery. There will be murder. And what is more devastating than all these sins, there will be gossip. There will be countless thousands mourning because of man's inhumanity to man.

But now, these things having been said, let this also be said just as seriously and just as thoughtfully. Among the certainties there will be found love, greatest of the abiding virtues. Parents will still love their children, and their hearts will be gladdened when they find that love is returned.

There will be men and women who will love God and goodness during this new year. And, on this we who are Christians may build a firm foundation. The God who loved mankind so much will continue to love us with the same rich love.

Just as there will be many faithless individuals next year, so will there be many who are faithful. As there will be sin, so will there be ideals.

We should first prepare ourselves for the uncertainties of the future. A faith in God is the best possible preparation for the shocks of life. And then, we should strive to pick our way among the many certainties.

The Israelites were very quick to discover that in order to find their way in a new land they needed a good leader. The Ark of the Covenant was their constant guide and became their stronghold in the face of new difficulties.

The purpose of the church in this new year will be to offer to the world the leadership of Jesus through this new and strange land. He is a leader whom experience has taught us to trust in every new experience. He is the one who, facing all of life was able to live it ideally. He came face to face with sin and temptation. He knew disappointment which was greater than the disappointment we shall know. Yet He took His defeated and frustrated existence and turned it into triumphant living. His secret lay in the choices which He made.

It is Jesus whom we proclaim as our guide. It is Jesus whom we offer as a worthy leader. It is Jesus whom we shall trust in this strange land of 1963, through which we have never passed before.

Jan. 20 Is Deadline For Those 'Dog Tags'

The 1963 dog licenses are now on sale according to Fred C. Dunn, Franklin County Auditor. Deadline for purchase is Jan. 20. After that date, a $1 penalty will be charged.

Auditor Dunn emphasized to dog owners the convenience and expediency of using a mail-order application form which appears in this paper to facilitate the purchase of licenses. The application includes complete instructions for mail purchases.

For those who do not procure a form, the following information, together with a stamped, self-addressed envelope is needed: the sex, age, color, breed, whether it is a short or long-haired dog, and the owner's name and address. Fee is $2.

Licenses are also on sale at the Court House License Division (Mound-st side of the Court House basement), Mound and High-sts, as well as at the Humane Society Animal Shelter, 2770 Groveport-pk.

All dogs three months or older on Jan. 1 must be licensed to prevent impounding and their owners being subjected to a subsequent penalty of as much as $25.

The license tag is protection for the dog, since through this registration number the owner of a lost or injured dog may be located quickly.

Money derived from the sale of licenses is allocated, in part, to finance activities of the Humane Society.

The auditor's office is open from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Mondays through Fridays and until noon on Saturdays for the purchases of such licenses.

As we start 1963, let's look backward—then forward.

At Rodenfels Chevrolet, 555 West Broad Street, it's hats off to the past; coats off to the future. 1962 treated us handsomely. Again we were able to keep our position of leadership in Central Ohio. Your valued patronage made it possible for us to sell more new cars and trucks than any other automobile dealer in Central Ohio again last year. So, hats off to you and '62.

As for the future, we plan to continue our healthy growth. A new Truck Service Center is nearing completion and will employ 18 additional mechanics. This will free up space and man power in our present Service Department to handle additional passenger cars with speed and efficiency. Our service men surely will take their coats off for the big year coming up.

If you haven't visited us lately at 555 or 515 West Broad, consider this your invitation to renew old acquaintances early in 1963. If per chance we have yet to meet, let's resolve to do something about it soon.

Gratefully,
R. P. Rodenfels
President

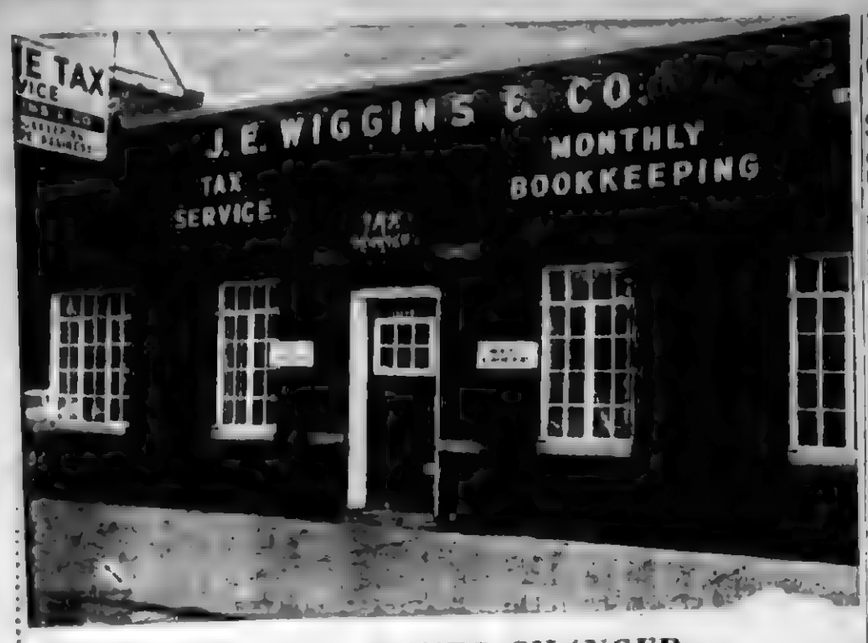
FINISH POLIO FOR GOOD JAN. 6

Franklin County is now protected against Type I and Type II polio. But until Sabin Type III vaccine is distributed on January 6, our community will be wide open to attack by the Type III virus, which causes 44% of all polio cases.



Local medical authorities and the U. S. Surgeon General feel it is most urgent that our community be protected against the Type III virus.

Medical statistics show you are 30 times safer taking the Type III vaccine than not taking it. The vaccine is among the safest of all preventive medicines and the risk it entails is smaller than the risk you take with medicines for the prevention of whooping cough, diphtheria, tetanus, measles, smallpox or rabies.

Another safeguard: Unlike some communities, Franklin County is taking the added safety measure of distributing the vaccine during cold weather.

Health and medical authorities are agreed: with your cooperation, January 6 can be the end of the line for polio in our community; without your cooperation, Franklin County will continue to be threatened by this crippling disease.

OFFICE HOURS CHANGED

J. E. WIGGINS, secretary of J. E. Wiggins and Co., professional tax and bookkeeping firm, has announced the office will remain open from 8:30 a.m. to 7 p.m. from Jan. 1 to May 1. Wiggins said the change was prompted because a busy income tax season is anticipated. He said the office also will open from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. Sundays during the same period. The Wiggins firm, at the same location for 27 years, is a member of the National Association of Tax Accountants.

TB Society To Begin Tuberculosis Testing Program In City Schools

The Tuberculosis Society of Columbus and Franklin County embarks on its tuberculosis testing program in Columbus Public Schools on Jan. 7.

The Society will offer the tests to every first grader in each of the city's 106 elementary schools. The tests have already been given students in most suburban and Franklin County school systems, and 102 positive reactors found.

The test is known as the Mantoux or needle-type skin test and is approved by the Academy of Medicine and local health authorities. It is painless.

During the test, clear fluid called tuberculin is injected between the layers of the skin on the forearm. The area where the test is made is checked 48 hours later to determine reactions.

A positive reaction means the pupil has been in close contact with someone who has contagious tuberculosis and that TB germs have entered his body. All positive reactors and their close contacts are x-rayed to locate contagious tuberculosis.

Approximately one out of every 100 first graders tested is a positive reactor, medical authorities report.

Before any child will be given the test, parents must sign a request form supplied to them by the Tuberculosis Society.

Noises of 85 decibels may cause some loss of hearing but recovery occurs in a month or two. Noises of 100 decibels continued for a few minutes may cause temporary loss of hearing and if continued for over an hour may cause permanent loss of hearing in some ranges. Noises of over 120 decibels cause heating of the skin, blurring of vision probably due to vibrations, and muscular weakness in addition to loss of hearing.

Without such a change from the board, which is unusual when a relatively small area is involved, students of Winchester Park would still attend Madison schools, and tax money would still be turned over directly to the school district.

According to one of the homeowners, residents of the subdivision became interested in annexation after learning the plans of Don Casto, builder, to construct a shopping center at Monk's Corner.

HIGHWAY REPORT

Nearly All Of I-71 To Open By 1964

All but 35.7 miles of Interstate Route 71 in Ohio will be open by the end of 1964, promised Highway Director R. S. Preston this week.

Currently, Preston said, 121.9 miles of the route are open and 87.1 miles are under construction. All projects now under construction are scheduled for completion by the end of 1964, so that 209 miles of I-71 will be open at that time.

The 76-mile link between Cincinnati and Columbus and another 11-mile section north of Medina to Cuyahoga County are included in the I-71 projects now under contract. Construction costs for these projects total $64.5 million.

Preston also pointed out that even before these new lengths of Interstate are opened, they are already yielding large economic benefits.

Contractors estimate that about 25 percent of highway construction costs go directly into payrolls, so Ohio workers will earn more than $16 million during the next two years for work on I-71 alone. This is equivalent to about 2,000 jobs per year.

Interstate Route 71 will connect Louisville and Cleveland, passing through Cincinnati and Columbus and linking with I-74 (connecting Cincinnati and Davenport, Iowa, I-75 connecting St. Petersburg, Fla. and Saulte Ste. Marie, Mich., I-70 (connecting Washington and Baltimore with I-15 in Utah), I-80 linking New York and San Francisco), and I-80 (connecting Boston and Seattle.)

In Ohio, I-71 will stretch 244.7 miles between downtown Cincinnati and downtown Cleveland. It will form part of the Cincinnati - Conneaut Freeway (State Route 1), which includes I-271 (Cleveland Diagonal) and part of I-90.

Reservations are imperative and will be closed at the church's capacity of 200, Wagner emphasized.

Other tentative plans for the program include a color-slide presentation of the various construction phases of the new building. "We're still faced with the challenge of getting the rest of the building equipped," Wagner added. It Takes a Lot to Satisfy
A HEALTHY APPETITE

Anyone that has ever tried to fill the bottomless pits of growing boys will tell you that it is practically an impossibility. Yet we must continue to feed them so that they will continue to grow.

With the right kind of encouragement from parents, these boys will develop a hunger for God's word. Take them to church Sunday where they may study and learn more of God's word.

"Blessed are they which do hunger and thirst after righteousness: for they shall be filled."

EVERYONE IN THE CHURCH — THE CHURCH IN EVERYONE

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

EAGLES CLAW DEVILS

Bulldogs Muzzled; Rams 'Handle' ND

By ART KIENZLE

Being outclassed, South High's roundballers met a 63-40 defeat Friday at Zanesville. The loss dropped the Reb's season record to 3-4, below the .500 mark for the first time this season.

In the Zanesville clash, South's senior center Fred (Ferd the Bird) McGhee was the only man to hit in double figures. He led the team in both field goal and free throw shooting, with three and six respectively, for a total output of 12 points.

Second high man for the Blue and Gray was Tommy Hayes with six points.

Tomorrow's schedule sees the Bulldogs traveling to Lima for a non-league bout with Lima Senior. Next (Jan. 8), they are at West for the first City League game of the new year.

ST. MARYS went a long way for a weekend cage win—all the way to Portsmouth, in fact. But the Rams came home with a 45-39 verdict over Notre Dame.

The Portsmouth quintet would have enjoyed the Ram visit more if center George Maurer would have missed the bus as the St. Mary pivot man dropped in a total of 32 points to almost singlehandedly outscore the entire Notre Dame team.

The Rams held at 11-point halftim e margin but Notre Dame pulled closer after intermission to keep the issue in doubt until the closing moments of play.

UNDEFEATED WATTERSON added Marion-Franklin to its growing list of cage victims with a 71-49 score.

Little Tim Pond, shortest of the Eagle starters, was a big man in the point department as he led all scorers with 29 markers.

Steve and John Jackson again provided the Red Devils with their offensive impetus with the former scoring 17 points and the latter contributing 12 more.

ELSEWHERE AROUND the area, Aquinas became Dennison St. Mary's sixth straight cage scalp as the Terriers dropped a 65-53 decision.

St. Marys garnered 23 of their points at the foul line which made the difference. Pat Mental led Aquinas scoring with 19 points with Mike Welling chipping in with 12 other markers.

WEKEND CAGE activity sees all area quintets in action. South (3-4) travels to Lima for a Saturday night game while Marion-Franklin (2-6) entertains East (6-0) Friday night for City league competition.

Other Friday games send Aquinas (4-2) to Eastmoor (2-3), Canal Winchester (6-2) to St. Marys (4-2) and Dublin (3-3) to Rosary (2-3), played at the Catholic Center (K of C).

Besides South's Saturday date, St. Marys journeys to Academy (1-6). Rosary travels to Canal Winchester and Aquinas entertains Watterson (6-0).

Amateur Wrestling Gaining Fan Appeal

There is always a definite progression in a sport as it moves from an amateur to a professional level but there is probably no greater diversity exhibited than in the scope of wrestling—professional vs amateur.

Sports fans who include the pro grapplers in their long line of athletic interests might be taken back a step or two if they stopped in to catch the act of matmen on the collegiate or high school level.

FOR WHAT THEY would see would bear little resemblance to the "act" or "show" performed by the "groan for pay" boys.

In fact, the many-feathered villain or the curly-haired champion of fair play, wrapped in the silk cape, would feel a bit out of place in the arena with the crew-cut high school wrestler equipped with no more than his own physical strength and the fundamentals of the sport taught meticulously by his coach.

All sports fall into one of two classes — team or individual. Wrestling, although scored on a team basis, is broken down into a number of individual contests.

AS ONE SCHOOLBOY grappler put it, "when you get out there in the center of that mat with your opponent, you know it's up to you. Nobody else can help you out."

Amateur wrestling employs many of the same basic holds that you might see in the professional ring but if you're coming out to watch a long series of bouncing acrobatics and painstaking facial expressions — forget it.

We had a little visit with Don Woodland, head wrestling coach at Franklin Heights High School and his Falcon matmen, last week.

DON NOT ONLY explained what the sport is all about on an amateur level but provided some graphic sidelights as he put his wrestlers through their paces to demonstrate the technicalities of the sport.

Woodland, who recently traveled to the nation's capital as a representative for the Ohio Wrestling Coaches Association, pointed out that high school wrestling is the fastest growing spectator and participation sport in all of the 50 states.

Just to give you a few statistics on the subject on a local level, only 12 high schools in the Central District participated in the sport five years ago.

TODAY, NEARLY 40 of the 44 schools in the district have embraced wrestling as part of their athletic program, according to Woodland.

The popularity of wrestling is underlined even more when you consider that only 13 boys turned out for the Falcon wrestling program five years ago as compared with 89 candidates this season.

"Of course, nothing succeeds like success," Woodland said, pointing out that Franklin Heights has accumulated a fine 61-21-1 record in the five-year span.

WHAT ATTRIBUTES must a boy possess to be a good wrestler? "Most important," Woodland declares, "is attitude and dedication to the sport. Also vital is above normal strength and endurance."

The attitude and dedication are things that must always be "the unknown quality." They can be nurtured but cannot be taught.

The strength and endurance part is more tangible. Before practice at Franklin Heights, for example, each wrestler must run four miles, complete 200 situps and finish up his "warmup" with 50 pushups. Agility and coordination are other factors.

WRESTLING COMPETITION on the individual basis is set up in several maximum weight classes (103 pounds, 112 pounds, etc.). Since young men, especially of high school age, are prone to growth and consequently weight increase, a two-pound advance is allowed each grappler after Jan. 1, one more pound as of Feb. 1 and an additional pound in the second day of the tournament.

"This is where the dedication part comes in," Woodland said. "If these boys want to wrestle badly enough, they know they have to cut short the pizzas and Pepsis. It's good training."

The wrestling match begins with a hand shake between combatants and the referee's whistle which starts the clock and initiates the match in the center of the mat.

Matches last through three two-minute periods unless, of course, there is a "fall." A fall occurs when a wrestler's shoulders are held in contact with the mat for a period of two seconds.

If no fall is accomplished within the time limit, the decision is awarded to the wrestler who has scored the most points during the bout.

Points (on an individual basis) are scored thusly: the takedown — when one of the combatants is taken to the floor from his starting position by his opponent. Two points awarded for first takedown, one for each takedown thereafter.

THE "REVERSAL" — when the position of advantage is reversed. Two points awarded. The "escape"—when one wrestler breaks away. One point awarded. The "predicament" — when one shoulder is on the mat and the other is at a 45 degree angle. Two points award. The "near fall"—when wrestler is in a pinning position and a fall is imminent. Three points awarded.

As far as team scoring is figured, three points are awarded for a decision, two points for a draw (only in duel meets), five points for a forfeit and five points for a fall pin.

Incidently, the winner's arm is not raised in victory until the two opponents shake hands to officially finish the match.

ONE MORE POINT in regard to the weight classifications: There's no limit to the heavyweight's weight but the minimum is 185 pounds.

That's about the story on wrestling on the amateur level. Oh! one more thing. Who attends wrestling matches? Just about everybody, but Woodland claims in his situation about 60 to 70 per cent of spectators are of the gentler sex with mom taking "most avid fan" honors.

Amateur wrestling is on the way up in the sports world. Baseball had to step aside for football and football is beginning to feel the pressure of increased interest in basketball. Could be one of these days wrestling might put a deadlock "full nelson" on that indefinable pastime called S-P-O-R-T.

BITS OF WIT(T) — The Harlem Ambassadors, starring Leon Hilliard, have a booking opening in this area for Jan. 22. The Ambassadors who appeared at the World's Fair this year, will play any type of local team in any gym that seats 800 or more.

Sixty per cent of the gate goes to the Ambassadors with the remaining 40 per cent going to the game's sponsors. Any interested club or group should contact Hymie Ford, 407 W. Morrell-st, Jackson, Mich.

BETTY BOWLED 'EM OVER

HEART FUND Bowling Tournament Chairman Earl Flora presents Mrs. Jesse (Betty) Scott of 188 S. Westgate-av, the trophy awarded to the tourney's top woman bowler. Mrs. Scott, who also received a cash prize, toppled all other gal contestants with a score of 173.

Hilltop Woman Tourney Winner

The Sixth Annual Heart Fund Bowling Tournament realized a total of $11,608.70 for the Franklin County Heart Council, tourney chairman Earl Flora announced last week.

Of the total amount contributed, $8,192.24 has been set aside for research purposes in the fight against cardiovascular diseases.

TOP WINNERS IN the the county in the men's and women's divisions were Norman E. Rohr 1177 Northridge-rd (Olentangy Center) and Mrs. Jesse (Betty) Scott, 188 S. Westgate-av. (Three-C Lanes).

Rohr finished with a score of 188 and Mrs. Scott, 173. Scores were figured on the basis of pins downed above the bowler's league average.

Both were awarded mounted gold trophies donated by the Southern Bowling and Billiard Supply Co. and cash prizes, which also were presented to top winners at all the lanes.

THE TOURNAMENT, held Nov. 11-17, carried a one dollar entry fee with 70 per cent of the proceeds going to research and the other 30 per cent used as prize money.

The total figure of $8,192.24 for research includes the $220.50 donated by the Columbus Savings and Loan Assn. at 50 cents per pin for the 441 pins spilled in the TV Bowlathon on the eve of the tournament.

Are You A Master Or Janitor At Home

How long has it been since the man in your house had to take time out from bridge, a whodunit or a snooze to shake down the furnace clinkers or bank the fire in a damp basement?

Or maybe you're the one who had to haul a ton of wet wash out to the line, swab the grease out of the oven, or take out the garbage?

Ah, those were the good old days! All you needed was plenty of fortitude when the wash came back frozen solid or smudged by soot and you had to hang it in the cellar to thaw. And it was a real delight when washing a heap of dishes, pots and pans used up your hot water supply so you couldn't ease your tired back into a hot tub.

Nostalgia or not, few people want to see those days return —and very few have to, what with modern appliances taking over most of the household's janitoring jobs.

Take that business about the clinkers, for example. The Gas Appliance Manufacturers Association points out that in a 1962 home equipped with one of those streamlined gas boilers or furnaces that take up only about two and one-half square feet of floor space in the basement or utility room, nobody thinks about ash cans, stokers, fuel bins and scuttles any more.

What's more, says GAM, that little gimmick on the wall, the thermostat, keeps tabs on the temperature and clicks the heat or the gas air conditioning on or off as needed.

Wet wash? That's old hat now. Today they have gas dryers and washers that work as a team to take care of the heaviest wash and treat the most delicate fabrics without harsh soaps and eyesore washlines.

And, speaking of things of the past, nobody with a modern gas range crawls into a stove any more to do the inevitable cleaning job. Nowadays, the gas range oven parts, the burners, in some cases even the range top, can be taken to the sink and washed like a dish. No stooping, scrubbing or scraping. And there are top burner heat controls and new oven temperature controls that take care of meal preparation without constant vigilance.

In millions of homes, people no longer have to put off showers and shampoos for lack of hot water while the washing machine and dishwater are being used. A modern automatic gas storage water heater — alloy or glass-lined to prevent rust and corrosion—has such a high heat-recovery rate that, if the right-size heater is put into the house in the first place, hot-water supply is endless no matter how many water-consuming appliances are working at the same time.

Now, says GAMA, there's a new development that disposes of the last disagreeable household chore. It's the smokeless-odorless gas disposer. This appliance will take two or three bushels of the wettest, nastiest garbage you ever handled and quickly reduce it to a handful of ash without a trace of smoke or smell. A double-burner principle of combustion eliminates the smoke in this form of incineration.

The way things have been going in the gas appliance industry lately, GAMA observes, a guy has a chance to be master of his house, instead of just the janitor.

Big Brothers Is Truly An Unique Organization

Since the week of Jan. 6-13 is "Big Brother Week," it seems timely to mention the work done by this unique organization.

The group is unique in that it is the only one that is conducted on an individual basis —man to boy.

Because of this personal touch, it is considered one of the most effective programs in the field of social welfare. The fundamental purpose of a Big Brother is to give the boy with social and emotional problems the individual guidance of a man who can direct him toward sound character development.

The volunteers are able to call upon guidance from professional staff workers for assistance when needed.

"Big Brother Week" is held to recruit more volunteers to assist in this work, as there are always more boys on the waiting list than there are Big Brothers.

The office at 137 E. State-st, will gladly supply full details to any interested man about the work that is being done locally. The phone number is CA. 8-5696.

Chairman of the Big Brother Week Committee is Jerome Gross. An honorary life member of the group is Nelson Hennis, a well-known South Sider.

The Mothers of Twins Club will hold its postponed Christmas party Wednesday, Jan. 9, at 7:30 p.m. in the Main Federal Bank at the Central Point Shopping Center. The postponement was made necessary by the one-day water failure last month.

The Cook's Tour, sponsored by the YWCA, will feature Greek cooking, at its Tuesday, Jan. 8, presentation. Mrs. Tass Sicaros will be the demonstrator. Registration may be made by calling the YWCA, 65 S. Fourth-st.

Corpus Christi Church will be the setting of the Jan. 5 wedding of Donna Kay Jordan, 1277 E. Gates-st, and Lawrence Minnear, 498 E. Hanford-st.

Trudeau Guild 25 will meet at 8 p.m., Wednesday, Jan. 9. Mrs. Thomas Cahill, 1526 Fairwood-av, will be the hostess.

Trustees and officers of the Orient School PVA will meet Sunday, Jan. 6, at 1:30 p.m. in the school bandroom. The regular membership will have a 2 p.m. meeting, following the officers board meeting.

Two classes of the Southwood Church of Christ recently elected officers for the new year.

Officers of the Fidelus Class are Ethel Spiker, president; Gene Wiley, vice-president; Margaret Coffman, secretary (assisted by Nell Hetenhouse) and Margaret Spiker, treasurer (assisted by Leonard Farnsworth).

New officers of the Loyal Men and Women's Class are Frances Colegrove, president; Ruth Smith, vice-president; Lona Schwartz, secretary (assisted by Nancy Hyseli) and Geraldine Daughman, treasurer (assisted by Edna Siebert).

Lt. Ed and Priscilla Day divided their holiday time between Columbus and Fredericktown, visiting relatives and friends. Ed, an OSU grad, is stationed in Virginia during his term of Army service as "Per" is using her teaching abilities in Springfield, Va. She was on the Marion-Franklin faculty last year, teaching music.

Holiday memories are still fresh and strong for these children who celebrate a birthday before the week is over:

Dexter Blake, James Bryant, Robert Goeller, Gene Wiley, Cheryl Christy, Melody Robinson, Sara Woods, Frances Oberkonz, Carrie Cooper, Jimmie Farris, Michael Hunter, Michael Music, Peggy Sailor, Tahlea Speakman, Brenda Workman, Richard Gaulke, Donny Plank, Lila Lee Claffey, Karen Waidner, Katharine Naegele, Bob Lyle, SuEllen Cahill, James Burchett.

The teenage birthday list includes Diana Humes, Michael May.

Adult birthdays are these: Eleanor Mays, Mrs. Dale Davy, Winston Ashburn, Betty Poezik, James Colegrove, Jim Hott, Josephine Poeschal, John May, Sylvia Stiebritz, Marge Hoptry, Pauline Fleckner, Jim Key, Vivian Smith, Susan Moon, and Gadabout Priscilla Lenox.

A Saturday game, on Jan. 5, will be played by the South High basketball team. The opponents for the Bulldogs will be Lima.

A Christmas Day wedding anniversary was the 50th one for Mr. and Mrs. James Hulse, 488 Carpenter-st. The special event was observed Sunday, Dec. 23, with an open house in the home of a daughter, Mrs. Clarence Peake, 2518 Spaatz-av. Other children are Mrs. Melvin Crist, Shirley, Hobert, Doyle and James Jr. There are also 18 grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

Sympathy is extended to the families of Elizabeth Sabo, Frank Woods and Harold Martin, in their time of sorrow.

News of former residents, gleaned from the holiday greeting cards:

The George McGrew family, formerly of S. Fifth-st, are now residents of Mansfield, O. The Harian Grissom family, long-time residents of Basswood-rd, who moved to St. Louis, Mo., for a year or so, are now back in Ohio, in neighboring Grove City.

Long gone from the local scene, but still in the memories of their South High School friends are Jean Hartman, Imogene Brown and Hugh Morrison. Jean, who was called Bonnie McDonald in her school years, reports from her Washington, D. C., home that her daughter Sandy is a junior in Purdue University, where her son Don, will enter next year.

Hugh, a superintendent of schools in Northwestern Ohio, enjoyed playing the Santa role for his two sons, Jimmy, four, and Bobby, two and one-half, in his Toledo home. The once-a-year epistle from Imogene (Wilson) Brown reports that she and her family have moved in the last year to the "fox and hound" country of Michigan, on an 180-acre estate complete with woods, hills, meadows, two lakes, fish, foxes, rabbits, deer and snowdrifts. Her daughter, Sandy, is a math major in Albion, (Michigan's "Ohio Wesleyan University").

Since Sandy is in school, and her husband, Art, works in town, Imogene is the caretaker of three dogs, two cats, and any other livestock that Sandy brings home. She says the country is so beautiful that she doesn't mind the hours of solitude.

Don Dicke, of Cleveland, and his sister, Priscilla Dicke, of Cincinnati, were Columbus visitors for Christmas in their homeplace at 1411 S. Sixth-st.

Vs. Progress

This week our newspapers are talking about progress—a whole 12 page section of it.

Now, we're all for progress—we just won't get anywhere without it. But, in our lazy-like way, we have these reflections:

No one has developed a substitute for a good old rocking chair.

When you sit down to the table there is no improvement in menus over old fashioned fried chicken, corn on the cob and plenty of juicy sliced red ripe tomatoes.

Of course we won't convince modern educators but we still think Mr. McGuffey really had something in his readers.

All the modern lipsticks, face creams, eye paint and hair tints still haven't produced a gal that exceeds in beauty that sun ripened lass who recognizes her God-given outward appearance is more to be loved than the artificials.

Today you may have more of them, but perhaps you are no better off than when your

Smut Movies Dirtying Theater Screens Here

A Hartley Headliner Report

By JOHN AUBLE, JR.

Smut merchants peddling miles and miles of filthy film to local theaters have got to be stopped—even if it takes an act of Congress to do it. That's the consensus of many of our socially-conscious citizens—and after seeing some of the films myself, I agree.

The nature and extent of these movies are adequate to pervert every youngster in this country, and Columbus is surely getting its Baker-dozen share.

These films have been termed by one reputable theater owner as movies that weren't "released . . . they escaped!" They depict carnal orgies, all-the-way nudity and employ every sex smybol in the book.

Most of the films (one may be showing right down the street from you now) are shot with a 16mm movie camera in motel rooms — usually on the West Coast. Generally, there is no sound track.

The technical quality of them is comparable to scrawlings on a washroom wall and any acting ability displayed by the leading characters is purely accidental.

Local law and civic leaders are, at this moment, striving to clamp down on the recent barrage of filthy movies but the statutes on the law books governing obscenity are nearly as skimpy as the costumes worn by these nude actresses which said law is supposed to prohibit.

Daily newspapers are running "border-line - obscenity" in their theater pages to advertise the films. This brings some of the picture's contact right into the living room regardless of the fact that the advertising, in some cases, speaks louder that the film itself.

Opponents of these films are divided into three groups. (1) Lt. George Watts and the Columbus vice-squad, (2) Bernard Chupka, this city's prosecuting attorney, and (3) Victor Bowman, newly-elected chairman of the Columbus Movie Review Board which meets monthly.

They, and their departmental workers, are devoting many hours to fight this commercialized obscenity. Their primary target is the youth of this city.

A U. S. Senate subcommittee, describing obscene movies as "nauseating and depraved," compared them with narcotics. They claim it has the effect of "hooking" steady customers.

The Citizens for Decent Literature, Inc. group of Cleveland reported that "once such an appetite is aroused, especially in the young, it demands more stimulating and exciting fare. Like dope addiction, smut has stages — the borderline, the obscene and pornographic and, finally, the depraved.

FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover has termed pornography as " . . . a major cause of sex violence . . . creating criminals faster than we can build jails to house them."

Columbus people want positive action immediately.

Robert Duncan, assistant prosecuting attorney, suggested last week that some legislation be introduced into the Ohio General Assembly in January to strengthen and "clarify" the obscenity laws.

Such action was tried in the 101st and 102nd assemblies, and legislators felt they had defined obscenity satisfactory, but it died in the Senate education committee headed by Senator C. A. Mosher.

Some possible solutions are in the works right now. Most practical of these perhaps, is a composition of ideas from Chupka and from Safety Director Al Giles.

Chupka proposed last Thursday, during a regular meting of the Movie Review Board, that all films coming into Columbus be "licensed." The prosecutor pointed out that a license couldn't be denied to certain films because of content since this entered into the realm of squelching certain freedoms of expression.

Giles Offers Suggestions

Giles brough up this theory that certain restrictions could be made of a film, however (not entirely on content), that would cause the refusal of a license.

As Giles sees it, a license could be refused a film if it didn't lead in with certain expected items as the name of the producer, the name of the film studio, a list of characters and other such items

Progress Is Theme Today

Don't miss the special 12-page Progress Report in this week's edition. Crammed full of articles by local experts in the field of religion, education, business and government, the report gives a composite evaluation of area progress in 1962.

Dems Lead In Numbers For Council

Candidates for muncipal offices are coming in all shapes and sizes—but, mostly Democratic—as the Feb. 6 filing date for hopefuls draws near.

Voters will have the final say at the May primary.

In the mayor race, incumbent Mayor W. Ralston Westlake has indicated that he'll be willing to be a Republican candidate for a second term.

He is expected to face former Columbus Mayor M. E. (Jack) Sensenbrenner, a Democratic candidate who served two years of an unexpired term as mayor and was re-elected to a full term from 1956 to 1960.

A spokesman for the Franklin County Republican Headquarters stated that Chairman William Schneider "had been interviewing some possible candidates" but indicated that no decision would be made until a meeting set for the end of January. No endorsements have been made by the Republicans as yet.

Jerry Ryan, recently-elected chairman of the Franklin County Democratic organization, announced the names of several Demo hopefuls for municipal posts, including that of Dr. Frederick Rose, 174 Crosswell-dr, for a judge post.

Democratic council candidates have been reported hot and heavy. At last count, ten names were on the slate and four of them listed as definite candidates.

The four include South Sider William P. Hoermle, Sr. the lone council Democrat. He plans a program including more annexation, urban renewal and a better safety program.

Hoermle said he was opposed to a possible water rate increase. He said water projects should be paid for from city income tax.

Also a sure candidate is Ronald Tuggle, 4689 Dundee-av, an official of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, who will propose an anti-strike breaking law.

Tuggle is a Linden-McKin-

★ SHADES OF 1959 RACE . . . ? ★

Mayoralty Hopefuls List Thoughts On Re-Election . . . Platform Plans

Four years have elapsed, but when Columbus voters trek to the polls for the primary election May 7, they'll probably be reminded of a similar situation in 1959, That's, at least, how it looks now.

This "flashback" to the past stems from the fact that the two political candidates who opposed each other in that year for the office of mayor are throwing those well-known hats in the ring again.

Although the deadline for filing is Feb. 6, Columbus Mayor W. Ralston Westlake and former city father M. E. Jack) Sensenbrenner have both shown that they definitely are ready to race again.

Voters should have it tougher deciding this year than in 1959, however, since both Republican Westlake and Democrat Sensenbrenner have tempting platform promises for the people of this city.

A questionnaire prepared by the Hartley Newspapers editorial staff and designed to bring to the front some of the most important things in the minds of Columbus voters has been answered by both men and is reprinted herewith:

WESTLAKE

Q. — Are you going to be a candidate for mayor of Columbus this year?

WESTLAKE—Some of my friends already are circulating nominating petitions and my name will be submitted to the Franklin County Republican committee at their next meeting.

SENSENBRENNER — Absolutely.

Q. — Why do you feel you should be elected mayor?

WESTLAKE — I feel that my record during my first term in the office is one of the best reasons why I should be given another term. The people of Columbus must have felt that I was the best qualified of all candidates when they elected me to my first term. With four years of experience in the post, I am even better qualified now to more ably serve the people during a second term.

SENSENBRENNER — I am deeply concerned with the future of our city and I want to resume the speedy pace of progress that characterized my six years of administration. Under my administration our city earned the All-America City award. This was the result of hard work and citizens working together for progress.

Q. — What platform will you campaign on?

WESTLAKE—On the salient features of my present administration: Integrity in city government, a sound fiscal policy that has kept the city in the black; substantial progress in the city's current multi-million-dollar public works construction program and imaginative, yet practical, plans for its future development as one of the most liveable cities in America. As the result of my action, the old Scioto Conservancy District was dissolved and the new, more streamlined program district was born, aided by a million-dollar loan from the city. I'll continue to push this type of program in this city.

SENSENBRENNER — We must concentrate on improvement of the whole downtown district which is so vital to all other sections of our city. Many additions are needed to enhance the services in the heart of the city such as better mass transportation and parking.

Q. — What can you claim as the outstanding factor of progress for Columbus under your administration?

SENSENBRENNER

WESTLAKE—A dedicated group of executives and employes who have the best interest of the city at heart.

SENSENBRENNER — Our policy on annextion. We grew more area-wise in the six-year Sensenbrenner administration than in the first 140 years in the life of Columbus. This brought our city to the attention of the entire nation and provided the potential of Columbus' become the greatest city in the Mid-West. Other factors of nearly equal importance include the fact that we were the first city in the nation to have a master control plan of traffic using Civil Defense funds; slum elimination which started with my administration; elimination of the Fifth-av and Hudson-st railway crossing; two, fine Senior Citizens Center (now

LARRY LEADER REPORTS THAT:

SOUTH SIDERS can surely follow "the yellow brick road" along Thurman-av, but it takes a wizard to understand why. The city evidently felt that leaving a foot or two of the original brick road showing when paving Thurman-av sometime ago would be chic. The bricks are deteriorating now, though (as this picture at Thurman-av and Ann-st shows), and could prove dangerous to bike riders or, especially, pedestrians crossing the street at these points. The same situation prevails at most intersections along Thurman and has been spotted on other South Side thoroughfares.

First Winter Show At South Saturday

South High's first winter concert will be staged by the school's combined band and orchestra Saturday, Jan. 12, at 8 p.m. under the direction of instructor Howard Cozart.

The theme, "Best of Broadway," includes musical selections from such hit shows as "Guys and Dolls," "Carnival" and "Flower Drum Song."

Herb Klopfer, band president, will be featured baritone horn soloist with "I've Got Plenty of Nothing" from "Porgy and Bess." Micky Simmons will solo with "If I Love You" with violin accompaniment by Jim Westlake.

The newlyformed wind ensemble will play selections from "West Side Story" and the band and orchestra will end with selections from "Bye-Bye, Birdie."

SOUTH HIGH instrumental music instructor Howard Cosart is shown looking over the score for the school's first winter concert entitled "The Best of Broadway." With him are South's orchestra president, Harriett Chapdelaine, and the school's band president, Herb Klopfer. The show is dated Saturday, Jan. 12.

New Sewer Closes Williams Till March

Williams-rd was closed Monday morning and will remain closed until Mar. 1 from High-st to Parsons-av.

This became necessary when the 48-inch sewer from the Scioto River was tunneled under High-st after 65 working days.

James Writesell, city inspector attached to the job, states that he hopes traffic can be maintained from 4:30 p.m. to 7:30 a.m. However if the street buckles, it may be closed 24 hours a day.

The $365,000 contract is held by the Kahill Company of Cleveland.

Felix Raufman, superintendent, explained that the subtrunk will turn north at Parsons and run to Hilock. He expressed the hope that he'd be finished and home by Easter, which is 15 weeks away.

The contract allows 200

Local Folks Please Sabin Men Sunday

Call it good public relations or, maybe, civic pride by responsible citizens, but the backers of Sabin Type III polio vaccine call it "wonderful."

There's little doubt in the minds of medical men, who chewed fingernails until last Sunday in the fear that the Sabin would be ignored, that the final program was a success.

Official count shows 492,

ARCHITECT'S CONCEPTION of the chapel of the Lutheran Senior City which is under construction at 977 Parkview-av shows the contemporary motif employed. The city has been in planning by the Lutheran Welfare League of Columbus.

Lutheran Senior City To Serve 25 Counties

Lutheran Senior City's modern architecture one-floor dwelling will provide accommodations for 285 persons of age 62 and older. Construction of Lutheran Senior City is now under way on spacious grounds located at 977 Parkview-av with entrance off Johnstown-rd.

It will serve the needs of senior citizens in a 25-county area of Central Ohio. Facilities will be for couples, as well as single persons.

The structure will consist of a number of individual neighborhoods or living quarters built around outside courts and all connected with covered hallways leading to a central dining, recreation and service area.

A chaplain will serve the spiritual needs of the residents desiring such, providing the full services of a pastor in respect to domestic, family and spiritual needs.

Those residents of other faiths desiring to avail themselves of other church and ministerial services in the community will have opportunities to do so.

Lutheran Senior City is the outgrowth of five years of planning by The Lutheran Welfare League of Columbus.

Actively furthering the big dream of a haven for the older generation have been C. T. Hathaway, Revs. Bradow, Rismiller, and Kibler, assisted by the office manager of The Lutheran Welfare League, Miss F. Bell.

Residents of Lutheran Senior City will have freedom to come and go as they like, compatible with their capabilities.

FAME (

Just a few facts and ideas picked up here and there—

Samuel Finley Breese Morse invented the magnetic telegraph and devised the Morse code. But he was also a painter and could have been famous for his oils.

Eli Whitney is known as the inventor of the cotton gin that revolutionized agriculture in the South. But he also devised interchangeable parts for U.S. Army rifles just before the Civil War.

Michelangelo, one of the two greatest intellectual and artistic giants of the Renaissance, is famous for his sculpture and Sistine Chapel paintings. He was also a poet of major stature.

Thomas Jefferson is remembered as author of the Declaration of Independence and as President. He was also a prolific letter writer and a competent architect and a fine violinist. He designed his own home and named it Monticello.

Two other men, Prescott and Dawes, rode with Paul Revere, but didn't have a Longfellow to write about them. Revere got the kudos.

Joshua Stoddard of Worcester, Mass., was a beekeeper to the end of his 88 years. But he invented many things, among them the American steam piano, better known as the calliope, whose sweet, nostalgic notes echoed for many a year among the hills of the Ohio River Valley. If you don't know about it, ask Grandpa.

It says here . . .

Fame is a feeble, flickering, fickle, fleeting flame.

"Any Letters Today?"

Noble Plan Helps Boys

There's only one sad thing about Christmas and the spirit of giving.

All too often we pack away our natural inclination to help others along with the tinsel and holly when the last strains of holiday carols are no more than pleasant memories.

The Big Brother Association does not ask for an assist from your hip pocket but only for the warmth of your heart.

The local facet of the national organiaztion will observe its annual Big Brother Week, Jan. 6 to 13. There are 300 boys here in the Columbus area who need Big Brothers.

These are average, boy-next-door type youngsters who have been denied a very important part of their youth—the love, guidance and understanding of a father.

Many of these boys have never known the pat on the back for a job well done or that warming smile of pride that can only be exchanged between man and boy.

Last year, 415 Big Brothers served 627 Columbus area boys. In addition, 1,125 youngsters attended the association's summer camp, Camp Oty'Okwa, in the Hocking Hills.

The association sponsors a year-round schedule of activities (corn roasts, ball games, skating parties, etc.), so Big and Little Brothers can become better acquainted.

Big Brothers work with and under the supervision of a staff of well trained social workers. The Big Brother is a friend to a fatherless boy.

He does not support the boy financially but is asked to give something much more prized by his Little Brother — the interest and time of an adult male friend.

This year the association will select an "honorary Big Brother" for the first time in its 30-year history. The selection will be announced at a Jan. 9 banquet at the Fairgrounds Youth Center.

The Big Brother Association realizes that many men would like to be active members of the organization but are unable to find the time because of business and family responsibilities. There is a way they can help, too.

The Big Brothers also need 1,200 associate members who do not have Little Brothers but who are able to help keep the organization on a strong financial foundation.

Men interested in becoming affiliated should contact W. E. Richardson, executive secretary, at the association's office at 137 E. State-st, or call CA. 8-5696.

Somewhere close to you, maybe right in your neighborhood, there is a boy who needs a Big Brother to help him along that increasingly rugged path to maturity. Won't you give him a hand?

You will find that special "Christmas feeling" isn't just reserved for Dec. 25, but can remain in your heart 365 days of the year.

Who touches a boy, by the master's plan,
Is shaping the course of the future man.
Father or laborer or teacher or priest;
Friend or stranger or saint or beast,
Is dealing with one who is living seed,
And may be MAN whom the world shall need.

Now Is Time To Test Ice Fishing Skills

INSIDE ON THE Outdoors By ROD COCHRAN

The Central Ohio ice fishing season has been off and running for two weeks or more, according to Robert Strohm, 1530 Haft-dr, Reynoldsburg. The Ohio Division of Wildlife also has been reporting good ice fishing conditions in this area. Strohm collected 22 nice bluegills in a short time last weekend.

Strohm's favorite locations are farm ponds where the bluegills grow fat and sassy. Best fishing of the ice season is right now — success tapers off through January and February generally. As soon as the ice is safe is the best time to go, and the season began early this year.

"Who wants to fish on a block of ice?" I asked Strohm. "The same people who are avid fishermen in the spring and summer," was his answer. "Plus a few whose only angling activity is at this time of year." When the word is out that fish are hitting, the anglers will be out too.

If Strohm has an ice fishing secret, it's the use of a very light line — one, two or three-pound test monofiliament. "You are not fishing for any world records, and the strain put on your tackle is light," he claims.

The rest of the rig is geared to the line — small hook, no sinker or perhaps a very light one, a thimble-sized bobber, and a delicate wand-like rod. Good ice fishing baits are meal worms and mousies (insect larva sold at bait stores), although some fishermen are skilled enough to take fish through the ice on artificials. Most of us, however, rely on live bait, and up on Lake Erie and Sandusky Bay minnows and shiners are most popular.

There is good reason for the light tackle. Fish are tentative feeders at this season, and "bites" are not easily detected. With big equipment you might never get the feel of a bluegill nibbling at your bait. Also, they fear to scare readily and crude tackle can send them away.

As in all other kinds of fishing, you must locate the fish. Experienced anglers chop a lot of holes in the ice until they find a feeding school. Many will not fish a hole more than 10 or 15 minutes before moving on if there is no action. Around brush piles and treetops are good places to fish for bluegills — apparently they are the rabbits of the underwater world. Once a good location is found it will often produce on succeeding days. Also, ice fishermen crowd around a "hot spot" and the disturbance does not seem to bother the fish.

Your bait should be placed near the bottom, perhaps two to six inches above the bottom. To entice fish to feed in ice water you must make your bait attractive, and this is accomplished by motion. "Keep your bait moving," is the advice of Robert Strohm. "A lot of ice fishermen are unsuccessful because they put their bait in the water and leave it there while they concentrate on keeping warm. This is not the way to catch fish."

There are various theories as to why ice fishing success tapers off during the season. One idea is that water where the fish stay is warmest just after the surface freezes. But water temperatures do not vary much on the bottom — although a slight change may make the difference.

Another belief is that oxygen in the water declines while the ice is on. Underwater plants will manufacture oxygen if sunlight gets through, but snow cover may prevent this.

In any case, ice fishing will never be better than it is right now.

ONE MAN'S Opinion . . .

We Ask You . . 'Who Needs Winter?'

Winter is lousy. When you get too old to sled and too stiff to ski, what is left? And where is the man who can get up in the morning and shave with a song in his heart while it's still dark outside?

Beardshear

Half the time the snow turns to slush and the other half it just lies there and gets dirty.

No wonder birds go south. Your car won't start because the battery dies, road salt eats up the paint job you put on last spring, and your local filling station didn't prevent fuel-line freeze-up.

You stand on the corner waiting for a bus until you're sure you're an icicle and when it finally comes, you get on only to discover that you forgot your wallet.

The kids all have runny noses and the wife won't take out the garbage because she's afraid she'll slip on the ice.

And keeping track of two galoshes, gloves, one muffler, a sweater and a top-coat at every coffee stop is enough to tax the mentality of an Einstein.

Winter is the pause between autumn and spring, two of the more sensible seasons. And summer, ah summer, with green grass and sunshine, is the queen of them all.

But winter does have its compensations. You can pay the Christmas bills, calculate your income tax, break your New Year's resolutions early, rearrange the furniture, take up the plumbing, clean the linoleum, lay rugs and walk around the house.

And walking is such a fine exercise.—Ted Beardshear.

Articles Please

To the Editor:

It was with much interest and pleasure that I began reading Mr. John McPeek's articles.

His article "Fear Knowledge and You Block Truth" is fundamentally great. Why do some people want to set themselves up as keepers of their brother's morals? No Christian would.

Brother Daniel's article on the same editorial page (January 3) points up the Christian view of life.

Jesus would never have used force. People must be good because they understand how and why or it fails its purpose.

Frosting On The Cake

By "UNCLE DOC" ROSS — U.S.A.

Every day now we hear and read about "mental illness." The papers are full of it. Radio and TV are saturated with it.

The tragedy is that so much of the air handling of this topic is neither medically nor psychologically authentic. This constant exploitation of misery and frustration and even violent anti-social behavior is absolute poison to many who can get nothing but harm from such wallowing in fear and ignorance.

There have been a few legitimate professional public service presentations by qualified experts and all TV circuits are to be complimented on them. But a constant deluge of petty behaviorism by adult infants is a far cry from authentic case histories that are documented by qualified medical and psychiatric specialists.

There is one vitally important truth that merits vigorous support, and up to now it has been wholly neglected. That is that many individuals who are supposed to be mentally ill are not "sick in the head" at all. They are just ornery as a goat and in most such instances of deliberate contrary behavior, the statement above is a vile libel against the goat.

The finest serologists and neurologists are constantly seeking new truths about genuine pathological derangement along the proven lines of such research. Individuals who are genuinely ill always have histories that any qualified researchers can ferret out and in a most gratifying percentage of cases, get heartwarming results by proper institutional care and treatment. Recent research in chemo-therapy has opened up new vistas of hope and assurance for recovery in increasing numbers of non-violent or paranoid symptoms of mild degree.

One thing is for laymen and "family ignoramases" to stop abuse of honest cases of mental aberrations. It is most un-Christian the way most people shun all such members of their own immediate family, so afflicted.

If there is an honest suspicion that some person has a "good thing going" by being deliberately obnoxious, then they should get immediate authentic counseling by a legal expert and then behave accordingly.

So many people are "difficult" solely to be important.

FOOD MARKETS THIS WEEK

Order Restored To Citrus, Vegetable Market

By ESTELLE B. FRANKS

THIS WEEK LOOK FOR:

Fruits — Apples, lemons, grapes

Vegetables — Red potatoes, yams, cabbage, celery, carrots, cauliflower.

Other Foods — Fryers, pork cuts, ground beef, large eggs, dairy products.

Now that citrus fruits again are coming in from Florida we can expect prices to return to near normal. This does not mean that prices will go as low as they were prior to the freeze when a record crop was expected.

Mrs. Franks

On Dec. 27, the embargo was lifted by the Florida Citrus Commission bringing an end to the restriction on the shipment of fresh fruit imposed because of the recent freeze in Florida.

The Florida fruit will continue to be checked to insure that it is just as good as ever on the inside. Size restrictions, however, have been relaxed and we will likely be seeing smaller oranges, tangerines, tangelos and grapefruit on the market.

Prices paid for citrus fruits can be expected to be somewhat high until the market shelves are again stocked and then prices will drop.

Some of the vegetable crop is making a fast recovery while part of the Florida area escaped damage entirely. Many of the new plantings will be ready for market within 30 to 60 days. And supply sources other than Florida will be coming in. These factors add up to vegetable situations looking much improved and likely a return to a pattern of prices slightly above normal.

New Service Is Announced By Columbus Public Library

Columbus Public Library has started issuing a comprehensive listing of new books near the first and the middle of each month.

Copies of the list, which includes the latest fiction, non-fiction, reference, children's and young adult books on the shelves of the library, will be available for the asking at area library agencies, according to City Librarian Edward Daniels.

All books on the list will be available at the Main Library, and many of them are also on the shelves of the 13 branch libraries. Patrons may request books from the central library through their branches.

If a book is in circulation, patrons may request notification when it becomes available. A book reserve postal card, to be mailed to the home, costs a nickel.

Some patrons may wish to have the new book list mailed directly to their homes. This is possible, the librarian said, if the patron deposits a quantity of stamped, self-addressed envelopes at his neighborhood library agency.

Planners View Extension Of Alum Creek-dr

Columbus Planning Commission was to get a thorough look at the Alum Creek-dr relocation extension Wednesday, Jan. 9 during regular session.

This extension of Alum Creek-dr, north of Livingston-av, will become a major access point for the East Freeway. It is scheduled for construction this year.

The freeway project calls for a four-lane relocation of the street south of Livingston-av. The four-lane extension to Main-st, estimated at a cost of $600,000, is planned as a 50-50 city-federal project.

Main-st motorists will be able to get to and from the freeway much easier on the extension than if they had to use Nelson-rd, according to City Engineer Robert F. Werner.

Although results of the Planning Commission viewing were not available at press time, it is believed that the plans would be unanimously accepted.

A public hearing on the extension will be held Thursday, Jan. 17, at 10 a.m. in Council Chambers of City Hall.

Marvin Pipkin was awarded a patent Oct. 16, 1928, for electric light bulbs frosted on the inside.

being completed at Sunshine Center and Poindexter Village); four recreation centers; improved Columbus zoo; elimination of the Third-st viaduct and, above all industry, such as Western Eelectric which we brought in) which is a tremendous asset to the city.

Q. — In your opinion, what is the most serious problem facing Columbus right now that will need attention by the next administration? Why?

WESTLAKE — Biggest

problem facing the city right now is to find ways and means of financing the tremendous construction job that must be done to keep city services abreast of its rapid growth in population. I am thinking of the rehabilitation and expansion of our water distribution system, the extension of sewer lines and new facilities for sewage treatment. This problem also includes the raising of city pay scales to a level high enough to attract the skilled and professional help we so sorely need.

SENSENBBENNER — The saving of downtown Columbus because it affects our whole tax duplicate—especially as related to mass transportation and economical parking. The city needs a 10-cent bus fare for students.

Q. — What do you see as the future for the water and sewer freeze?

WESTLAKE — I feel that the present policy of no new extensions outside city limits must be continued until the city can catch up with the needs within its own boundaries.

SENSENBRENNER — The main thing is the fact that there should be no water or sewer rights granted to any un-incorporated area. This does not preclude services to incorporated areas.

Q. — What can be done, if anything, to speed up the current sewer program — especially the new treatment plant project?

WESTLAKE — I feel that we are now doing everything possible to speed this program. Our sewer construction program for 1962 was the largest for any single year in the city's history. Over the next five years, we plan to spend more than $45-million for new sewers and sewage disposal facilities. We have hired outside engineers to speed preparation of plans. Last year we acquired the site for a second sewage treatment plant and we are now having detailed engineering plans prepared. Naturally, we can't do any building until these plans are completed, but we have tentatively set aside $2-million to start work on the plant this year.

SENSENBRENNER — A higher priority needs to be given to expediting the new sewage treatment plant near Shadeville and enlargement of the sewer system of the whole city.

Q. — If you are selected to serve as mayor of Columbus, what cabinet changes (if any) would you make?

WESTLAKE—I now have an able, hard-working and conscientious group of administrators in my cabinet. Why change?

SENSENBRENNER — There are some very fine men available and I would select, with the help of engineering and other professional societies, the very best qualified men that I could find.

Q. — What was the biggest disappointment to you during your administration?

WESTLAKE — I have had no major disappointments. Of course, there have been some minor ones, but none worth mentioning.

SENSENBRENNER—Losing the election. Also, the fact that some of the men in whom I had placed confidence did not fully live up to my expectations.

Q.— Concerning the City Charter, do you foresee any further changes in it? Why would such changes be advisable?

WESTLAKE—Yes, I think there will be some further changes in the City Charter, although I can't say when. I believe the group studying the city's salary schedules will recommend some changes in order to put city pay scales on a realistic basis and to give the city more flexibility in handling its personnel problems. Remember, the charter is nearly 50 years old and it probably needs some changes to put it in step with the times.

SENSENBRENNER — Any charter requires review periodically. What changes are needed must await this review in the light of changing circumstances.

Q. — Do you feel that the city needs additional tax revenues from new sources? Also, what new avenues of economy would you explore?

WESTLAKE — I feel that the city does not now need to tap any new sources for additional tax revenues. I also feel that our expenditures now are pretty much at a rock-bottom level. Our tidy surpluses of the past couple of years are evidence.

SENSENBRENNER — At this time I see no need in raising the source of revenue. Better government at less cost is our goal and should be everyone's goal.

Q. — Can we expect any changes in either fire or police operations in Columbus?

There already have been many changes since I became mayor and there will be more. For example, just this past year we completed and occupied the new fire headquarters and training center on Greenlawn-av with a training tower that the city had needed for years. Naturally, there will be some changes to take advantage of the efficiencies these facilities offer. Also, during my administration, the police department has been brought up to its full authorized strength for the first time in years, and this year we are adding another 25 men. That boosts its authorized strength to 631 men — highest in history. We also plan to start construction this year of a new police training academy to match the fire department's new quarters. The academy will be built on the grounds of the police pistol range on McKinley-av.

SENSENBRENNER — We need more police and firemen. They're absolutely necessary in a growing city.

Q. — Is there any other statement you care to make?

WESTLAKE—Yes. I think the City of Columbus has a date with destiny. I think it is destined eventually to become the largest and most important city in Ohio. I think we who are responsible for the government of this fast-growing city must bear that thought in mind in our day-to-day planning for the city's future.

SENSENBRENNER — There are many fine civic and business groups which have made most helpful contributions in building our city and these are needed in the future. We need active citizen participation in the affairs of local government. Finally, I love this city and envision for it a tremendous future. The greatest honor I ever had was the one given me in 1954 and again in 1956 when I was elected mayor. My hope is that voters will again return me to this high office and I pledge my every effort in building Columbus into one of the greatest cities in America.

Bishop Plans Mass In Spanish Here For Cuban Youths

By JOHN AUBLE, JR.

Columbus Bishop Clarence G. Issenmann mixed business with pleasure last Sunday in the K of C Hall.

The "business" is significant in the fact that it effects a new Catholic mass in this city and the "pleasure" was for the benefit of Cuban refugee youths brought to Columbus through the Catholic Welfare Bureau.

The bishop, speaking before some 300 greater Columbus residents (more than 70 Cuban children), laid preliminary plans for conducting a mass in Spanish once a month in a centralized church here for these people from Cuba.

"I would like to propose," the bishop said, "that we conduct a mass in one church here in Spanish once a month."

According to Joseph Gibboney, supervisor of the Cuban program for the Welfare Bureau, the bishop's plan should be in operation by March. The actual mass, Gibboney explained, will be in the traditional Latin but the sermon and singing will be in Spanish.

It will be a first for the Ohio area — a state which ranks fifth in the nation in number of Cubans in this country.

The bishop, who worked through an interpreter to give his talk Sunday, also said that he "feels like Pope John XXIII when he spoke to the United States Bishops" recently during the ecumenical council in Rome. "The Pope said he wished he could speak to all the bishops in the various languages," Bishop Issenmann said, "and, right now, I wish I could speak Spanish so that I could talk to you directly."

Adding a note of humor, the bishop said, "but, at least, you can tell your relatives in Cuba that you have seen the bishop . . . and tell them that he's pretty well."

The Cubans were compared by Bishop Issenmann to his ancestors who first came to this country from France. "You're carrying on a tradition," he said, "of the ancestors of all of us who had the courage to escape from other countries."

He added that he knew that the "hearts (of these children) belong in Cuba" but he said he "hopes you'll stay with us forever."

The get-together Sunday was actually part of a Cuban tradition. That is, the celebration of the Wise Men's Day (Jan. 6) a day in Cuba — like Christmas here — when gifts are distributed. There is no Santa Claus in that country.

The bishop threw gifts to the children and they, in turn, broke open a pinata filled with candy.

Besides Bishop Issenmann, the group heard comments by Gibboney (who said the bureau is "happy to be of assistance to Cubans in this country") and from Dr. Julio Sanguily, medical director at St. Anthony Hospital.

Dr. Sanguily was a medical chief in Cuba and conducted a clinic there. His son, Julio, Jr., is on the staff at Mt. Carmel Hospital. "I think all you Cuban youngsters will return home some day in peace," Dr. Sanguily theorized.

Fr. Paul Sicilia,, professor at Josephinum College in Worthington, told the group in Sponish about the patron saint of Cuba, Caridad del Cobre, and offered background material on the Wise Men's Day — known in that country as "Reyes Magos."

Bishop Issenmann concluded by telling the youths, "We know your circumstances are difficult. But, never be discouraged . . . carry on as you have begun."

BISHOP CLARENCE G. Issenmann is surrounded by Cuban youngsters and Catholic Welfare Bureau officials during a special party Sunday at the K of C Hall to celebrate Wisemen's Day. This is a Cuban holiday, like Christmas here, when presents are exchanged. The youths were brought to the greater Columbus area by the Welfare Bureau and are now living in foster homes and orphanages in this city.

871 persons turned out to receive the serum. Even the most optimistic expectation for Sunday was 500,000.

The estimate will surely be exceeded when the final tally is completed at the end of this week following the "make up" doses.

Some 514,000 Franklin countians received Type I vaccine Sept. 30 and 504,000 took Type II on Nov. 4. Sunday's turnout was 66 per cent of the total population in the county.

Dr. Richard W. Fulton, president of the Academy of Medicine and Sabin drive chairman here, said persons may receive the vaccine at both the city and county health centers this week.

At the County Health offices in the Court House it will be offered Friday between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m.

It will also be given at the City Health Building on Thursday from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., Thursday evening from 6 p.m. to 9 p.m. and Friday evening from 6 p.m. to 9 p.m.

ley grad, is married and has four children.

Former City Councilman Russell M. Jones, 1757 Franklin-av, announced last week that he will run for a council post.

Jones was appointed to council in 1960 to fill a vacancy but was defeated in his 1961 bid for the seat. He said he would campaign on the issue of "carrying through to effective conclusions the many unfinished tasks which face Columbus."

Final candidate with hat already in ring is broker Morrie D. Portman, 80 S. Chesterfield, who is campaigning on more aggressive activity in urban renewal and improvement of downtown Columbus which, he says, "has been lagging badly."

Portman was former-Mayor Sensenbrenner's assistant from 1954 to 1958 and serving as Columbus' first finance director from 1958-59. He began the city's treasury program, the Capital Budget system and conducted the first performance cost anaylsis for operating city government here.

Other possible candidates announced by Democratic headquarters include:

- Attorney Roland Gilbert, 1737 Niagara.
- North American employe Carl Thompson, 2240 Ontario.
- Plumbing store owner James Bowman, 1365 Aven-dr.
- Dentist Daniel Specht, 2531 Summit.
- Attorney Joseph J. Murphy, 5397 Ivyhurst-dr and 1497 King-av.
- Local concessionaire Edwin P. Brinkman.

Progress has called for men shaving at least once a day and that means a man has to cut a swath across his face 30 miles long in half a lifetime.

Most every home has more furniture and more debts on it than ever before but they also have that much more moving around the house when the good woman decides to change things a bit.

Yep, we're all for progress but never to the extent that we can't just get downright lazy once in awhile.

Will History Repeat?

The recent Shrine magazine, Aladdin's Lamp, contains a bit that should be passed along, as follows:

One of the most widely read books of all times is "The Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire." Written in 1788 by Edward Gibbon, it sets forth five basic reasons why that great civilization withered and died. These were:

The undermining of the dignity and sanctity of the home, which is the basis for human society.

Higher and higher taxes; the spending of public money for free bread and circuses for the populace.

The mad craze for pleasure; sports becoming every year more exciting, more brutal, more immoral.

The building of great armaments when the real enemy was within — the decay of individual responsibility.

The decay of religion; faith fading into mere form, losing touch with life, losing power to guide the people.

The oft-heard warning that "history repeats itself" has an ominous meaning in the light of the above.

The average age of the world's great civilizations has been 200 years. These nations progressed through this sequence:

From Bondage to Spiritual Faith

From Spiritual Faith to Great Courage

From Courage to Liberty

From Liberty to Abundance

From Abundance to Selfishness

From Selfishness to Complacency

From Complacency to Apathy

From Apathy to Dependence

From Dependence Back Again to Bondage contained in legitimate releases.

"This," Giles pointed out, "would offer just one deterrent to the films. I'm sure we could come up with more restrictions like this that would hamper the showing of these movies here."

Another detering factor is the possibility of a city ordinance to prohibit films shown in Columbus movie houses made on acetate film. This type is highly flammable and isn't in use by noted movie makers. A recently confiscated movie actually caught fire while the Movie Review Board was witnessing it at a private showing.

Most authorities on the matter agree on one thing, though. It's basically a question of taste and morals. It's up to the schools, the churches and the parents of this community to establish our level.

Prospective 'Big Brothers' Asked To Attend Banquet

The Big Brother Association of Columbus will highlight its observance of National Big Brother Week, Jan 6-13, with a banquet, Jan. 9, at the Youth Center at the Ohio State Fairgrounds, beginning at 7 p.m.

The association's first "honorary Big Brother" will be announced, Executive Secretary W. E. Richardson stressed that the banquet is not restricted to present members of the association alone.

"WE HOPE THAT men who are interested in our program will attend so they might gain a better understanding of our work," Richardson said.

The banquet's guest speaker will be Harrison Sayre, of 264 N. Drexel-av. Sayre, a member of the Columbus Foundation and past president of the American Education Press (now Wesleyan Press) will speak on the background and history of the Big Brother organization from its beginnings 30 years ago and its progression to the present.

Richardson, who hopes to find Big Brothers for many of the 300 fatherless boys currently on the waiting list with the present membership drive, pointed ou that Big Brothers were especially needed in the South and East sections of the city.

At this time we are living in a world full of tension. Fears of nuclear war are with us every day. In times past, men have made one of two choices . . . to rely on their own abilities . . . or to do what they can and place their lives in the hands of the Lord. The Bible tells us how men fared with the choices that they made. The strength of God is sufficient for all our needs, and men who humbled themselves and trusted in God always fared better. Let us judge our future by the past and rely on God for our needs.

ATTEND CHURCH SUNDAY

EVERYONE IN THE CHURCH . . . THE CHURCH IN EVERYONE

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

Lima Slaps South; Rams Sweep Pair

Lima Senior overcame a five-point first period deficit, frustrating South with a full-court press Saturday night to nail down a 68-52 win over the Bulldogs.

Lima turned the coin to step up to a five-point halftime advantage at intermission and the Rebs were unable to make a comeback, falling behind by 20 points as the fourth period got underway.

Senior got double - figure scoring from four starters and a big assist in the rebounding department from All-State gridder Mike Current, who controlled the backboards besides garnering 12 points.

For the Bulldogs, who dropped their fifth decision in eight tries, Fred McGhee was the top marksman, ‘dlecting a total of 19 marked South's Joe Middendorf also added up 13 more points for the losers.

While fellow County League teams were finding it hard to break even over the weekend, St. Marys made hay, disposing of two CL opponents and moving into undisputed runner-up spot in the loop.

The Rams caught Canal Winchester looking the other way Friday night and piled up a 20-8 first period margin before the Indians even missed their scalps. When the Ray DeCola-coached quintet finally retired for the evening they had racked up a solid 79-45 shellacking of C-W.

The Rams one-two 'scoring punch of George Maurer (27 points) and Tom Sauer (15 points) did most of the damage to the visiting Indians but Bob Yates and Tim Sauer also got in their licks with 12 markers each.

Academy did manage to finish on top of first period scoring Saturday night but St. Marys took charge thereafter, piling up a 57-43 win over the Vikings.

Maurer and Tom Sauer were once again instrumental in the scoring department with the former dropping in 21 points and the latter contributing an additional 16.

The twin win upped the Ram record to 6-2, leaving them one-half game behind University, unbeaten in four loop encounters.

St. Mary's cage success didn't extend to County rival Rosary which dropped a pair of games over the weekend. The Crusaders dominated first-half play Friday against Dublin, before losing a tight 53-51 heartbreaker to the Shamrocks.

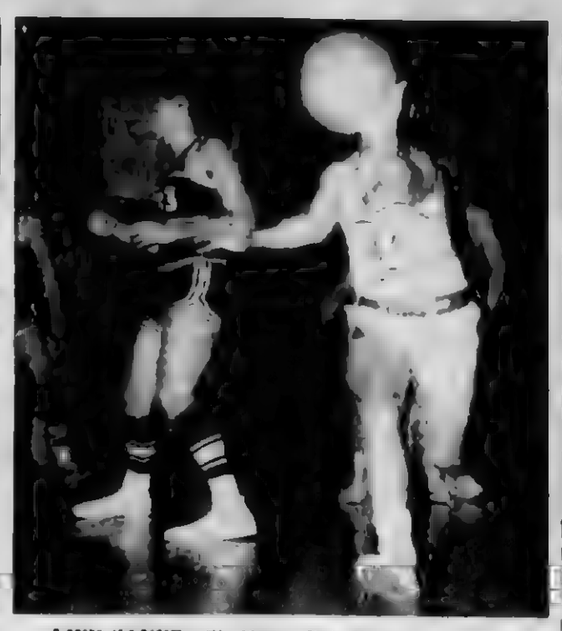
Rosary led by seven points at intermission but Dublin came on strong in the second half, gaining a two point lead after three periods.

Rick Stokes and Ed Roehrenbeck paced the Crusader attack with 17 and 16 points respectively but both got scoring support from Jim Groce who finished with 11 markers.

Rosary caught Canal Winchester on the rebound Saturday night on the Indians home court, dropping a 66-46 verdict.

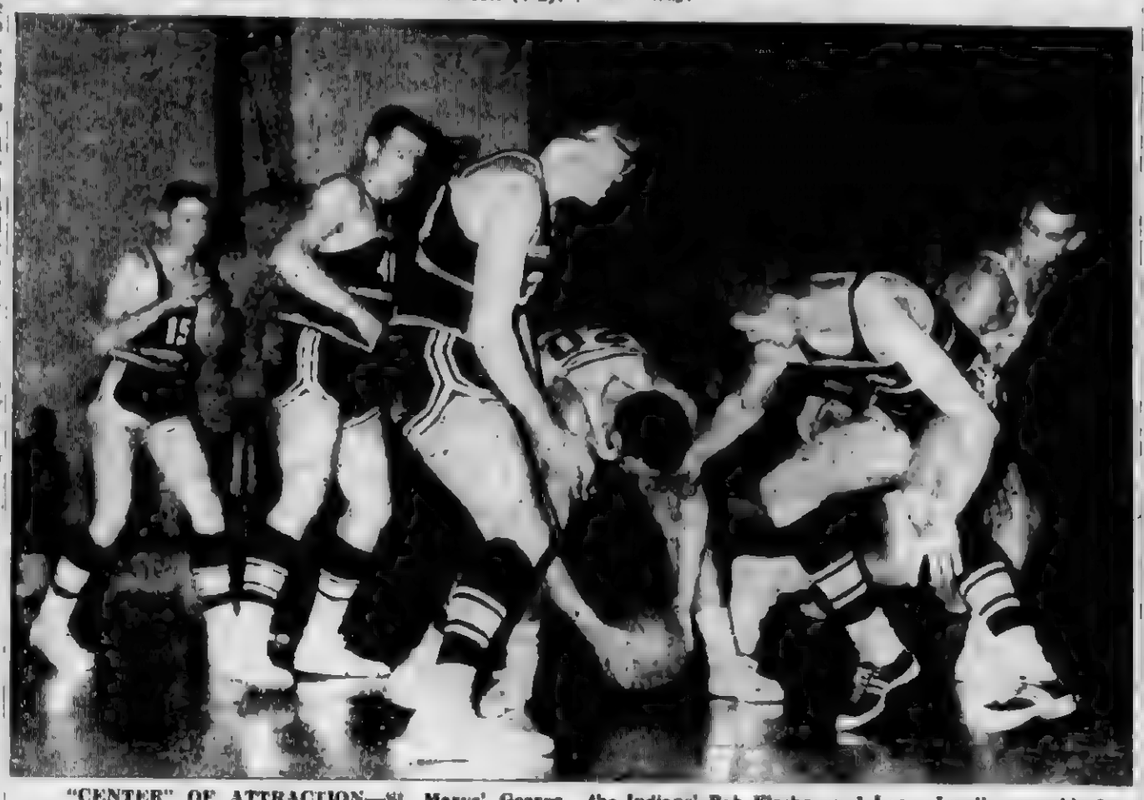
The Crusaders trailed by three at the halftime break but C-W zeroed in on the basket in the second half, pulling away to a comfortable margin.

Groce was most successful among Rosary scorers, totaling 14 points.



Elsewhere around the area, Marion-Franklin's Red Devils dropped a one-sided 67-30 contest to East's point-potent Tigers. East built up a 53-12 third-period advantage before it let up. John Jackson's eight points led the M-F scoring.

Aquinas held a four-point lead over Eastmoor after one quarter and then added two more points a period to its lead enroute to a 49-39 victory over City League opponent Eastmoor.



Pat Mental scored 16 points to pace the Terriers while teammate Tom Woodward hit for an additional 11 markers.

Friday's lineup of high cage tilts finds Marion Franklin (2-7) at Aquinas (5-2), South (3-5) at West (4-5, Rosary (2-5) at Academy (1-8) and St. Marys (6-2) at University (7-0) in a big County League encounter that highlights area play.

Rosary and Aquinas complete weekend play with Saturday games, the Crusaders visiting University and the Terriers to Watterson (7-1).

LIFE SAVER—St. Marys Bob Yates (41) is a man dear to the heart of any game photographer as he collars an errant pass headed out of bounds and toward a frantic shutter-snapper. Winchester's Bob Flesher (left) who apparently can't stand the sight of a shattered lens, looks the other way.

"CENTER" OF ATTRACTION—St. Marys' George Maurer (with ball) introduces a little touch of the gridiron into the Rams' cage clash with Canal Winchester Friday night as he apparently prepares to center the ball to to Winchester's Mark Bickel (41) or Scott Guiler (15) as the Indians' Bob Flesher and Larry Landis scramble for the ball. St. Marys' Tom Sauer (right) looks on dubiously. Actually Maurer had more success in the scoring department, "quarterbacking" the Rams to a 79-46 win with 27 points.

Rams Win, 66-46

St. Marys picked up its third cage victory in less than a week Tuesday night with a 66-46 win over Mt. Vernon St. Vincent.

The Rams, who suffered the first of their only two setbacks this season at the hands of St. Vincent earlier, took no chances, shooting their way to a 20-8 first period lead and increasing the margin to 20 points at intermission.

Big George Maurer paced the St. Marys attack with 26 markers while the Sauer boys, Tom and Tim, entered the double-figure scoring column with 12 and ten points respectively.

Rose (Bowl) Petals Falling Other Way

We guess the first symptoms of approaching senility come to the fore when somebody begins to start referring to his past as the "good 'ole days."

We caught ourselves using that musty expression as a post-game reflection on the Rose Bowl after the Vander-Kelens and Beathards had gone their separate ways and the only thing that filled the airways of the emptying arena was the California dusk.

SOMEBODY IN THE room was nostalgically looking back to New Years Day past. "Remember when the Big Ten teams always won the Rose Bowl," he said sadly.

We could remember. But we left just as the concerted spirit of disappointment had worked itself into the suggestion that everybody write the University of Wisconsin letters suggesting its resignation from the Big Ten Conference.

Being a native Midwestern and certainly a Big Ten fan, we were a little disappointed ourselves, figuring that the Badgers would eventually pull out the victory (which they almost did).

BUT THE more we thought about it, the more we realized that the Badgers didn't really play that bad a game. After all, any team that can score 37 points against the nation's number one football power certainly isn't a slouch.

And even if the game didn't end the way we would have liked, it did contain nearly everything a fan could ask for in a football game except a little more defense and a little less whistle tooting.

Right from the toss of the coin, it was evident that this was to be a game that wasn't going to be like any other Rose Bowl game.

WE WERE CONVINCED that the head official must be an NBC vice-president after his impromptu plug for the network with the flip of the silver but his extra-curricular arm waving throughout the rest of the game betrayed his apparent desire for his own one-hour "special."

But we guess we weren't much better ourselves, spinning the dial from Sugar to Orange to Sugar earlier in the day until our overworked "Auld Lang Syne" of the previous evening finally overcame us and we caught ourselves waking up to Mel Allen's half-dozen references to the "granddaddy of them all."

We politely asked if anybody pulled a Tommy Lewis in the Sugar Bowl and how many people were arrested for trying to shake the President's hand at the Orange Bowl game.

WE GUESS NO matter how badly we felt about Wisconsin's inability at win at Pasadena in three tries, it was nothing to compare with the disappointment of Milt Bruhn, who must be saddled with some kind of a complex by this time.

After all Milt (1.) couldn't convince the officials, (2.) had a hard time getting his players on the field the second half and (3.) didn't even get in a good lick when an overenthusiastic Trojan tackler wanted to escort a Badger ballcarrier all the way to his seat on the bench before halftime.

Maybe it was only natural that Coast scribes should misquote coach McKay into adding injury to injury by saying that the Badgers would finish dead last in the Trojans' league alignment of six teams.

There's never been any love lost between the Pasadena crowd and their compadres in the Midwest especially since one writer quoted a Big Ten coach saying that his team's opponent in the bowl a few years back would have nailed down the cellar spot in the Western Conference.

It was the West Coast's day for "touche" and sweet revenge. The only problem is they're trying to make a habit out of it. We can remember the "good 'old days" when the Big Ten won them all but maybe that pendulum has begun to swing the other way.

We hope the reversal is short lived because those of us who like to crow about Big Ten supremacy are beginning to get a bit giddy from all those feathers in our stomachs.

City Tops Jr. Olympic Awards

The Capital City gained national attention last week in the sporting world as Junior Olympic Track and Field officials announced that Columbus was the leading city in the country, with the most national winners in the amateur program conducted here last summer.

The program, held at Ohio Stadium, was conducted by the Columbus Recreation Department and resulted in 17 girls and 13 boys winning a total of seven first places, seven second places, three third places, nine fourth places and six fifth places.

INDIVIDUALLY honored was Whitehall High school student Mike Short, of 4140 Rickenbacker-st, who placed first in the nation in the Senior Boys' discus throw — a toss of 142 feet and seven inches.

Short, an 18-year-old senior at Whitehall was presented his National AAU Junior Olympic award last week by N. J. Barack, superintendent of the Columbus Recreation Dept.

Among other local participants honored was Cheryl Gatterdam, of 565 S. Kellnerrd, who was a member of the Ohio Track Club 440-yard Relay Team which placed second in the competition with a time of 53.11.

14 OTHER WINNERS around the area received honors for their performances.

Representing East High School were: Estelle Baskerville, 16, of 430 Eldridge-av, who finished first in the high jump (5'0"), first in the standing broad jump (9'1¾") and third in the 50-yard low hurdles with a time of 7.2 seconds; Chris Miller, 15, of 1645 Grenville-st, who finished first in the high jump (5'0"), third in the 50-yard low hurdles (7.2) and fourth in the 75-yard dash (8.7); Mary Session, 18, of 461 Hanley-st, who placed fourth in the high jump 4'5½"); Sue Neighbors, 16, of 453 Eldridge-av, who took second place in the standing broad jump with a 8'4" leap; Wanda Fuller, 15, of 1428 E. Fourth-av, who finished first as a member of the OTC 220-yard relay team (25.0) and second in the nation in the 75-yard dash (8.5).

From Roosevelt Junior High, Jim White, 15, of 741 Wilson-av, finished fifth in the 100-yard dash (10.5) and Ray Hupp, 12, of 517 Mouill-st, finished second in the 50-yard free-style in the Jr. Olympic Swimming meet.

Other area winners were: Patricia Watkins, 1104 E. 21st-st, 17, who finished third in the 50-yard low hurdles (7.3), fifth in the 100-yard dash (11.7) and was a member of the OTC 440-yard relay team which placed second (53.1).

Jackie Watkins, 11, of 1104 E. 21st-av, a Hamilton Elementary student, Jackie placed fifth in the 50-yard dash with her 7.0 time; Jean Fields, 897 Morning-st, a member of the 220-yard relay team in the Jr. Girls Division who finished with a time of 27.2.

Patricia Williams, 1053 Oak-st, a 13-year-old Franklin Jr. High student who was a member of the OTC 220-yard relay team which placed fourth (27.2) and won fifth place in the 50-yard dash (6.5).

IT'S A BIG DITCH THAT TUNNELS under High-st to soon the line will turn north to Hilock. The $365,000 project will service the Southeast, much of which has been recently annexed to the city. It will take the 48-inch sanitary sub-trunk sewer being laid from the Scioto River along Williams-rd to Parsons-av. At Par-working days before the $100-a-day penalty begins. That would permit the job to run on an additional 12 weeks.

Writesell stated that heavy rains, and sand and gravel in the soil could slow the project up beyond expectations. The banks won't hold in loose, wet sand, he said, and reinforcing timber banks must be built.

The sewer which will service the Southeast will empty in the South Scioto pumping station and from there be taken to the disposal plant.

The city inspector attributed the need for the line primarily to new housing in the area. Much of the locality has been annexed in recent years and "about all they have is the county system" he said.

Boy Scout News

By CARL JAPIKSE
BE. 1-8647

The winter camporee of the White Oaks District will be held on Saturday and Sunday, Jan. 12 and 13 at Edgewater Park on Hamilton-rd.

"Three hundred boys and leaders from the district are expected to attend," commented Donald Cook, camping chairman for the district. "The activities on Saturday afternoon will center on winter scouting, but will depend on the weather."

In the evening, there will be the usual Scouting campfire. Troops participating will be judged on their Scouting ability, and ribbons will be given to the best troops.

The Cub Scouts, Boy Scouts, and Explorer Scouts of the 370 unit sponsored by St. Philip's Apostle Church, sang carols to Fathers S. Hoffman and J. Fulcher of the sponsoring institution, in celebrating the holidays on December 26.

The Scouts then went to the convent of the Christ the King parish, where they sang carols to the Dominican Sisters. The unit then received mass as a body at mass, December 30.

The cubmaster of Pack 370 is Chester Wegenka, scoutmaster of the troop is Capt. Walter Mastenbrook, and Colonel McConnell is advisor of Post 370.

The Mohawk District committee and commissioner's staff will meet at Camp Lazarus on January 12, to decide on the program for the district in 1963.

Some of the items to be discussed are the camporees, the Cubbing program during the winter, and window displays during Scout week. Also to be discussed will be the election of new district officers, and their installation in May.

A Better World for All... the Promise of the Future

COLUMBUS, OHIO — JANUARY 9-10, 1963

Vital Milestone Is Reached; Expressway Program Booms

$100,000,000 In Roads Now Used By Motorists

By Robert F. Mott
Executive Director
Development Committee For Greater Columbus

In keeping with the celebration of the 150th anniversary of the creation of Columbus, significant strides into the future were made in 1962. Perhaps the most significant was in the area of the expressway program, the largest public works undertaking in the history of the Greater Columbus area.

Ultimately to cost over $300 million, the system progressed to the stage that by November, 1962, the Columbus area motorists were using over $100 million worth of projects.

Reaching of this milestone resulted from completion of sufficient portions of the north and west parts of the Fort Hayes Interchange to permit the connection of the North Freeway with the North Leg of the Innerbelt, the West Leg of the Innerbelt, the Southwest Freeway, part of the South Leg of the Innerbelt, the Long-st Extension and the Third-st Viaduct.

In addition to the $100 million of projects opened to traffic, contracts were let in 1962 for the East Leg of the Innerbelt and the Outerbelt from the Southwest Freeway to U. S. Rt. 23 (S. High-st) bringing to a total of $34,464,000 the value of projects now under construction.

An early 1963 letting of the construction contract for the rest of the South Leg of the Innerbelt will add another $9,446,000 to the total under construction and could permit the completion of of the Innerbelt as well as the portion of the Outerbelt by the end of 1964.

Meanwhile, it is expected that consulting engineers will be hired shortly to prepare detailed construction plans for the West Freeway for which the alignment was established after a public hearing held in October.

Also, during the year engineering began, or was advanced, on other projects such as the extension of West-North Broadway from Olentangy River-rd to Kenny-rd, the Morse-rd widening from the North Freeway to Cleveland-av, the Olentangy River-rd from Goodale to State Rt. 161, Seventeenth-av from the North Freeway to Port Columbus, the Frank-rd- Refugee-rd connector and Wilson-rd extension.

The new Thurber Village is rapidly replacing the former Flytown in the Goodale area. Buildings already completed include the Capital Beverage warehouse and office building; national offices of the U. S. Trotting Association; a data processing center for the City National Bank and Trust; an architecturally compatible Texaco Service Station; and a neighborhood shopping center.

Plans for a four and one-half acre park in the center of the project area have been completed and construction will be started in the spring.

The Market-Mohawk project (which is almost 100 percent cleared) has progressed to the point that a qualified redeveloper submitted a redevelopment plan and proposal to the city Jan. 1. This would allow construction to begin in early 1963.

A site for a new sewage treatment plant was purchased and engineers hired to prepare detailed construction plans for the plant. Construction on the large Stelzer-rd water main was completed relieving the water shortage on the east side of Columbus.

A water and sewer rate analysis was made in 1962 by consulting engineers. This study will be available in setting a course of action to provide the additional water and sewage facilities, both new and replacement, needed in the area.

Meanwhile, the Scioto Conservancy District completed and received approval of its Official Plan, which will provide not only for future water supply, but also flood control; anti-pollution, low stream flow augumentation; and recreation.

This program will be carried out in conjunction with agencies of the federal government, the Ohio Department of Highways and all local jurisdictions. The plan that evolves should help guide future developments so that "Columbus—1992" will be even more outstanding than the wonderful, fast-growing Columbus of 1962.

Col-Met Area Shows Huge Economic Surge In 1962

By JOHN J. MACKIN
Director of Research
Columbus Area Chamber of Commerce

A consistent pattern of population increases has been contributing to the economic growth of the Col-Met Area for a long time. Since the date of the first census of the population of Columbus, recorded in 1815, the Columbus growth has never taken a backward step.

As a matter of fact, Columbus has been growing at a faster rate than any other large city of the state of Ohio and faster than most other cities of comparable size in the nation.

Since the Census of 1960, up until Sept. 1, Col-Met is estimated to have grown by more than 57,000 persons, the city by more than 36,000 and the other areas of Franklin County outside the central city, by more than 20,000. This has brought the estimate, as of Sept. 1, to 740,196 for Col-Met, 507,843 for the city and 232,353 for all the areas outside the city of Columbus. As of January 1, 1963, these estimates will have risen to 746,118 for Col-Met; 512,883 for the city and 235,309 for the outside areas.

Business rose steadily during the first nine months of 1962. The increase was rapid during the first four months, then came the break in the stock market on May 28. During the following weeks, the effects were felt mildly on local business.

During the third quarter the upward swing was on again, but at a more modest rate. In the ensuing month of October, and in the light of the Cuban crisis, caution was again observed being applied temporarily by consumers and other important participants in the local economy.

In spite of these happenings, 1962 was another year of successes for Columbus businessmen. Department store sales, as reported in the Federal Reserve Bulletin, were, at the end of October, soaring higher than last year by 6 percent.

Since department store sales are only a part of the total for Franklin County, it is reasonable to expect that total sales for the year are going to be well above last year's $940,000,000 total.

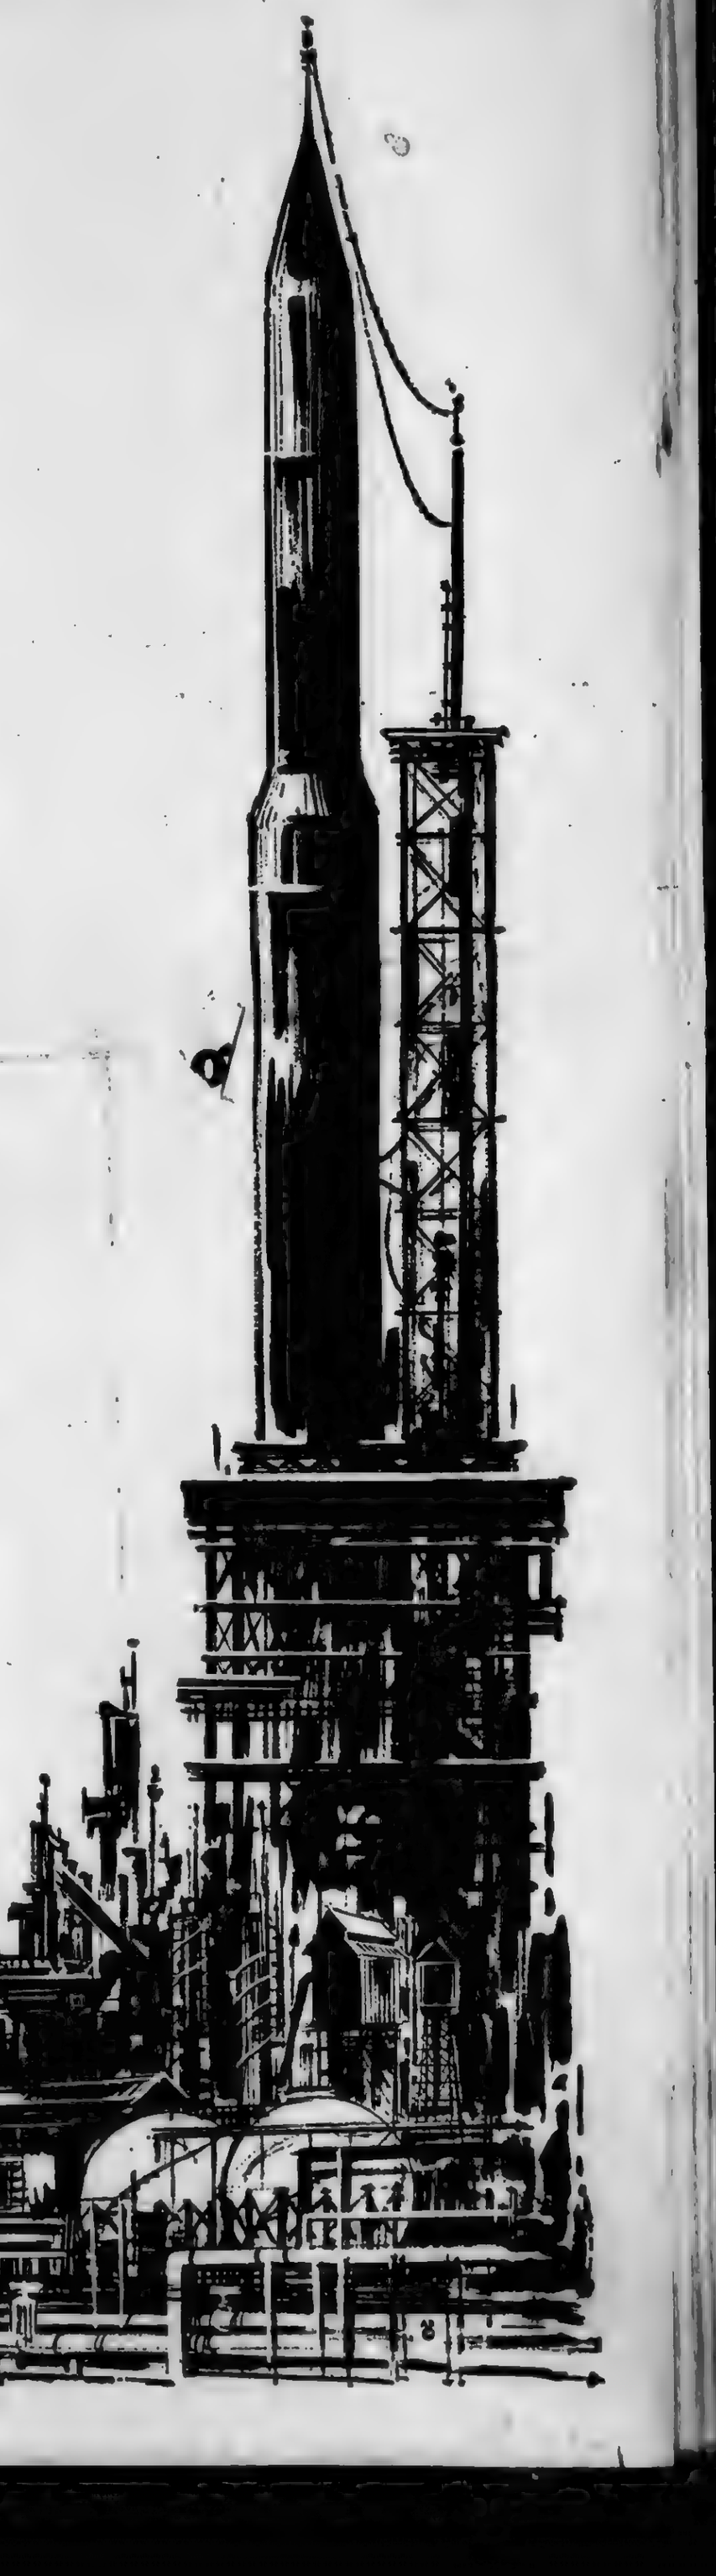
A high level of construction activity has prevailed throughout the year. So far, this has been our best year for construction since 1958. Through the first ten months of 1962, a total of 11,972 permits had been issued in Franklin County. This was 3.2 percent less than had been issued in the same period of 1961. However, on the other hand, valuations this year, through October, at $145,829,450, were 29.1 percent higher than last year.

Through November there were 21,106 real estate mortgages filed. This was 10.6 percent more than had been filed the year before. These mortgages filed this year carried a total valuation of $363,562,710, just 20.7 percent higher than those of last year.

On the other hand, 15,145 mortgages cancelled, 6.1 percent more than had been cancelled the year before. These had a total valuation of $195,584,960, 14.5 percent greater than the mortgages cancelled last year during the same period of time.

Many construction projects were planned or started which are worthy of note. A random selection from among them would require the mention of: three shopping centers, (east, northwest and in the central city); two Urban Renewal Projects; two large motor hotels in the downtown area; two large office buildings; several large suburban department stores, and further expansion of the facilities at and in connection with the Ohio State University.

City Climbs To Second In Ohio Population Race



Continued acceleration of growth in the Columbus Metropolitan Area is indicated by the record of the past year. In many respects, 1962 was the best business year ever for our community.

Building activity—manufacturing and non-manufacturing, new buildings, expansions and remodelings—showed impressive gains. In many cases all previous records were broken. This upward trend in our economy is consistent with the steady climb which marked the local business climate for many years.

Increasing population has, of course, played a role in the progress of our city. During 1962 Columbus jumped from third to second place in population among cities in the state. We have ranked first for several years in area, which reached a total of 93,227 square miles last year.

Looking ahead to 1963, we have every reason to expect the trend to continue. To help it along, The Columbus Chamber of Commerce has stepped up its program of promotion of the industrial and economic development, which should have considerable bearing on our business situation.

All in all, the year 1962 appears to have been a sturdy bridge from an economically healthy past to an even healthier future for the Columbus area.

Producers Livestock Ass'n Shows Marked Gain In '62

The year just concluded was one of the most successful in the history of Producers Livestock Association, according to the association's general manager, Gerald L. Hiller.

More than three million head of livestock were handled by the 24 branch markets of the cooperative and their subsidiary order buying company, he reports. Sale value of this livestock exceded $150,000,000. Business totals in 1962 showed substantial gains over the previous year for the same markets.

Gerald L. Hiller

Totals naturally were larger in 1962, he noted, because of the July 1, 1962 merger of the Cincinnati Live Stock Producers Association with the Columbus-based organization, but gains were scored by nearly all markets above their 1961 totals.

Through the first 11 months, the branch markets sold more than 1,500,000 hogs, over 600,000 sheep and lambs, 334,000 cattle, and 75,000 veal calves. In addition, the order buying company handled approximately 320,000 head of stock. These totals include receipts at the six former Cincinnati markets for only the five months since the merger.

The manager reported that Ohio farmers apparently will be in the cattle feeding business on a big scale in 1963, as Producers markets sold more than 169,000 stocker and feeder cattle in the first 11 months, up 57,000 over the same period the previous year.

Loans made by Producers Live Stock Credit Association, a subsidiary, totaled more than $3,000,000 during 1962, a gain of more than half a million dollars over 1961. Repayments also show an increase.

All indications point to a reasonably good year for livestock farmers in 1963, Hiller indicated. Production may somewhat exceed that of 1962, but with a continued good demand for meat and intelligent marketing by farmers, reasonable profits should be realized.

Wheat stabilization program signup through Nov. 15 in U.S. showed 43,500 farms signed 370,456 acres to conserving uses. Participants will be eligible for price support at $1.82 per bushel, an 18c payment on normal production of acres harvested, plus diversion payments. In Ohio, 2,003 farms have agreed to divert 14,846 acres. Farmers have until Dec. 14 to sign agreements at their ASCS office.

Board Of Realtors' Membership Climbed To 1700 In 1962

The Columbus Board of Realtors is a trade association of long standing in Central Ohio. Organized in 1908, the board has been in constant operation since.

As a trade association, CBR provides the necessary services for members which makes their jobs easier in their every-day operation. Members feel more can be done collectively and more economically than can be done individually.

At the present time, the board is providing 52 different services for its members. The two most recent services offered are plat books for Columbus and Franklin County, and a special letter listing realtor services to be sent to individuals attempting to sell their own homes.

In 1962 the board added 76 new realtor members, 283 salesmen members and a new associate member. These additions bring the total membership to more than 1700—one of the largest trade associations in Central Ohio.

Also inaugurated during the past year was a Million Dollar Club which gives special recognition to salesmen members for outstanding performance.

Executive vice president of CBR, L. I. Chambers, said the membership expects to make further expansions during 1963.

Seed Growers School Set For Jan. 30-31

New research in seed production, conditioning, and merchandising will highlight talks at Ohio's annual Seed Growers School, scheduled for Jan. 30 - 31 at the Ohio Exposition Center in Columbus.

Speakers will include some of the country's outstanding authorities in the seed industry, according to Dr. Lewis C. Saboe, Ohio State University Extension agronomist.

Two symposia also are scheduled, Dr. Saboe reports, one on moving seed from the field to the consumer, the other on developing markets for certified seed.

Exhibits will show the latest in machinery, equipment, and supplies for the seed producer and processor.

Banquet speaker will be Cecil Robinson, Delaware County pork farmer, who will present an illustrated talk on life behind the Iron Curtain.

Economic Management Is Success Key At Grange

John C. Haaf

The Grange Mutual Casualty Co. was founded under the insurance laws of the State of Ohio Mar. 25, 1935, and began writing automobile business Apr. 25, 1935. Since organization, it has enjoyed steady growth and faithful service to its policyholders.

Due to economical management and careful reinsuring, the company hs been in good financial standing since its founding. In the beginning, however, is was organized as an assessment mutual company; it was in 1944 that its surpluses and reserves were sufficient to allow it to become a non-assessable company.

In 1937 Grange added the accident policy; in 1942 the general liability, and in 1944 the hospital policy. The company became a multiple-line company in 1955, allowing it to write fire and extended coverage.

The first offices of the company were located on the sixth floor of the Southern Hotel. Expansion was soon necessary, and a move was made to 50 S. Third-st. Approximately eight years later a six-story building was purchased at the corner of Town and High Streets which was occupied for four years.

Again, it was necessary to find larger quarters, due to the increase in business. Grange purchased its present location at 671 S. High-st in 1949, and since that time, five additions have been made.

Now licensed in Ohio, Tennessee, Florida, Alabama, Georgia, Kentucky and South Carolina, Grange Mutual Casualty opened a regional office in Orlando, Fla., in 1959. This office handles business transacted in Florida, South Carolina, Alabama and Georgia.

Presently being completed is a three-story building 90 by 80 feet at the Columbus address, and almost completed is a new building in Orlando, 125 by 75 feet.

Throughout this rapid expansion, the company was constantly broadening its coverage to policyholders and increasing the compensation to its agents. Through a corps of approximately 700 trained and well-qualified agents, the following forms of insurance protection are offered:

Auto property damage, auto comprehensive, fire and theft, auto collision and auto liability, comprehensive personal family liability, farmers comprehensive personal liability, general liability, garage, personal [illegible] Co. and hospitality [illegible] extended [illegible], U.S. marine, and [illegible] farm owners. [illegible] are offered to give protection at a reasonable rate.

Total assets in 1935, $201,213, have now increased to $26,632,319. The surplus to policyholders has increased to $379,236. Approximately 350,000 policies are in force.

The officers and directors have always given an excellent accounting of the company's affairs to its policyholders.

The officers, directors and associates of Grange Mutual are naturally proud of the company. It will always be the company's aim to give policyholders the best possible service.

Dairy Prices May Drop During 1963

Many dairy farmers can expect a slightly lower income next year, predicts K. W. Kepner, Ohio State University Extension specailist in dairy marketing.

Prices which dairy farmers will receive the first quarter of 1963 will be substantially below those of a year earlier because of the lower price support level, Kepner says. For the rest of the year they should be about the same as in 1962.

"But these estimates assume the current dairy program will continue and there will be little change in the the international situation," the specialist explains. "It is almost certain that new dairy legislation will be proposed to Congress in 1963."

The average price which farmers have received for their milk this year is about $4.10 a hundredweight, Kepner says, compared to $4.22 in 1961. Next year, the average price for manufacturing milk, with 3.8 per cent butterfat, is expected to be near the price support level of $3.11 a hundredweight.

While next year is expected to bring further decline in farm cash receipts from dairying, plus lower net farm income due to higher prices which farmers will have to pay for the things they buy, individual dairy farmers still may do fairly well next year. The real key to individual producer income, says Kepner, is the adaptation of efficiency and technology to his own operation.

Better Living Begins with Gas!

All over America versatile natural gas is helping people to a better, more lively life. ■ Already providing nearly a third of the total energy needs of the nation, gas is becoming an increasingly valuable fuel, tool, and chemical raw material in the fast-moving Space Age. ■ In modern homes gas provides the ultimate in comfort and convenience. In forward-looking industries gas performs more than 25,000 different manufacturing tasks with unmatched precision and efficiency. ■ People in Ohio have a head start in sharing all the good things that can be done with gas, because of the state's location in America's Original Natural Gasland. Here gas was discovered, operating techniques were perfected, and service is best—at rates that continue to be among the lowest in the country.

Golden Anniversary • Celebrated By GSA

The year 1962 was the Golden Anniversary of Girl Scouts of the United States of America. In 1912, Juliette Low started the first Girl Scout troop in this country with 12 members. In 1962, three and a half million girls and adults are members.

Girl Scouts planted acres of golden blossoms in recognition of their fiftieth birthday. They planted crocus, tulip, daffodil, and iris bulbs as well as Brownie Scout marigolds and Girl Scout roses. They planted as a means of expressing appreciation to schools and churches and other organizations which provide meeting places. They planted in parks and around their homes.

Girl Scouts performed a flag ceremony at the Youth Concerts of the Columbus Symphony in April. Later in the year, Senior Girl Scouts did the flag ceremony for the opening session of the Ohio School Board Association convention. Senior Girl Scouts also former a color guard in the Sesquicentennial Parade. Innumerable flag ceremonies have been performed by Girl Scouts in their own troop meetings, at PTA meetings, and at various community gatherings.

One of the highlights of 1962 among local Girl Scouts was the visit of 13 Girl Guides from France. The French girls came to this country under the Experiment in International Living with help from the Juliette Low World Friendship Fund.

The Guides were here from July 20 to Sept. 12, each one staying with a hostess family which had a Senior Girl Scout daughter about the age of the French guest. Numerous opportunities for contacts with community groups and Girl Scout troops were arranged.

Girl Scouts were honored at the Ohio State Fair by a special tent program, a green and gold cover and picture on the premium booklet, and a flag ceremony at a grandstand show. The Girl Scouts responded enthusiastically by listing 124 winning entries.

The Sabin on Sunday project gave Girl Scouts the opportunity to be of service in a large community program. Girl Scouts helped in the 118 Sabin centers on Sept. 20 and Nov. 4. They helped again at the third and final SOS Jan. 6.

Two concerns are felt by all adults who believe and work in the Girl Scout program. There are hundreds of girls between the ages of seven and 17 on waiting lists. The girls are waiting, but there is a shortage of qualified and interested adults to serve as leaders. Another concern is the challenge of finding adequate meeting places for troops.

In 1963, the Girl Scouts will move into Program Change, to become effective in September. There will be four age-level divisions in the Girl Scout program instead of the present three. The single biggest event being planned by the Ohio Trefoil Girl Scout Council in 1963 is the Program Fair, scheduled at Veterans Memorial Saturday, April 27.

Headlines Show Our Buckeyes Did Very Well Last Year

A quick glance back over the headlines that appeared in Ohio's newspapers this past year seems to indicate that the Buckeye State has a great many personalities to be proud of.

First, a tip of the hat is due young Jack Nicklaus, former Ohio Stater, who has just about dethroned Arnie Palmer as the hottest golfer in the nation.

And another Jackie, Miss Jacquelyn Mayer of Sandusky, a personable and very lovely lass, captured Miss America honors in Atlantic City in September.

New Concord's John Glenn was very much in the news in 1962, with his history-making flight. Possibly slated for similar honors are two other Ohioans, Neil A. Armstrong and Lt. Comdr. James A. Lovell, Jr.

Armstrong, a native of Wapakoneta, is a former test pilot for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif.

Lovell, a Clevelander, is a flight instructor and safety officer for Fighter Squadron 142 at the Oceana, Va., Naval Air Station.

Often called the hot-bed of national football, Ohio was a natural to be selected as the site for the professional football Hall of Fame. Located at Canton, the Hall is scheduled to be completed next July. Dick McCann, former general manager of the Washington Redskins, is director of the shrine.

Incomes May Rise In 1963

Economic indicators are pointing to another new high in 1963. Pay scale hikes already in the contracts should give three million workers another $1 billion in salary increases.

Stockholders may expect dividend payments to gradually rise during 1963, but interest payments probably will level off. These offering services can expect a slight rise in rates and fees.

James R. Riley Receives National Success Award

James Ralph Riley, president of Suburban Motor Freight, King-av, was one of 10 recipients of the 1963 American Success Story Awards in New York last month. Sponsored by the Free Enterprise Awards Association, the national presentation was made to those who "rose from the ranks to own or head giant industries."

Upon receiving the award, Riley commented, "Success in America's democracy is assured if you give unselfish service to your customers and community. Help improve the area you serve and you will prosper in material and spiritual values."

When James Ralph Riley determined on a choice of a career, he set a course designed to lead to livestock farming and auctioneering. Instead his path led to the presidency of the Suburban Motor Freight.

In the public utility segment of the truck transportation industry, Suburban Motor Freight is a regular common carrier that daily and directly serves Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Kentucky, West Virginia and Michigan, provides connecting carrier accommodations to 41 other states, Washington, D. C., and Canada.

From farm boy to motor freight executive, the success road trod by Ralph Riley covered a mere 35 miles—the distance from the Riley rural homestead in Licking County to Columbus.

It is a paradoxical truth that he wouldn't have trudged the path but for an outbreak of cholera among hogs Riley was raising for market. The disease nipped his livestock aspirations in the bud, left him heavily in debt and with no alternative but to seek a living for himself and wife away from the Riley farm.

The auctioneering skill Riley acquired in Chicago in 1920, following his husbandry studies at Ohio State University, came in handy, but this state of well-being was temporary during an era of shrinking incomes.

The time was 1924 when the motor freight industry was in its infancy. Riley began hauling milk from farms near Newark to Columbus and supplies to the farmers on the return trips.

In 1929 he established the first interstate truck line out of Columbus a 190-mile regular freight haul he called "Columbus - Detroit Motor Freight." The following year, his line and Suburban Transfer Lines were incorporated as Suburban Motor Freight. Riley was made its president in 1931. The company gradually grew into one of the 75 largest highway common carriers in the nation.

Now Suburban Motor Freight transports the nation's goods to and from nearly 5,000 cities and towns in mid-America. Five years ago Suburban purchased another pioneer truck line, Liberty Highway Co., Toledo, to enable Suburban to extend its regular service to important markets for which it was not previously certificated.

Riley oversees all this from Suburban's headquarters at 1100 King-av. The building is trim and scrupulously neat in every detail.

His interests are varied and numerous. He is a founder of the celebrated Columbus Boy choir, whose home is now in Princeton, N. J. and a founding member of the American Society of Traffic and Transportation. He helped to establish the Columbus Town Meeting of the Air, and has appeared on its television program, as well as on other radio and television programs in Ohio and elsewhere.

Riley has for many years been prominently identified with civic betterment projects and such public service organizations as the United Appeal and the Big Brothers Association. He has headed the Special Gifts Committee for the Cancer Fund and the Christmas Seal sale to combat tuberculosis. He is chairman of the YMCA's current campaign in support of World Service-Buildings for Brotherhood.

He is a trustee of Baldwin-Wallace College, Piney Woods Country Life School (Mississippi), and Columbus' new Riverside Methodist Hospital.

Riley holds directorships in the State Savings Co., the Corrugated Container Co., and is a member of Scioto Country Club and the Athletic Club of Columbus.

Through industry, government, education, art, church and charity, Ralph Riley has contributed much to the lives of many. A man of exceptional vigor and ability, he is an example to the people in each mode of transportation of an individual's independent enterprise for the good of all transportation. His is a devoted citizenship.

KNIGHTS OF THE ROAD—725 radio-controlled trucks of Suburban Motor Freight, Inc., 1100 King-av, now serves more than 5000 communities in the midwest. The company employs more than 1000 persons and its carriers travel in excess of nine million miles a year. Suburban Motor Freight grossed $16,612,949 in 1961.

Common Carriers' Goal Today: Excellent Service To Public

What is a highway regular common carrier?

For a moment think of the everyday things human beings need each day. Breakfast, lunch and dinner . . . food, clothing and shelter. This means baby foods, medicines and bread . . . toothpaste, tires and turbines. It means newsprint, books and schools.

To make use of these things requires incessant mobility. Without abundant transportation, America would be like a helpless giant, unable to move arms and legs or defend himself. The national economy is geared intimately with the development of something unique under the transportation sun—the highway regular common carrier.

The ability to pick up and deliver on schedule anything, anywhere, has made regular common carriage a still growing $3 billion public service industry.

Highway regular common carriers are available to all persons requiring freight transportation services. Every manufacturer and merchant in the U. S. depends upon the services of this industry. Regular common carriers are therefore recognized and regulated as public utilities, and their prime obligation is to serve the public's freight needs.

The importance of regular common carriers to life itself is most dramatically realized when some natural disaster—a hurricane, flood or other disturbance — cuts off the flow of commerce into a community, and leaves it feeding upon itself. Only the resumption of regular common carrier traffic brings life and safety back into the community. But the daily job is every bit as vital.

The merchant can raise or lower prices subject to competition and no one may be the loser. But not the regulated public carrier.

After long and painful trial and error, the U. S. discovered that it cannot grant to private, managerial decision — regardless of how wise it may be — the simple right to provide or deny the lifesaving services of transportation to any person, producer or community.

Hence, the Federal regulation of public carriers by Congress, with the Act to Regulate Commerce which created the Interstate Commerce Commission. The Transportation Act of 1920 first gave the commission the authority to prescribe specific rates on interstate commerce. Motor carriers of property were placed under the jurisdiction of the Act of 1935 and recognized as an integral part of the national transportation system.

In 1940 Congress enunciated the National Transportation Policy which aspires to these goals: independent transport agencies; just and reasonable common carrier rates open to all without favor or discrimination; development of the inherent advantages of each mode of transport; equality of regulation as between carriers; and sound economic conditions among the carriers.

In an earlier day, whole regions, states and cities, seaports and new territories were dependent upon a single form of inland transportation. The nation's commerce rolled by the isolated communities of the land — the communities not served by the lone inland transportation system. This day has gone . . . because highway common carriers reach wherever public necessity requires.

The essential carrier of today is the motor common carrier on the highways for he serves all shippers plus all other types of carriers.

And it is the highway regular common carrier who invest millions in terminals, who buy and operate trucks, and provide employment for millions of men and women.

Highway regular common carriers make huge and direct contributions to the economy. And, as to America's defense, Maj. Gen. Paul F. Yount, Chief of Transportation, U. S. Army, has this to say:

"The maintenance of an experienced and qualified motor carrier industry trained in the movement problem involved in the shipment of supplies is deemed essential to meet the needs of national defense."

No time for birthdays

It has been a short, busy 97 years.

Since January 2, 1866, Columbus has grown from a town into Ohio's largest city in area. It has been our privilege to contribute to this growth and to keep pace with it. One of these years, we're going to take time out for a birthday.

This swift expansion of consumer demand for banking services has been matched by an equally swift development of new banking tools.

The newest such benefit to our customers is electronic banking. Our computer system, the first in any Central Ohio bank, is now processing more than 1500 checks a minute with electronic accuracy.

Neighborhood banking convenience also is being extended. Five offices have been added during 1962; the new Westview Office on Georgesville Road will open next spring.

As we enter our 98th year, we expect 1963 to be the shortest, busiest yet. Stop in when any of our complete banking or trust services will be helpful to you. We'd like you to be one of the reasons we keep so busy.

Increase In Loan Limits Helped Modern Finance To A Prosperous Year

L. Kirts Osborne, Jr., president of Modern Finance Co., with executive offices at 75 E. Gay-st, announced assets of Modern are now over $13½ million. He also reported a total of 27,911 finance transactions in the amount of $20,554,701 for the fiscal year ending Oct. 31.

According to Osborne, steady growth of Modern Finance Co. during the past year has been influenced by the new Ohio law allowing an increase in loan limits from $1000 to $2000.

L. Kirts Osborne Jr.

Modern Finance is in an excellent position to employ additional investment capital, because of the company's growth and future expansion plans, Osborne said. Residents of Ohio only are offered five per cent three-year subordinated investment certificates in the amounts of $100 to $25,000.

Money invested by Jan. 15 will earn five per cent from Jan. 1.

Modern Finance offers an additional service, in association with its small loans, that of Modern Budget accounts. These accounts enable people to finance product purchases and services from any merchant on a small monthly payment plan.

Officers and directors at Modern include L. Kirts Osborne, president; C. Bruce Osborne, executive vice president; Lloyd L. Osborne, vice president; Carl Tangeman, secretary and counsel; Gordon Y. Boyd, treasurer; and Frank D. Fults, assistant treasurer.

Under the management of the Osborne family, Modern has grown from three offices in 1942, to 23 offices in 19 Ohio cities. Branch offices are in Ashland, Barnesville, Bellefontaine, Coshocton, Defiance, Delaware, Franklin, Greenfield, Kenton, Lancaster, Lebanon, Lima, Mansfield, Marion, Marysville, Portsmouth, Springfield and Xenia. The firm also has four branch offices in Columbus.

ASSEMBLY LINES like the one shown above sustained a high volume of production last year as Western Electric's Columbus Works increased its output of telephone switching equipment for the Bell System. During the last quarter of 1962, employment at the huge 250 acre facility passed the 5,000 mark with an annual payroll of nearly $28 million.

Employment At Western Electric Reached New High Last Year

Employment at the Columbus works of the Western Electric Co. reached a new high during the fourth quarter of 1962 in its role of manufacturing telephone equipment for the Bell system.

The level attained was 4,800 employees for the Western Electric Co., and 200 employes for the Columbus branch laboratory of the Bell Telephone Laboratories, both at 6200 E. Broad-st.

Last quarter reports reveal an annual payroll of nearly $28 million and local purchases of $2½ million from over 300 suppliers. Nearly one-half of all purchases at the works, or $7 million, came from 930 firms within the state of Ohio.

The efforts of Western Electric's Columbus works are directed toward manufacturing equipment and apparatus which is installed in telephone exchanges.

Contributing to the growth of employment and high level of economic activity at the plant were research and development as well as expanded production on the Bell System's newest method of telephone communication, the electronic switching system. this system utilizes solid state components and computer devices, some of which operate in millionths of a second, to make telephone connections much faster than present methods. Production is currently underway for the first commercial office in Succassuna ,N.J.

Production continued on automatic number identification equipment, providing automatic identification of the subscriber's telephone number and billing information in making direct distance dialing calls.

Modifications and improvements on No. 5 crossbar equipment, also functional in the nationwide dial network, added to production levels. Plug-in and add-on features for this type of equipment to reduce installation effort, save space, and permit telephone companies to expand capacity, supplemented production.

There were no on-the-job fatalities during the year and the company received the Award of Honor from the National Safety Council for the operation of over 3,000,000 man-hours without a single employe sustaining a disabling injury.

The first full year of a nonpartisan course in practical politics, termed "democracy in action," was completed. Through the program employes and their spouses were given the opportunity to hear local political figures discuss the precinct level of government. At the request of the Franklin County Board of Elections, the company extended the use of the lobby as a polling place during the primary and general elections.

In the community, the company worked closely with the Motorist and Pedestrian Safety Organization in furthering highway safety practices; the American Red Cross Regional Blood Center frequently visited the plant to obtain blood donations; and, for the sixth year, the employes of Western Electric remained a "fair share" contributor to United Appeal.

The growth experienced during the year is indicative of the company's goal to provide better telephone service for the nation. As a citizen of the community Western Electric is pleased to have shared this growth with the public.

Egg prices the first half of 1963 are expected to average about one cent a dozen higher than during the first six months of 1962, predict Ohio State University Extension poultry specialists.

Columbus Building Activity Upped In 1962

In 1962 industrial and commercial expansion remained steady in some areas and in others dropped slightly. Ten new manufacturing businesses were established in 1962 as compared to 13 in 1961. Seventy-three new non-manufacturing businesses (wholesale, retail and service establishments) were established in 1962, compared with 101 in 1961.

Building activity rose sharply over 1961 in the manufacturing field while non-manufacturing surpassed all previous records. Eighty manufacturing firms invested $3,389,676 in new buildings and remodelings in 1962 while in 1961, 53 manufacturing firms invested $746,450. The greatest increase in construction was seen in the wholesale, retail and service area, with 643 firms investing a total of $45,407, 639, as compared with 597 investing $25,311,605 last year.

New industries included such products as sheet metal and plastic fabricating; electrical equpment; fire and burglar alarms; chemicals; and pre-cast concrete forms. New buildings, expansions and remodelings reached a peak, with no signs of seasonal slack: Lazarus constructed a branch store at Broad-st and Georgesville-rd at a cost of $2 million; the School Employees Retirement System of Ohio has under construction a $6,100,000 motor hotel at 50 N. Third-st, Charles E. Merrill Books, Inc., added a $500,000 wing, doubling their previous 60,000 sq. ft. floor space; the Columbus Public School System spent in excess of $7 million on new schools and remodeling of existing facilities; Buckeye Federal Savings & Loan Co. is building a $100,000 drive-in bank at 43 E. Long-st.

Two additional discount department stores appeared in Columbus this year — Arian's at Morse-rd and Cleveland-av, at a cost of $600,000; and Woolco's Graceland Store at $700,000; Chemical Abstracts announced its plans for a new building at Dodridge-st and the Olentangy River to be completed in phases, the first one due for completion in 1964 at a cost of $5 million.

An up-and-coming trend is seen in a number of small "growth industries" which have sprung up in the Columbus Area, during recent months. Common among these businesses is their contribution and/or application of technical knowledge in the field of research and development for modern industry.

The local appearance of firms in these highly specialized areas is indicative of the esources Columbus has to offer new and expanding technological efforts.

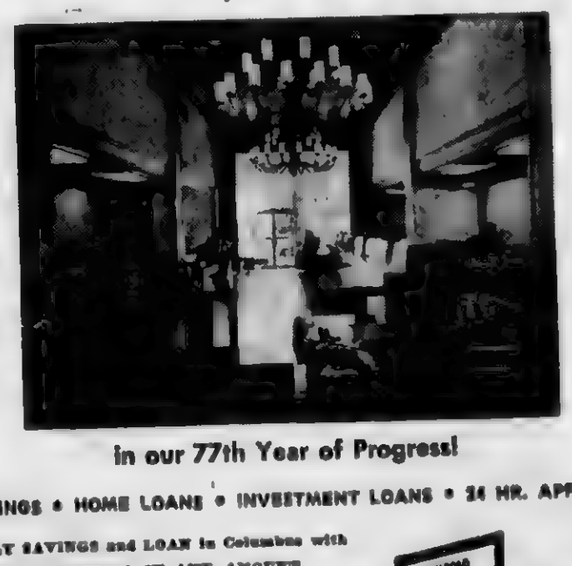
Among the most recent of these industries are: Code Credit Reports, Inc., dealing in uniform commercial code reporting services; Hennis Engitects, Inc., specializing in technical writing and industrial design; Poly-Tronics Corp., experts in molding, fabrication and application of expandable polystyrene in the appliance packaging, recreation, marine and building industries; Solidstate Controls, Inc., manufacturers of electrical equipment and devices; and Choloid Chemicals, Inc., a chemical manufacturer.

Defense contracts awarded to Columbus firms in the first half of 1962 amounted to $20,158,138 for 86 defense contracts. In the first half of 1961 $2 defense contracts were awarded amounting to $6,510,711.

Total investments of new industries and local business expansions amounted to $52,040,875 in 1962 as compared to $29,859,715 in 1961.

Home Mortgage Funds Will Be Ample

There seems to be plenty of money for home mortgages and prices seem fairly stable.



Some building experts predict 1.4 million homes to be built in 1963, but others report slow sales of older homes.

Easing of interest rates in some areas in 1962 seems unlikely to be reversed in 1963. One question at the end of December was how much, if any, new integration rules might affect sales and construction of new dwellings.

The crossbar switches for telephone central offices, line concentrators, and other communications equipment they manufacture help Ohio Bell Telephone Company and the 20 other Bell Telephone companies bring America the reliable and versatile telephone services we all take for granted.

1962 was an especially good year: More than 28 million dollars paid in wages or salaries. 7 million dollars' worth of supplies and equipment purchased by Western Electric from over 900 Ohio business firms. Many thousands of high-quality, precision-made communications products were turned out for the nationwide Bell System, with the design and development help of Bell Laboratories.

And this year should be even better. Yes, we're looking forward to 1963 here at Columbus!

NEW LOOK at the Railroad Savings and Loan Company's downtown office features remodeled front entrance, enlarged lobby, and new white and black marble front. The ceilings have been lowered, emphasizing new strip fluorescent lighting.

RAILROAD SPARKLES!

Savings Firm Has 'That New Look'

One of Columbus' most recent downtown additions is the new look of the Railroad Savings and Loan Co. at 60 E. Broad-st. Founded in 1884, the Railroad is the oldest savings and loan company in Columbus.

Improvements involved expansion as well as refurbishing. The front entrance was extended toward the street, enlarging the vestibule and lobby. The old front was replaced with white granite trimmed in black marble. An impressive street clock complements the new exterior identity.

Inside, the eye is immediately caught by the three large two-tier chandeliers, which spill light into the high ceiling. The public lobby is done in marble, while all company offices and working spaces are carpeted. In fact, the entire five story interior has been remodeled. Strip fluorescent lighting illuminates the second, third, fourth and fifth floors. The ceilings have been lowered, and solid cherry room dividers are used throughout.

The new elevator connecting the floors has been moved to the front of the building, allowing the use of more space space for company offices.

The six teller windows are equipped with three NCR posting machines. The vault has been re-faced in stainless steel. There is also a new 16-compartment teller's locker.

Heating and cooling units have been boosted, and storage and maintenance facilities have been enlarged.

The overall cost of the face-lifting amounted to $300,000. The entire project took seven months to complete.

Each person in the U.S. paid about $228 in food handling costs last year. This applied not only to the food he ate at home, but also to whatever he bought at restaurants and cafeterias.

First Community Village Will Open In February

Opening day for the nation's, newest and most exciting living center for older persons is fast approaching. Early in February pioneer residents of First Community Village are expected to move into the $5.6 million "community within a community" in the southwest corner of Upper Arlington, just off U.S. Rt. 33 at Waltham-rd.

As construction progresses towards an early summer completion date for the 496 accommodations, a steadily increasing number of persons will take the important step into what has been called, "a new way of life."

Some of the initial group of village residents have begun developing a program that will be an essential part of the village's concept of a "new way of life for older persons." The program is intended to offset the growing typical trend in society which deprives a community of the seasoned experience and judgment of those persons who helped its growth over the years.

All of this activity and considerably more is being planned by First Community's Minister-Director James W. Bidle but he has considerable help from the group of pioneer residents that have been meeting regularly at First Community Church, sponsor of the project, in anticipation of the day when the village will be their home.

As residents visit back and forth throughout the village they will be rewarded with refreshing variations that will make each major area in the village a new experience. Early American, Country French and complementing English and Italian motifs are tastefully blended in a contemporary manner that preserves the best of the traditional in settings of sturdy beauty, warmth and personality.

The individual residences in the cottage apartments offer a wide variety of interior stylings. From 12 basic interiors there are 48 possible variations.

Many other persons in the surrounding communities are also playing a vital part in the creation of this new living center for older persons. Most of them are members of First Community Church and through their participation on boards and committees of the church and village have been able to give this project far more talent and time than the sponsoring church could ever afford to hire. President of the village board is John V. Johnson.

Unemployment Reduced Here Last Year

The average rate of unemployment in Franklin, Union, Madison and Pickaway counties was reduced in 1962, according to Ralph E. Gabele, Columbus area manager, Ohio State Employment Service.

Non-agricultural job placements made by the OSES offices totaled 36,188 in 1962, representing a 19.2 per cent increase over 1961.

Placements in clerical, managerial, professional, technical and sales positions totaled 3,621 in 1962 — an increase of 59.5 per cent over 1961 figures.

Unemployment claims dropped 38.4 per cent below 1961 averages, Gabele said. The weekly number of persons drawing benefits in 1962 was listed at 4,358 compared to 7,076 in 1961.

Ohio Fuel To Expand Its Gas Facilities Here In '63

The Ohio Fuel Gas Co. plans to invest $130,000 in the Columbus area in 1963 for pipeline additions and replacements and other facilities to help meet constantly growing demands for gas.

Elden H. Davis, central district manager for Ohio Fuel, said deliveries of natural gas to the company's 193,890 customers in Columbus and Franklin County in 1962 totaled more than 51½ billion cubic feet — a six percent increase over 1961 and 95 percent more gas than the company delivered in this area 10 years ago.

As an indication of the importance of gas to local industries, Davis noted that 8.8 billion cubic feet of gas delivered to the industries by Ohio Fuel in 1962 also is almost twice as great as the annual industrial requirements of 10 years ago.

Some of Ohio Fuel's largest industrial customers are located in Franklin County, Davis said. Large volumes of gas are needed in the glass, roller bearing, structural clay products and metal fabrication industries here.

Davis said gas is used to melt, anneal, shape, and bend various types of glassware, and in making glass fibers. In metal fabrication, gas provides heat for forging and shaping of metal. In structural clay products, gas is used to fire and cure many types of building bricks and tile.

The use of gas in Columbus and Franklin County homes has almost doubled in the last decade. Gas is used in homes for heating, cooling, cooking, clothes drying, water heating, dishwashing, incineration and refrigeration.

Ohio Fuel's ability to meet the growing needs for gas—in homes and in industry—is due to the company's long-range expansion and improvement program, Davis said.

Davis said Ohio Fuel customers in Columbus and Franklin County have these advantages:

1. Supply through six major transmission lines.
2. A re-built and enlarged medium pressure system that forms the "backbone" of gas distribution here.
3. More than 1,643 miles of pipelines in Franklin County alone to deliver gas to customers.
4. Nearby underground storage facilities which on cold winter days supply as much as 59 percent of the gas here. At the start of the current heating season Ohio Fuel's 10 underground storage areas contained 210 billion cubic feet of gas.

Gas that goes into storage areas is delivered to Ohio from the Southwest through cross-country pipelines. It is pumped into storage areas in summer and held until it is withdrawn in winter.

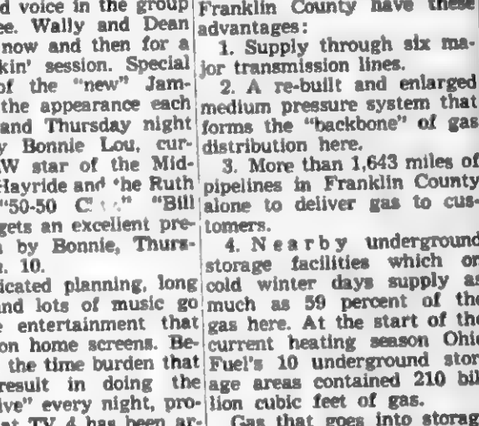
Davis said Ohio Fuel in 1962 spent $2,925,000 to install 98 miles of new pipelines and other facilities in Columbus and Franklin County.

TV 4 Begins 1963 With Change In 'Jamboree' Format

"Gonna Have a Big Time Tonight!" was the first song by the Lucky Pennies on the "new" Jamboree show on TV 4, Monday night, Jan. 7, at 7 p.m. The song fits the new format and style of the weeknight TV 4 feature.

Performing in country and western music, Dean Richards, the Lucky Pennies, and regular guest Bonnie Lou, all from the Saturday night Midwestern Hayride, are featured with TV 4 talent stalwart Clay Eager. Other Midwestern Hayride stars like Bobby Bobo and Zeke and Billy are to be frequent guests.

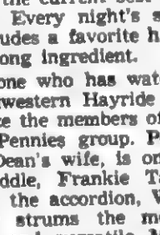
Since the premiere of Jamboree in September, it has garnered a large nightly audience for the "down-home" style country and western music that features old-time favorites as well as tunes high on the current best seller lists. Every night's show also includes a favorite hymn as a strong ingredient.



Any one who has watched the Midwestern Hayride will recognize the members of the Lucky Pennies group. Penny West, Dean's wife, is on the bass fiddle, Frankie Taylor handles the accordion, Wally Proctor strums the melody guitar, and versatile Monty Monohan plays the fiddle and trumpet plus a variety of other instruments.

Leader Dean Richards, besides adding guitar rhythm, is the lead voice in the group and emcee. Wally and Dean team up now and then for a banjo-pickin' session. Special feature of the "new" Jamboree is the appearance each Monday and Thursday night of pretty Bonnie Lou, current WLW star of the Midwestern Hayride and the Ruth Lyons' "50-50 C[illegible]." "Bill Bailey" gets an excellent presentation by Bonnie, Thursday, Jan. 10.

Complicated planning, long hours, and lots of music go into the entertainment that is seen on home screens. Because of the time burden that would result in doing the show "live" every night, production at TV 4 has been arranged so the Tuesday and Wednesday shows are done "live" and then, on those nights, three more 20-minute shows are video-taped for the remaining week nights.



This is an easier, more economical, and efficient method to present the best possible shows to viewers. It keeps the talent more rested and refreshed for livelier shows.

Economist Says No To '63 Recession

Geoffrey Browne, managing director of the Economist Intelligence Unit, the world's leading international research group, says 1963 may be the beginning of bigger and better things.

Taking a world-wide look, EIU predicts this year will see no recession

"Sophisticated techniques for combating recession, plus progress toward wider free trade, should form effective insurance against a major setback," Browne said.

Upward Trend In Home Building To Continue Thru '63

By JOHN E. SANDEFUR,
1962 President
Home Builders Association of Greater Columbus

The home building industry of greater Columbus has experienced a good year during 1962. The market for new houses and apartments retained its 1961 upward trend and continued to improve, especially during the summer and early fall.

The total number of units will show an appreciable increase over the 1961 volume and, in fact, will be near record setting in results.

The 1962 Parade of Homes, sponsored by the HBA of Greater Columbus, in the Gacellent attendance and could hanna area attracted an exeasily have been considered an indication of the areas continued and growing interest in new homes. The variety of models on display during the parade was also indicative of the wide range available throughout the central Ohio area.

Tri-level homes have sold well for the past few years, but sales during 1962 were stimulated by several bi-level or raised ranch models along with renewed interest in story and one half and full two-story houses.

Larger families and ever increasing lot prices have prodded the return of two story houses. Speculative builders, especially those building in large developments, have all added bi-level and two-story models during 19EX

Home building remained competitive and will continue to be so because each builder knows he must not only outmaneuver his competition, but also build houses that will motivate presently satisfied old home owners and apartment dwellers into become prospects for new house sales with their many advances and advantages.

The Columbus area has attracted attention due to its fortunate position of economic stability. This factor has and will continue to help the home building industry during 1963. Economic stability encourages population growth through both migration into the area and retention of young people.

Long term debt, such as a 20 or 25 year mortgage, is much more acceptable to all segments of the population when the economy is stable and growing steadily as it is in the greater Columbus area. Mortgage funds have also been available through conventional, FHA and VA sources and this factor can also be given credit for helping make 1962 an excellent new home year.

Columbus has many shelter craftsmen, yet the builder has the problem of scheduling the available trader and crafts due to the high demand on their services. The home building industry appears to enjoy a good builder, subcontractor, craft and material situation and hopes to continue in the present harmonious fashion.

The coming year appears to hold a continued increase in the demand for housing units. Apartment building, which has been at a very high level during 1962 may taper off by late 1963 unless occupancy take a sudden surge upward. The market for single family homes may equal 1962 provided unforseen circumstances do not adversely affect the market.

New families will continue to move into the area, the first echelon of war babies are starting to get married, the economy is good, mortgage money is available, a limited number of houses are on hand and others will be built—therefore, 1963 should be a good year for the housing industry.

The industry has always contributed substantially to the economics and business health of greater Columbus and will contiuue to do so throughout 1963 and beyond.

Announce Burger Chef Appointment

James K. Smith has been appointed Columbus area supervisor for the Burger Chef Systems, by Frank P. Thomas, president of the Indianapolis firm.

Smith has over 15 years of retail sales experience and has been manager of several Columbus area chain stores. He lives at 584 S. Ashburton-st with his wife and four children.

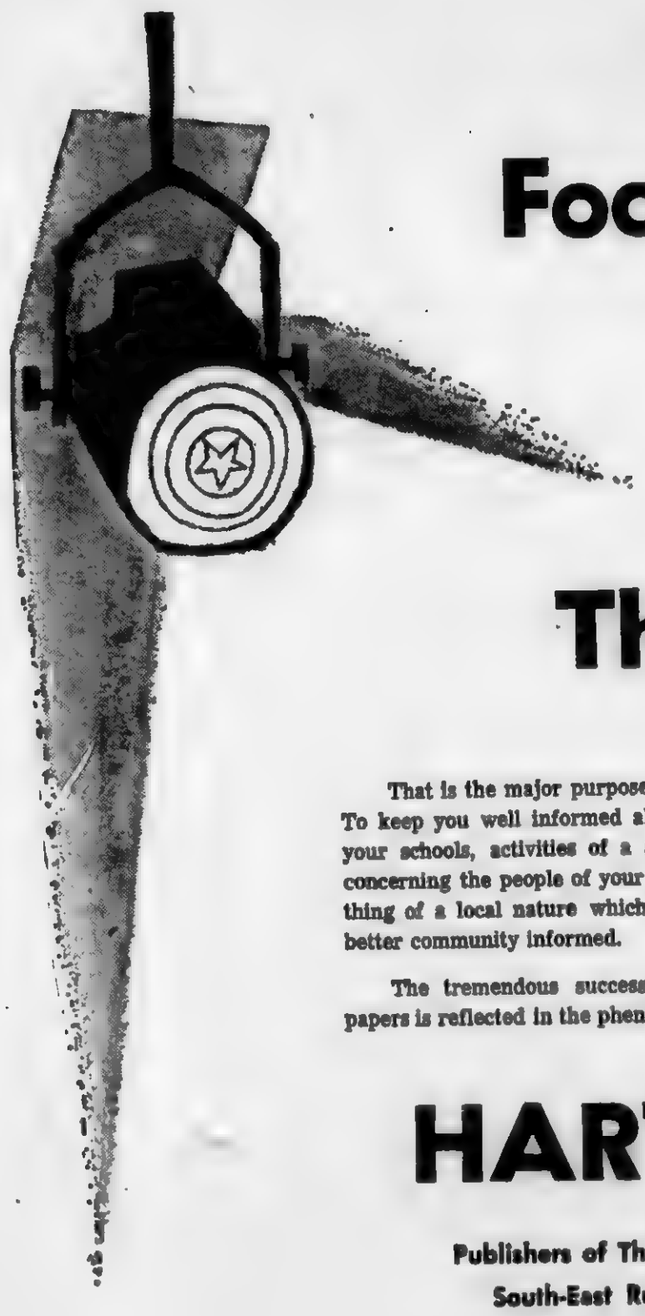
The three Burger Chef locations in Columbus, 3825 Indianola, 1449 Oakland-pk and 3517 Sullivant-av, are part of a national franchise chain which has more than 200 stores in 27 states.

Independents Report Gain

Telephone companies other than those affiliated with the Bell System report a rapid growth rate in 1962. However, the number of companies continued to decrease.

Harold R. Bollinger, president of the U.S. Independent Telephone Association, said the rate of growth of the independents was about 33 per cent ahead of the Bell System.

Bollinger said the primary reason was because independents serve suburban and rural area where population growth has been greatest in recent years.



Personal income per person of farm population (from all sources) was $1373 in 1961. This was about 60 per cent of that received by non-farm population. Incomes expected to increase this year and further increases likely in 1963. This expectation would reflect the continuing decline in the farm population and relative stability in aggregate net farm income.

Focusing attention upon The Community!

That is the major purpose of Hartley Newspapers. . . . To keep you well informed about your local governments, your schools, activities of a social nature, feature stories concerning the people of your community . . . in fact everything of a local nature which serves to permit you to be better community informed.

The tremendous success enjoyed by Hartley Newspapers is reflected in the phenomenal increase in circulation. More than 74,000 homes in the Columbus area receive a Hartley publication each week. This means that some 250,000 persons are regular readers of our newspapers.

Little wonder that we stick out our chests and opine that "focusing attention upon the community" has been responsible to a great extent for our greatly increased circulation, which has more than tripled in a decade.

Homes are currently being built and sold in Holly Hill, off Sullivant-av; Devonshire, about one mile east of Worthington on Rt. 161; Yorkshire, on Noe-Bixby-rd, between Main and Livingston in East Columbus, and in Greentree, Reynoldsburg.

Fritsche builds on a custom basis throughout the area, including residential, multi-family and single family residences.

The Fritsche organization, one of the largest residential builders in the area, is fully staffed to provide its own land planning, development, engineering, design, field supervision, maintenance and sales.

IN THE PAST 12 YEARS Ernest G. Fritsche and Co. has built more than 2,000 homes in Columbus and Franklin County. Most of them are located in exclusive Fritsche communities shown above.

Fritsche homes are being built in price categories ranging from $12,000 to the "over $25,000 group."

When asked for background information on the growth and success of his organization, President Ernest G. Fritsche said, "We make every effort to build good and lasting value into every home, no matter what the price. We try to plan each community so that it will result in better living for the residents."

"Beyond that," Fritsche continued, "our $9.95 total cash down payment plan has proved a great boon to many of our buyers. By enabling them to buy and get into a new house," he said, "without laying out all their cash savings."

"One of the best proofs of this I have," Fritsche concluded, "is that about 40 per cent of our sales in the latest section of Holly Hill opened last fall came from referrals by residents in our earlier sections. Nearly all have used our $9.95 plan."

Production Costs Kept Net Farm Income From Rising In 1962; No Relief Seen

Net farm income in 1962 is little changed from 1961 and is expected to hold steady in 1963. While gross income has risen each year since 1959, production costs have kept pace, leaving the net stationary, but divided among fewer farmers.

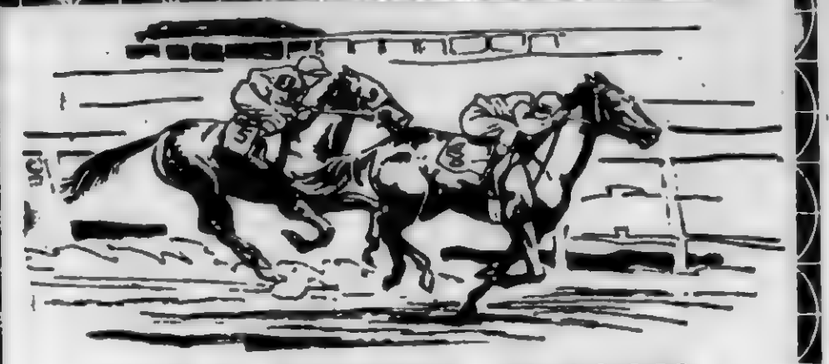
Number of consumers has increased about 2 per cent per year for the past 20 years, and farm output during the same period increased about 2.5 per cent annually. Per person consumption held practically constant. This build up of production above consumption results in an abundance of food for consumers, but tends to depress prices to producers.

Price supports for 1962 were little changed from 1961 rates. Wheat support increased slightly - soybeans, manufactured milk and butterfat all had slightly lower supports in 1962.

Farming costs in 1963 are expected to continue their upward trend of recent years. The rise will come chiefly from non-farm items used in production. Farm produced goods (feed etc.) will remain about the same. Prices received by farmers will likely sag slightly, especially on wheat and livestock. This means a slight worsening in the relative position of farmers.

A look at prices paid by farmers for production items show sharpest increases in wage rates, real estate taxes, motor vehicles and machinery, compared to the 1910-14 base period. Among the items purchased for living, building materials, auto and supplies and clothing had largest increases.

Land values are expected to continue their upward trend. In Ohio, the 1962 index was 308 per cent of 1910-14. Farm real estate debt increases at about the same rate as real estate values and stands at about 10 per cent of the value of real estate.



Total farm assets climb rapidly, and assets per farm even more sharply as size of farms increases and numbers decrease.

Livestock production responds to feed supply and to [illegible] demand. Meat consumption per capita has increased from 142 to 197 pounds per person over a 27 year period. Poultry more than doubled, beef increased 60 per cent — while pork showed little increase and veal and lamb each showed decrease.

Moderate producer response to improved prices for hogs during 1961 and early 1962 kept hog numbers within limits which maintained strong prices. Indications point to slightly lower hog prices the first half of 1963 as compared to a year earlier. Change in

Farm debt expected to reach $29.3 billion on Jan. 1, 1963, an increase of about six per cent or $1.6 billion since Jan. 1, 1962. CCC loans probably declined in 1962. Farmers' use of credit continuing to rise strongly in 1962, expected needs to increase again in 1963. Reflects joint effects of new technologies and cost-price squeeze.

Retailers Reach The $1 Billion Sales Mark

By P. D. Hale
Retail Merchants Assn.

The year 1962 has been a good one for the retail merchants of the Columbus Metropolitan Area.

It seems reasonable to predict that for the first time of record the retail sales volume of the area will be at or near the one billion dollar mark.

Estimates are based on figures gathered from the Fourth Federal Reserve Bank of Cleveland and the Bureau of Business Research of Ohio State University. They show respectively gains of five per cent to date in department store volume and an 8.9 per cent "all type store" gain for the first 10 months of the year.

The year's record distribution of goods required the facilities of more than 5,000 retail outlets and gave employment to approximately 40,000 people.

Population increases, higher incomes and an estimated increase of more than 500,000 square feet of retail floor space, played leading roles in the results achieved. Too, alert stores used every means at their command to increase their share of the market, to cut costs and in every way possible to give more quality and quantity for the sales dollar.

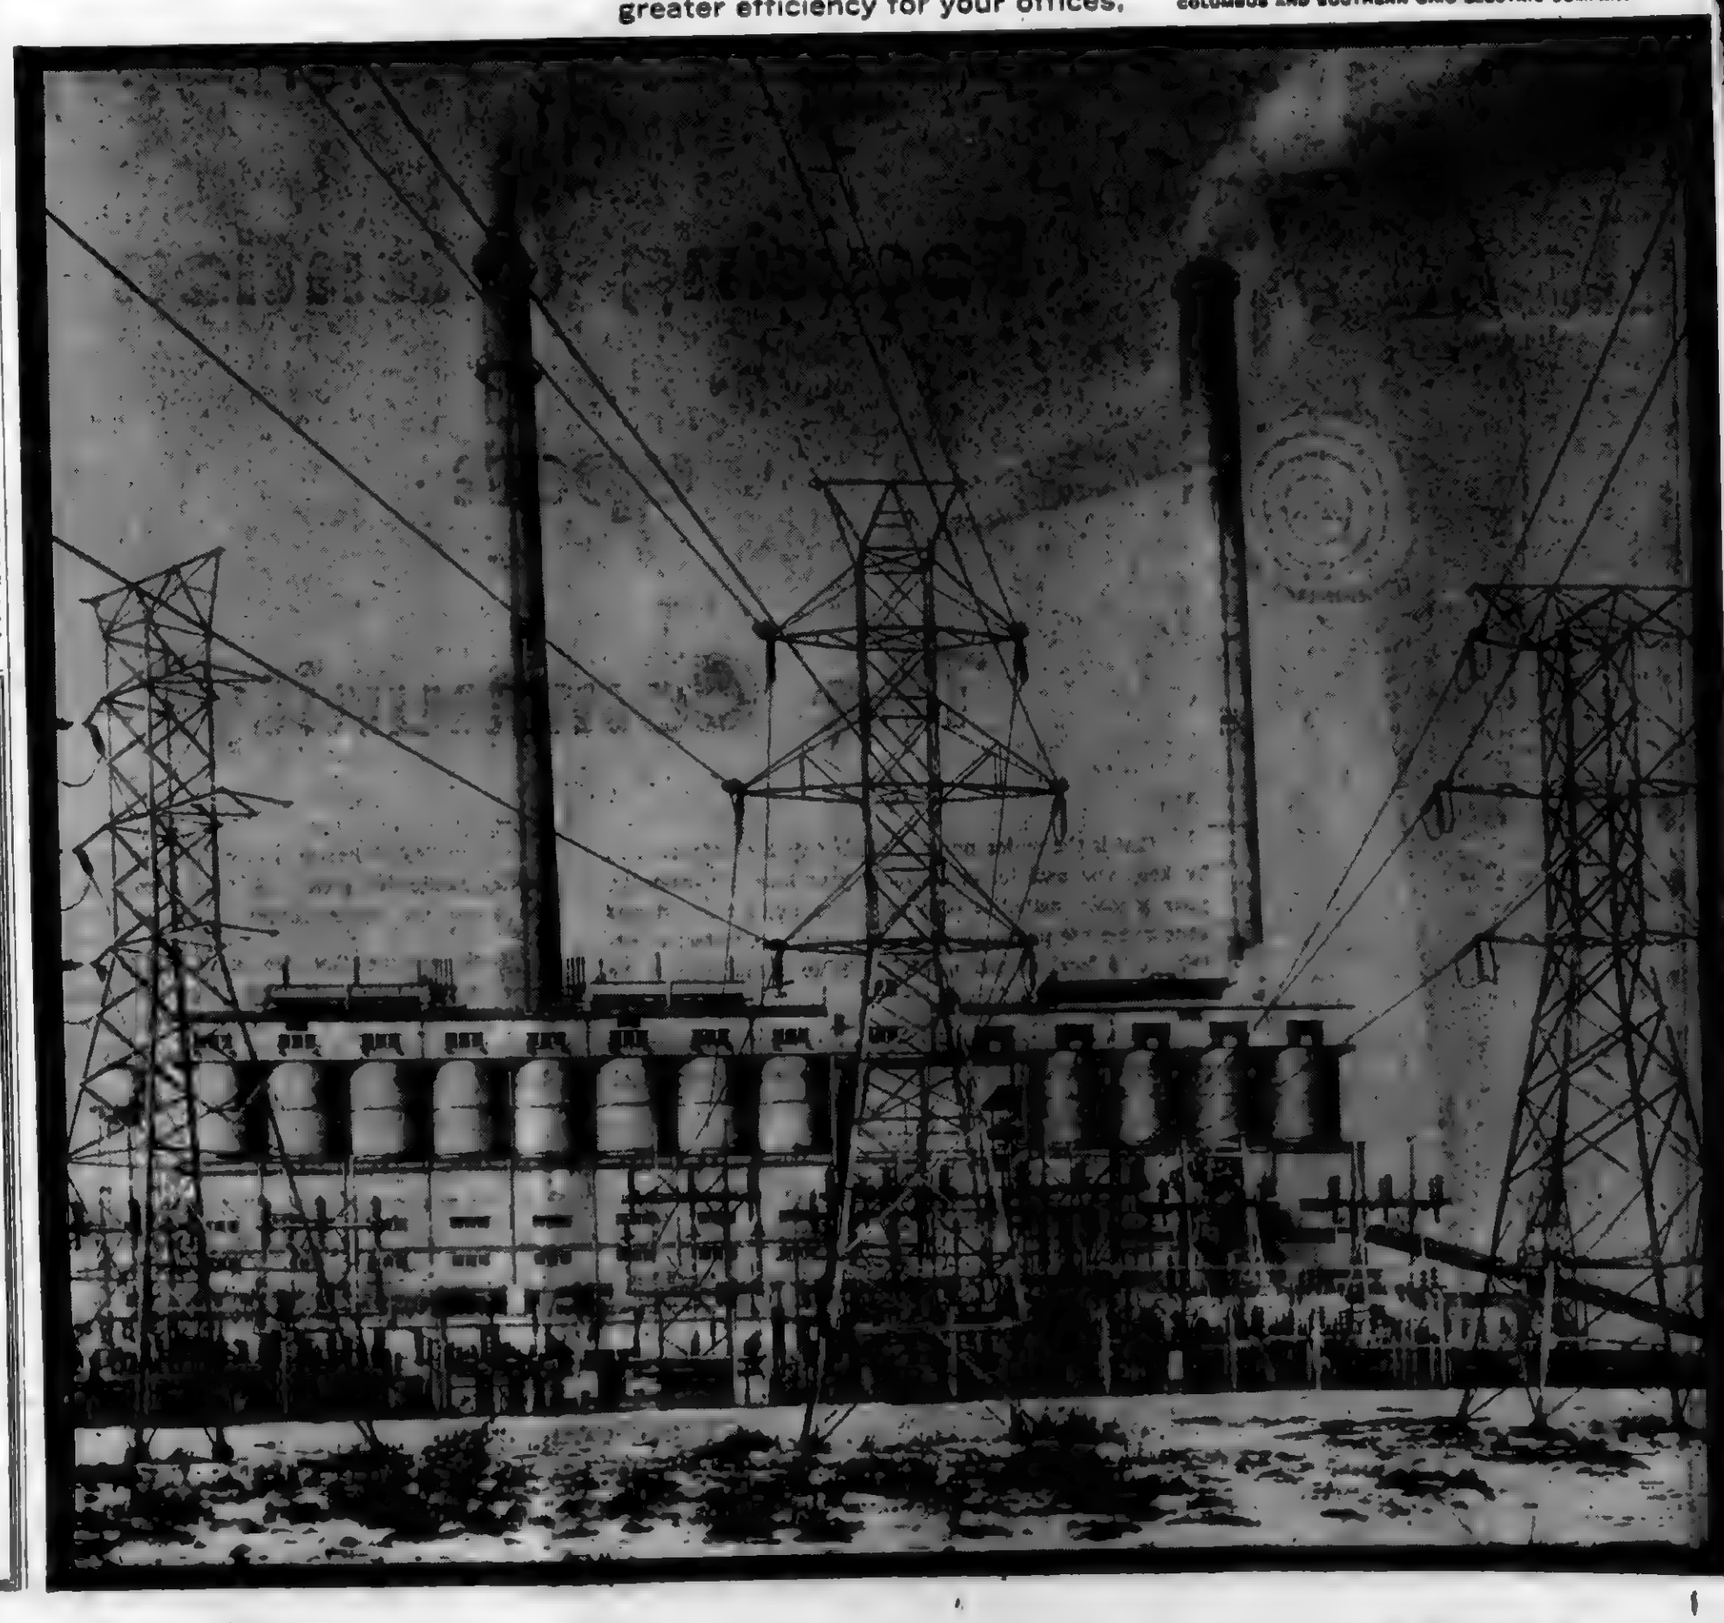
The keen competition has worked to the advantage of the customer and to the desirability of the Columbus market as a place to shop.

The year has been marked by the rapid expansion of the retail industry, increasing interest of government in regulatory efforts in advertising and display, credit, labeling, etc., a widespread effort to regulate the sale of merchandise on Sunday, and a changing pattern of shoppers' habits and needs.

All have left their mark on the policies and practices of the stores, and all are of value in the shaping of plans to better serve the buying public.

Increased spending by government and business is anticipated and will still further bolster the economy of the city. Tax cuts, if voted in the new year, will add a real spark to all 1963 business.

The year will also see the addition of many new and expanding retail facilities, including some old names and some names new to the city. Plans are in the drawing board stage for many of these ventures, and each in turn, when opened to the public, will add to the drawing power of the Columbus market.



Completion of additional stretches of our expressway program, increase in the number of new commercial buildings, which offer employment to potential retail customers, in new hotels and apartments which offer living space near the heart of the city—all will be helpful to retail business and especially to those located in the Core area.

Of one thing we may be sure: Columbus merchants will meet the challenges of 1963 as aggressively as they know how, and this effort, coupled with the generally favorable business climate that exists at this time, will insure another good year of business for the merchant, and increased service and satisfaction for the customer.

"CUSTOMERS ARE FRIENDS, not just people who spend money," is the motto on which the Christian Book Store, 179 S. High-st, is operated. Here the proprietor, Mrs. Mildred Smith, displays one of the store's many inspirational books. According to Mrs. Smith, public interest in religious writings have increased immensely in the past several years.

'Personal Touch' Is Book Store Theme

By JERRY WOLFROM

From an obscure bookstore clerk to director of National Christian Book Sellers Association best describes the rapid success story of Mr. Mildred Smith, owner of the Christian Book Store, 179 S. High-st.

And for Mrs. Smith, who has made a fabulous success of her business despite no training or experience, the friends she has made in the store are more gratifying than any monetary considerations.

"We try for a personal touch," she says. "Our store is not merely a place to spend money—it's a place to make friends."

The thriving Christian Book Store had no church accounts or regular customers in 1953 when Mrs. Smith took over. Today the shop can boast of over 400 church accounts and an important list of professional leaders who drop in regularly.

"They ask for commentaries, and concordances — helps in understanding the Bible, and for inspirational writings" Mrs. Smith explained earnestly. She commented that more and more people are realizing a need for need for strength and wisdom.

The store is well stocked with religious books, records, greeting cards, sheet music, paintings, jewelry, art objects, and ceramic novelties. All merchandise is carefully hand-picked by the owner who makes regular buying trips to New York, Chicago, St. Louis, Miami, and Washington.

Mrs. Smith noted that religious gifts were quite popular as Christmas presents. "This has been a continuous trend since I've been here," she said. Christian records for children were perhaps the largest single item preferred by parents for their children, she commented.

Alone and frightened in a strange city when her husband, a young naval pilot, died soon after the family's transfer to Columbus, Mrs. Smith threw herself into the unknown enterprise in an effort to forget her grief.

Today she is listed among the top 10 booksellers in a three-state area.

EXPANSION AND CONSTRUCTION KEYNOTED

Long-Range Planning During '62 Highlighted Church Activity Here

By Dr. G. Weir Hartman,
Executive Director Columbus Area Council of Churches

Keeping pace with the growth of Columbus in these expansive times, are the churches and their services to the community. Each year witnesses an expansion that could not possibly have been forseen a decade ago. Not only have the churches been forced to expand rapidly, but have had to do emergency long-range planning at the same time.

New Congregations

One measure of growth is the number of new congregations and buildings that have come into being in 1962. Dozens of new plants are in the process of being constructed and enlarged. Six locations for new congregations were approved by the denominations through their survey and comity committee of the Columbus Area Council of Churches. Soon there will be congregations serving in those areas where none now exists.

No less than 84 new congregations have been established since 1945; the rate of expansion remains undiminished.

Another notable advance in Central Ohio is the development of Church-related housing for retired and senior citizens. Just a year ago, Bristol Village at Waverly was purchased by the Presbyterian Incorporation, Church Homes, Inc. of which Boulevard Presbyterian Church of Upper Arlington is a party. The project will provide for 365 family units.

This year also has seen the ground-breaking and partial construction of First Community Village, a project of First Community Church. The Village will provide housing for 450 families, the first of which will be ready for occupancy before the end of the year. The minister-director for the Village is Rev. James Bidle, and business manager is Robert Keller.

On Dec. 16, ground was broken for the Lutheran Senior City on Rt. 62 at Parkview-av. The city will provide 269 housing units, with some infirmary facilities at a cost of $2,650,000.00. Heading this project for the Lutheran Welfare League is the Rev. Arthur Rismiller, Geriatics Chaplain for the League.

Council Membership Grows

During 1862, eight congregations voted voluntarily to become members of the Council of Churches. Four of these are newly-organized congregations which have had their first opportunity to make application, and the other four are older congregations.

This brings the formal membership in the Council to 152 congregations in the metropolitan area, the largest number of churches ever to hold membership.

Beginning Jan. 1, there is a Department of Faith and Order in the structure of the Council of Churches.

Faith and Order is the Department that has for its concern, matters of theological questions. What is the nature of the church? What is the nature of man? Is he the child of God or is he the child of Satan? What is Christian Baptism? What is the nature of the Christian Ministry and Ordination?

These and many related theological questions are the concern of Faith and Order. This concern was first developed on the world level, where denominations met in world conclave to face their differences. It attempts reconciliation and mutual reognition in looking toward the greater unity of the church.

It has made such an impact on the world scene, that now local congregations are involving themselves in this kind of confrontation. Chairman of the new department is the Rector of St. Stephen's Episcopal Church in Columbus, Mr. Jonathan N. Mitchell. This department involving local congregations, will parallel the theological studies that are being carried on by the denominational families. Its end result will be greater rapprochement among the denominations and a greater pathway to church unity.

Chaplaincy Services

Chaplaincy services in hospitals and institutions continue to be a growing service and concern of the churches. The year 1962 was the second year of the full-time services of a Protestant Chaplain at Grant Hospital. A donation from a citizen who underwrote the program for a year initiated the service, and this year another citizen made a memorial gift which helped to continue the program.

Presently chaplains are serving the Juvenile Detention Center, Mercy Hospital, Benjamin Franklin Tuberculosis Hospital, Franklin County Home and Alum Crest Hospital, and the Court of Domestic Relations under the auspices of the cooperating churches.

Among the hopes for 1963 is that of instituting services in additional hospitals where no chaplains are now serving.

Strengthening Cooperation

Churches of the Columbus area made noteworthy advances during the year in their spirit and degree of cooperation. As indicated above, eight more churches came into membership in the Council, and advances were made in organizational matters and financial support. The spirit of cooperation is growing as well as the trend toward unity.

It is noteworthy that the current president of the Council of Churches is a layman. He is Henry C. Ruegg, trust officer in the Ohio National Bank, and a member of the Westgate EUB Church.

Ruegg's term of service is concurrent with that of an industrialist who is president of the National Council of Churches, Irwin J. Miller, of Columbus, Ind., a member of the Christian Church, Disciples. I might also add, that a laywoman heads the Ohio Council of Churches. She is Frances Kapitsky, of Strasburg, a member of the Evangelical and Reformed Church.

For the first time, the Council of Churches designed and adopted an official emblem this year. It is a drawing of the city of Columbus, with a cross against the sky above the skyline, within a frame which is the outline of Franklin County, the normal community which the Council serves. Around the picture are two concentric circles within which is the name of the Council.

Throughout the years of its use, the symbol will identify the Council and its concern for the city and the metropolitan area which it serves.

Some insects have been brought into the United States purposely, then released in order to control harmful insects, say Ohio State University Extension entomologists.

Inheritance Taxes Hit New High

Inheritance taxes collected in Ohio this year amounted to $27,367,324.53 according to a tabulation of tax settlements filed with State Auditor James A. Rhodes by county auditors.

This is a new record for one year, Rhodes said, exceeding by more than three million dollars collections in 1961 totaling $24,200,234.

One-half of the tax goes to the municipality or township where it originated. The other half is paid into the state's general revenue fund after deducting the fees allowed the offices of the county auditor and the county treasurer. These fees amounted to $926,976 this year, leaving $12,756,433.99 as the state's share.

The inheritance and estate taxes collected in the largest six counties of the state amounted to more than $17.7 million, or almost two-thirds of the total state collections. Cuyahoga county led as usual with $6,468,437.32, followed by Hamilton with $5,264,704.84; Franklin, $2,148,363.19; Lucas $1,532,862.12; Montgomery, $1,185,863.99; Summit, $1,148,926.26.

Inheritance taxes collected in Franklin County in 1962 were $2,148,363 and in 1961, $1,917,536.

Three Major Expansion Steps Slated At Huntington

A list of progressive moves scheduled for 1963 has been announced by John E. Stevenson, chairman, and Clair E. Fultz, president, of the Huntington National Bank of Columbus.

The list includes:

Ground-breaking ceremonies for Huntington West, Columbus' newest multi-story office building to be constructed at Broad and Third-sts.

Opening of the bank's ninth office, on Georgesville-rd, south of W Broad-st.

Addition of still more elements of the Huntington's electronic computer system, the first such "brain" to be operated in a central Ohio bank.

These steps, designed to further increase the Huntington's capacity to serve Columbus and central Ohio families and businesses, follow on the heels of a particularly busy year.

During 1962 Huntington opened a new office at 1531 W. Lane-av; extended its services to Grove City through a merger with the First National Bank of Grove City; built a new office in the Amos Shopping Center on Cleveland-av, and added offices in Canal Winchester and Groveport through the merger with the Peoples' Bank of Canal Winchester.

In 1962 the first units of the bank's Burroughs electronic computer system were installed in a special air-conditioned and sound-proofed room. The sorter-reader unit has been thoroughly "field-tested," operators have been trained, and the errorless "brain" is processing more than 1500 checks a minute.

"Our 97th year has been the busiest and most productive in history," said Stevenson and Fultz, "but we confidently expect 1963 will see still greater progress.

"The Huntington National Bank has one purpose, to provide helpful service to the families and businesses of Columbus and central Ohio. So long as the demand for these services increases, we will continue to expand to make them available."

management methods and concentration of hog production in larger units appear to be leveling out the traditional "hog cycle."

Milk production was nearly 1 billion pounds greater than 1961. This increase has caused the CCC purchase of about 8 percent of the 1962 product as compared to 6.5 percent in 1961 and 3 percent in 1960. With lowered supports, prices for early 1963 may be below the same period in 1962, but after April 1 are expected to run about the same as 1962.

Bulk tank and super pool premiums are likely to continue to disappear, affecting producer income.

Local Taxes May Rise

There seems to be a better than even chance that some kind of a federal tax cut is due for the nation in 1963.

But state and local governments are under pressure to raise their taxes in order to support their public facilities.

Several economists say if local governments do not immediately raise taxes, they will turn to debt financing—meaning more taxes in the future.

Forty-seven counties produce two-thirds of the potatoes raised in the United States, says the Agricultural Marketing Service of the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

DOWN 13 PER CENT

School Drop-Out Rate Decreased Last Year

By Joseph L. Davis and Lyle H. Hamilton
Public Information Office
Columbus Public Schools

January

Columbus Public School teachers received an across-the-board salary hike, the first of two increases in 1962 made possible by the passage of a school tax levy in November, 1961. The starting salary of a bachelor's-degree teacher was boosted to $4400 and of a master's-degree teacher to $4700.

Frank S. Williams was elected president of the Board of Education and Paul R. Langdon, vice-president. Dr. Watson H. Walker began serving his freshman year on the board and Mrs. Ralph H. Davidson was appointed to fill the unexpired term of William R. Fornof, who resigned to assume new duties as a city councilman.

Another $5000 check — the ninth in the past nine years — was sent to Columbus Superintendent Harold H. Eibling by an anonymous donor. As in the past, the money was granted to 10 teachers selected by the school system for projects to improve education.

Columbus Public Schools continued their amazing growth pattern as enrollments hit 88,499, more than double the 1948 enrollment. The growth rate has made Columbus the second largest school system in Ohio and twice in recent years the second fastest growing system in the nation. Continued increases of 4,500 pupils or more are expected for the near future.

February

During a month-long Festival of Freedom, special attention was given to the development in every child of a better understanding of his rights and freedoms. Teachers encouraged students to engage in activities that made them think about and express themselves on the privileges of American citizenship.

The dropout rate in Columbus Public Schools was announced as being reduced from nearly 50 per cent to about 37 per cent, according to a study made by H. M. Williams, director of pupil personnel. Using the current fifth-grade class as a base, this means that 63 out of every 100 pupils can be expected to finish high school.

March

A district-wide emergency alerting system was initiated. The system makes use of the facilities of the Board of Education's FM radio station, WCBE. In case of an emergency, small monitors attached to FM radio sets in each school are energized by a signal from the WCBE transmitter.

April

The Board of Education lengthened the elementary school day by 30 minutes and thereby added the equivalent of 18 days to the school year. Increased time resulted from changing the elementary schedule to 8:45 to 11:45 a.m. and 1 to 3:30 p.m. The schedule had been 9 a.m. to noon and 1:15 to 3:15 p.m.

Effective Apr. 1, Board of Education granted salary increases to many civil service and unclassified personnel of the school system.

Contracts totalling $364,864 for the construction of Eastmoor Junior High School were awarded.

The Board of Education adopted a new science textbook series for grades three through six; two new music textbook series, one for kindergarten and the first grade and one for grades two to four; and a new history book for grade four. The new history text was "Columbus, the Buckeye Capital," by Miss Anamae Martin, a supervising principal of the Columbus Public Schools.

May

Contracts for the remodeling of East High School were awarded.

Contracts were awarded for the construction of Kenwood and Salem elementary schools. Total amount of all contracts for both buildings was $620,944.

June

Superintendent Harold H. Eibling was named as one of the 14 winners of the American Educators Medal awarded by the Freedoms Foundation at Valley Forge in nationwide competition.

The Board of Education adopted eight textbooks for use in secondary schools. The adoptions included new texts for third-year Latin, third- and fourth-year German, eleventh-grade health education, modified English (grades seven to 11), seventh-grade modified geography, and ninth-grade modified general science.

Remodeling of North High School was started. Contracts for the summer work amounted to $323,000.

July

The budget of the Columbus Public Schools for 1963 totalled $40,049,810.88, an increase of just under $1 million over 1962. The slight increase was due to normal growth of enrollment. The net operating budget proposed for 1963 was $33,729,795, compared to $33,466,889.77 in 1962.

September

The Board of Education passed a resolution encouraging the instructional staff "to continue in every reasonable way to make such use of classroom, assembly room or other types of prayers as they in their own good judgment shall deem proper, fitting and appriate to the occasion."

Columbus Public School issued a teaching guide entitled "Americanism Versus Communism" for use in the senior high school Principles of Democracy course.

October

The personnel office of the Columbus Public Schools reported it held 4,025 interviews before recommending a record of 617 new teachers. The expanded staff of teaching per-

Boy Scout Council Served 131,391 Youths Last Year

By R. W. (Roe) Lutz
Central Ohio Council

In the nine-county area of Central Ohio Council over 25,000 boys were on rolls during 1962 in one of the three programs: Cub Scouting (ages 8-10); Boy Scouting (ages 11-13); and Exploring (ages 14-17). We have 131,391 boys in the council territory between ages 8-17.

The year ended with a total of 660 Cub Packs, Scout Troops and Explorer Posts, Ships and Squadrons. This is a net increase of 70 units.

More than 7,500 men and women gave thousands upon thousands of hours as leaders, assistants, commissioners, den mothers and committeemen.

Four hundred two sponsors (churches, PTA's, lodges, schools, service clubs and similar organizations), use the scouting program as part of their total program in achieving their overall youth objectives. This is a net increase of 42 sponsors.

The 2110 boys and adults completed council conducted nationally approved training courses during the year.

There were 9214 rank advancements during the year (Wolf, Bear, Lion, 2nd Class, 1st Class, Star, Life and Eagle) Over 6,700 merit badges were earned with a noticeable increase in the outdoor and physical fitness groups.

A record 2550 scouts plus leaders were in summer camp at Lazarus, the largest in the council's history in one season. Fifty-one Scouts, Explorers and leaders took the Council Philmont trek. One hundred sixty-four Scouts and leaders participate in wilderness canoe trips and almost 6000 Scouts and leaders took part in the district camporees throughout the area.

Assistance was given to town and city government and to such organizations and activities as Ohio State University, toys for tots, museums, united funds, blood banks, community chests, hospitals, Sabin on Sunday.

Seventy-three per cent of operating budget comes from the above sources. The balance must be raised through individual adult sustaining membership enrollments.

Highlights of 1962

Through the efforts of a dedicated group of scouters and with the help of a sympathetic public a camp capital development fund campaign for $750,000 was oversubscribed at the victory dinner in March of '62.

Camp development has already begun in Greenhills Reservation, south of Logan, and will be in operation in June. An additional 1000 Scouts can go camping during the eight-week summer period. This is a 40 per cent increase in boy opportunity.

"A Together Plan," to interest more institutions and clubs to provide greater opportunity for boys to belong to scouting, was held last fall. Again, people were interested, and over 60 institutions took it upon themselves to become sponsors and provide the scouting program to their boys and those of the community.

Lake Shore System Increased Number Of Buses By 17 Percent

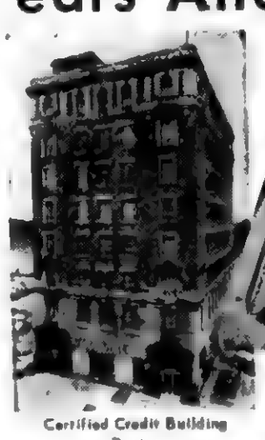
The Lake Shore System, a passenger bus carrier, with offices in Columbus, provides travel service to and from points in Ohio, West Virginia and Pennsylvania.

Service includes frequent schedules to Circleville, Chillicothe, Lancaster, Logan, Athens, Pomeroy, Granville and Newark. Long distance schedules operate through Zanesville, Cambridge, Steubenville, Wheeling and Weirton, W. Va., to Pittsburgh. Connections are made in all the larger cities for transfer to points nationwide.

In line with a progressive modernization program, 17 per cent of the fleet of buses in regular and charter service were purchased in 1962. New General Motors and Flexible buses were added at a cost of nearly a quarter of a million dollars.

One of the services offered by Lake Shore System is its charter bus service which allows the chartering group exclusive right to the bus. The bus route and itinerary are also planned by those contracting for the bus.

Many organizations charter buses for inter-church visitations, sporting events, flower shows, ski trips, industrial plant tours, family reunions, choral group singing tours and a host of other reasons.



The Lake Shore System says its equipment is the finest, and the rates reasonable. Arrangements have been made to answer all inquiries regarding the service.

In addition to regular passenger and charter service, the system provides for package express service. Small packages of less than 100 pounds may be shipped to any community in the United States served by bus. Packages are carried on the regularly scheduled runs.

Officials at Lake Shore said the recent cancellation of the federal transportation tax makes traveling by bus more reasonable than ever.

A soil test, when properly done, can help eliminate most of the guesswork of soil fertility management on Ohio farms, according to Ohio State University Extension agronomists.

Q: How is it possible to buy a quality home for as little as $9.95 TOTAL CASH DOWN PAYMENT

A: With the Ernest G. Fritsche Plan, you agree to handle certain of the finishing-up tasks on your home. Your work, plus the cost of the few materials required, reduces the normal down payment to as little as $9.95, depending on price of the home you select.

Q: What if I'm not handy with tools . . . or don't have lots of free time?

A: There's no carpentry, plumbing or electrical work . . . only painting and planting. Most people finish in three weekends.

Q: Is this some kind of land contract, or is there a second mortgage?

A: Absolutely not! You get prompt title to both house and lot with a single mortgage based on standard financing and lowest possible monthly payments.

Q: What about closing costs or other expenses?

A: There are none! After your low down payment . . . as low as $9.95 . . . you have only your regular payment to make each month.

Q: How many people have used the $9.95 plan?

A: So far, more than 500 Ernest G. Fritsche homes have been purchased under the $9.95 Total Cash Down plan.

Q: Is this plan mainly for people who couldn't afford to buy a home with a regular down payment?

A: No! The purpose is to enable responsible families to have quality homes without waiting and without using so much of their savings for down payment.

Q: Are Fritsche homes really quality built?

150,000 EMERGENCY CASES HANDLED

110,000 Patients Were Admitted To Columbus Hospitals Last Year

By Grant Drennen
Columbus Hospital Federation

Hospitals are an important segment of the economic life of the Metropolitan Columbus Area. More than 8,000 employes are on the monthly payroll of the 11 hospital members of The Columbus Hospital Federation, and operating costs were in excess of $32 million during 1962. .

Approximately 110,000 patients were admitted to the general hospitals for an average stay of 7.9 days, and nearly 20,000 new citizens were born in Columbus hospitals. An estimated 150,000 emergency room cases were treated and 350,000 out-patient visits were recorded.

Special forms are used to provide an orderly transfer from the hospital to the nursing home or to the hospital from the nursing home when the physician determines that a transfer is advisable. Such transfers have increased from 210 in 1961 to 399 during the first 11 months of 1962. This program, developed under the leadership of the late Frances G. Hoffman of the federation staff, is expected to expand to additional hospitals of the city in the coming year.

St. Anthony Hospital completed new surgical and laboratory facilities, and added 28 beds in the new Frances Schervier Memorial wing. Mt. Carmel Hospital is currently modernizing and air conditioning its west wing patient facilities.

Grant Hospital placed its entire new facilities for 399 patients in full service during 1962. Mercy Hospital converted its small maternity section to services for medical and surgical patients.

Children's Hospital has improved its laboratory and out-patient facilities and continues to serve patients from 87 of the 88 counties in Ohio and patients from other states.

University Hospital serves as the medical center for the surrounding region, caring for more complicated cases transferred from various parts of the state, as well as providing hospital care for citizens of Franklin County.

Alum Crest Hospital at the Franklin County Home continues to serve the older citizens of Franklin County. Benjamin Franklin Tuberculosis Hospital has a reduced number of patients; and unfortunately, the voters of Franklin County defeated a levy for appropriations which would have made possible the conversion of part of the hospital for chronic care patients. Studies of the use of both Alum Crest and Benjamin Franklin Hospitals will be continued in 1963.

St. Ann's Hospital for Women continues to serve maternity and gynecological patients in the facilities which were modernized in 1960.

During October, 3000 beds were available in the accredited general hospitals of Franklin County and they were 81.7 per cent occupied during the entire month. In addition 330 beds were available for pulmonary disease patients at Benjamin Franklin Hospital and 207 beds for geriatric patients were available at Alum Crest Hospital.

The excellent cooperation of physicians, prominent citizens, industries, labor, religious leaders, educators, insurance companies, and governmental agencies in achievement of this objective is an outstanding feature of progress in Columbus and Franklin County.

Expansion, New Facilities Highlight 1962 Progress At The Electric Company

The end of the year 1962 finds business activity holding at the record levels reached earlier in the year. Thus there has been a gradual increase in the economy of the nation as a whole, and the service area of the Columbus and Southern Ohio Electric Co.

One of the reasons for this increase and steady growth, according to the electric utilities, is the amount of electricity consumed per customer. Home building has remained steady throughout the year. Residential construction is running at slightly above 1.5 million units a year, well above a year ago.

Americans now have more electricity than the next five nations of the world combined. For example, we have three times as much as Russia. The average American home uses twice as much electricity for lighting alone as the typical Russian home uses for all purposes.

The electric company, whose budget and plans for construction are already scheduled for the next decade or more, welcomes the nation's growth and prosperity as a challenge. During the year just passed, the company continued its expansion of facilities with the installation of new distribution equipment, transmission lines, and the completion of the newest generating unit at its Conesville plant.

This latest addition at Conesville makes a total of more than a million kilowatts of electric power capacity for the Columbus and Southern Ohio area. Yet it is but one phase of the company's improvement and expansion program which has required expenditures of almost $200 million the past 10 years.

Last year the Columbus and Southern Ohio Electric Co. initiated a long-range study of the economy of Central and Southern Ohio and its probable growth over the next 25 years. The study is being conducted by Battelle Memorial Institute and will run another year. The results will provide guideposts for use by the company and by various communities of the region for stimulating economic and cultural growth in the area.

As company officials see the future, it is in a period of sound and steady growth and 1963 should be a firm year moving steadily toward future progress and prosperity for Central and Southern Ohio.

THIS 35-VOICE Optimist Junior Boys' Glee Club will highlight the program of the 45th annual meeting of the South Side YMCA to be held Monday, Jan. 21, at the St. Paul United Church of Christ, 225 E. New Elementary Is Viewed For Far South Side Area

The Columbus School Board, faced with a mushrooming elementary student population in the far South Side, took steps during regular session Tuesday to keep up with this growth.

Most important, perhaps, was the fact that members reviewed plans to construct a new elementary building on Moler-rd, east of Fairwood-av. This southeastern section school will be one of four such buildings slated for Columbus during 1963.

Although no bids have been advertised for as yet, the board cited the large enrollment jump as an "urgency factor" in getting construction started.

In the far South Side, the enrollment in the first six grades in 1956 was 1700. It jumped to 3500 in 1962. On the secondary level enrollment in 1955 was 1013 and climbed to over 1900 last year.

Also in efforts to handle the increased student rate, the board gave its approval to preliminary drawings for an addition of six and possibly eight class rooms at Heimandale.

And, a Feb. 27 deadline was set on bids for a four-room addition to Kent Elementary, 1414 Gault-st. Less than three years old, the school was opened in 1960.

Both of these projects, part of the 1963 school building program and two of 10 singled out for additions this year, should be completed this year.

Did You Ever Hear The Warning Bell?

If you saw the televised showing of "The Warning Bell" over WLW-C on Monday evening you must agree that this new public service production by the Nationwide Insurance Company is one of the best yet.

It was my pleasure to witness a preview of this movie this past week and I must admit that now I have heard the "Warning Bell."

This film is available for showing to groups by merely contacting any Nationwide representative. It carries no commercials and is meant to merely show every individual how he fits into a picture of safety in his community and his home. The nice part is that it makes a point without spilling any blood. It strikes hard at the accident problem: carelessness, indifference, and irresponsibility.

COLORING BOOKS are the big fad now. Larry Leader shows us this picture and says, "This is an intersection. It's not like an intersection should be. There's no stop signs. Color it dangerous." The sad part, though, is that there are many intersections like this one at Stanley and Reinhard in the South Side without stop signs anywhere in sight. Traffic expert Larry sees it as a definite hazard and is seeking quick action.

Prayer Ban Will Not Affect School Easter Assembly, Eibling Tells Student Writers

By DONNA WILCOX
South High School
(Contributing Writer)

"The prayer ban will not affect our Easter assembly. This ban outlaws a uniform, compulsory prayer. Since Columbus public schools have no uniform prayer, this ruling will not affect us," Dr. Harold Eibling, superintendent of Columbus public schools said at his second press conference for high school journalists January 9.

Many controversial questions were aired at the conference. Dr. Eibling gave each of the "cub" reporters' questions complete answers. One question of wide interest was: "Will there be a bond issue on the November 1963 ballot?" Dr. Eibling replied that the only request for schools on the ballot will be for the renewal of the existing 15 mills — which will cause no increase in taxes. Dr. Eibling also said that while the city government has nine sources of income, schools have only two, real estate and state funds.

The question "Is it fair that some schools have student lounges while others do not?" was also discussed. Dr. Eibling replied with a smile, "No, it is not fair. The student lounges, however, are an experiment. If they work out in the new schools, we will come back and install them in all the schools during our next building program."

Dr. Eibling explained why Columbus does not participate in the National Education Defense Fund (a fund provided by the government for schools to purchase math, science and language equipment). He said that the board has repeatdly turned down the aid (about $90,000 yearly) because it does not believe in Federal Aid to Education. "We have ben buying the same thing with our funds, buying language labs and science equipment, that would have been purchased with government supplied funds," he said.

In conclusion, Dr. Eibling said that the biggest problem facing the Board of Education in the near future is Columbus' ever growing population and its constant need of new schools. The second largest problem is the lack of a sufficient number of vocational and technical training schools.

"We want to try to provide

SOUTHGATE BID IS ACCEPTED

Southgate Manor Apartments will be sold by the Federal Housing Administration to a corporation formed by Hugh E. Parish, 366 Arden-rd, a real estate broker.

Acceptance of a $4,311,105 bid made by Parish for 10 investors including himself, was announced in Washington last Thursday by Lemuel Showell, assistant commissioner for property disposition. It was the only bid received.

FHA will insure the mortgage for $4 million.

The apartments are located in the 1900, 2000, 2100 and 2200 blocks of Alum Creek, Haviland and Winslow-drs.

City Approves Police Station For Lincoln Park School Grounds

A controversial question over the compatibility of two municipal functions was settled Monday night by Columbus city councilmen.

Specifically, the question was whether or not a police sub-station could be built on the Lincoln Park Elementay School grounds — grounds destined in the very near future to also contain a complete recreation center.

Council passed legislation to locate the substation in the South Side park over the bitter objections of Councilman Robert Southwick who questioned placing buildings on park properties.

Mayor Ralston Westlake and South Side Councilman William Hoermle spoke in behalf of the ordinance.

The mayor aid the City Recreation Commission favors the location of the building, noting the neighborhood has "unusual problems."

Hoermle said he also has discussed the matter with South Siders who "welcome it (the substation)." He pointed

MODERN APPEARANCE REPLACES BLEAKNESS AT SOUTH SIDE 'Y'

THE ORIGINAL South Side YMCA, 884 S. Third-st, served a purpose and a need for local residents for quite a few years. The tradition is expected to carry on under the leadership of Executive Secretary James Wagner—a long-time "Y" associate employe. Of course, Wagner's job should seem a lot easier in beautiful surroundings such as these at the new "Y" site, 190 Southwood-av, where the staff moved a few weeks ago. Picture at extreme left shows fireplace in main lobby. Center picture is that of main lobby counter and extreme right picture shows one of the many rooms for ping-pong or just relaxing. Quite a bit of the interior is still unfurnished and Wagner says that contributions are still needed for this job.

HAIR LOOK 'RATTY,' UNCOMBED? IT'S SUPPOSED TO, FELLOWS

If someone says your hair looks "ratty" and you're a member of the fairer sex, then smile. It's a compliment and, more important, if it's been a long time for you since the ivy halls of high school, no one can say you aren't keeping up with the times.

In a by-lined article, appearing in the South High "Optic," student writers Pauline McCoy and Sandra Hurley report that "ratting" or "teasing" hair is the most popular trend in forming femme hairstyles.

After the ratting process, local high school lasses are shaping their coiffures into styles bearing such names as "Flip," "Angel Wave" and "Date Setter."

The gals explain that ratting hair is done by holding the strands up from the scalp and brushing downward. It makes the hair fluffy and soft looking, they say, but, alas, it's off limits for guys.

Try it with a crew cut, men, and you'll just end up with sore fingers and your crew cut will probably look like the crew bailed out.

Now the hairdos.

The South High writers say that the "Flip" is for the gal who has short hair and is described as the "soft, angel style." It's "real cute" the female scribes penned and "gives that easy look."

They describe forming it thusly:

"The hair in front should be away from the forehead and brushed down over both ears. The ends of the hair should be fluffed up and a dainty bow could be pinned on one side.

Next, they write, for the girl who has medium short hair, "we have the 'Angel Wave'."

In this one, hair is combed down over the ears and a little curl or two combed down over the forehead. Bows can also be pinned on either side of this one. See?

"For the girl who has long hair, we have the 'Date Setter'," the article says. (This one, incidentally, was called the "Holly Look" during the holiday season but has been adapted so that it's appropriate at anytime—even Bastille Day.)

First, comb the hair into a page boy and then take part of the hair at the crown and fluff and secure with hair pins. Also, comb down a few airy bangs (air is sold in most neighborhood drug stores) and place two or three colorful bows between the crown and bangs.

For cynical men reading this, it might be pointed out that many of the fashion trends are set on the high school level. Don't be surprised if Mama comes home some evening with her hair ratted, or flipped, or teased or pouffed.

In which case your role will be to smile, compliment her and be careful not to get close to the hair spray shellac. Those face burns can really smart.

Slides of the group's October fly-up ceremony at Camp Moore were shown by George Miller.

Girls attending were Deborah Miller, Christine Plank, Mary Ann Ochs, Christine Ochs, Rosemary Reit, Christine Sauer, Jeannie Gibhart, Pamela Fickle, Nancie Kirscher and Patti Treneff.

Holiday activities of the two groups under Mrs. Otto Waidner's leadership included caroling for shut-ins. The A-Ki-Ti-Fu Junior High girls visited Margaret Weilbacher, 222 E. Whittierst; Mrs. Steppe, 220 Reinhard-av, and Bonnie Dixon, 1400 S. Sixth-st. Bonnie is a member of the group who is a rheumatic fever patient. Each shut-in received a basket of fruit.

The Do-Wan-Lo group visited Mr. and Mrs. Louis Sauer, 1102 S. Fourth-st, and Miss Debbie Smith of 235 Southwood-av. Their winter vacation get-together included seeing cinerama followed by a social hour in the home of their leader at 1106 S. Fourth-st.

Betty Ogle of Thurston-dr, was the hostess at an open house in honor of Marge Brehm, formerly of the Camp Fire staff. Miss Brehm is now in Albupuerque, N. M. She was honored at a camp reunion at Southview last month. About 80 persons attended.

Annette Ricker, staff director of the South East District, left Jan. 6 for a three-week basic training session in Alberquerque.

HOME LOANS

1962 was our forty-first year of service to this community. It was our pleasure to serve many families in many ways. During the past 12 months, we made loans totaling more than fifteen-and-a-half million dollars which helped hundreds of our neighbors to embark on a path toward home ownership. In 1963 we will continue to seek home loans in all parts of town. You will find that a home loan at First Federal offers many advantages including low closing costs; no penalty for an early loan pay-off; a new principal figured each month which automatically reduces the interest; a low interest rate which is guaranteed for the life of the loan. You will find our home loan counselors eager to assist you in every way possible. If you or any of your friends plan to buy or build, be sure to see First Federal first for a home loan.

Franklin Board Slates Meeting On New Budget

Franklin County's Child Welfare Board will hold a special meeting Friday, Feb. 1 to determine how to cut last year's expenditures by about $25,000 for the 1963 budget.

Among possible alternatives the board may consider, would be carrying over its 1962 deficit another year, sharply curtailing the organization's medical program and closing Franklin Village, said Charles Canton, executive secretary.

Canton said last week that the agency's income this year, including a $75,000 county general fund appropriation, will not match the amount the board spent last year under a curtailed program.

The agency, which ended up 1962 with $84,000 in unpaid obligations, will have about $1,436,000 to operate with.

This amount, coupled with the deficit, leaves the welfare board with $134,000 less than it spent in 1962.

California Markets Something To See

By ESTELLE B. FRANKS

THIS WEEK LOOK FOR:

Fruits — Apples, grapes, California navel oranges.

Vegetables — Lettuce, carrots, potatoes, tomatoes, green peppers.

Meats — Fryers, ground beef, steak "specials," pork roasts, large eggs, cheese.

On my first day in Ohio after a glorious vacation in southern California, I feel much better qualified to tell you about the markets there than here at home. The vegetable displays everywhere we visited were beautiful but the fruits were truly spectacular.

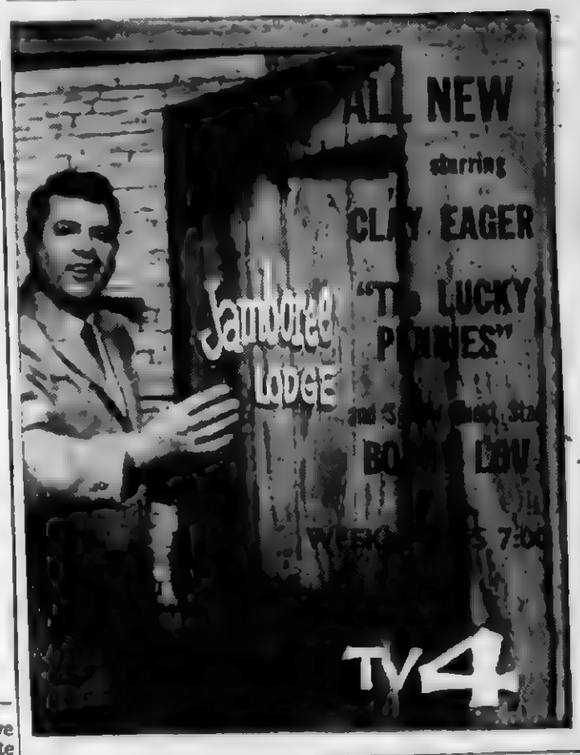
Mrs. Franks

Perhaps the best of both fruits and vegetables were the ones we saw at famous Farmers' Market in Pasadena — larger navel oranges than we ever see here and stacks of many fruits that are specialties in our markets, such as persimmons, "sweet" winter pears, several varieties of tangelos and tangerines, many varieties of fresh dates and many avocados. How Californians do love avocados! They prepare them in dozens of ways, even eat them just as we would eat an apple. Prices on these high quality fruits are not low, even with the abundance; vegetables generally, are cheaper than in our markets.

Tourists appreciate California's dry, warm weather this winter far more than the producers. They badly need rain. However, a trip through the fertile Cochella Valley showed how lush vegetables grow under their modern irrigation system without rainfall. Beautiful lettuce, tomatoes and other vegetables will be coming our way all winter from these irrigated valleys.

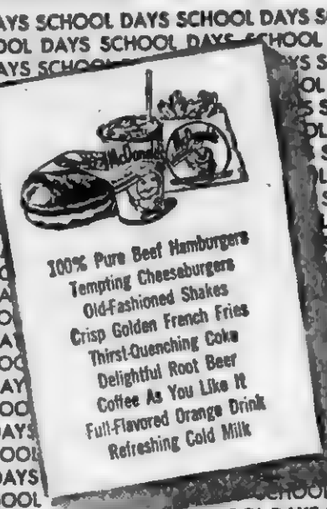
Latest On The Florida Citrus Situation

Marketing specialists say that estimates are still being made to determine the exact extent of the freeze damage. Most of the Florida oranges now on the market are from the Indian River area which missed most of the freeze. Regulations have been relaxed to permit No. 2 grade oranges to be shipped out of Florida.



The Valencia orange crop is about ready for harvest and will start moving on the market near the end of January. U.S.D.A. inspectors report that two-thirds of the Valencia crop showed no apparent damage below one-half inch at the stem.

With additional supplies soon to appear on the market and store shelves replenished, orange prices likely will decrease and approach normal prices, but will not reach the exceptionally low prices you paid before the freeze. At present, California navel oranges may be a comparatively good buy, when both quality and price are considered.



As to be expected, there's a wide variance in the quality of oranges and you will be wise to shop very carefully. Look for oranges that are firm, heavy for their size and have a fine-textured skin for the variety.

As has been reported earlier, many of the oranges hit by the freeze have been diverted to juice. There is some indication that the juice supply may be large enough, coupled with the unusually large carry-over from last year, to have considerable effect in returning juice prices to near normal levels.

Smaller Cities Can Provide Elbow Room For Colleges

By 1964 the bumper baby crop of the postwar era will have become of age to enter our colleges and universities.

"The number of freshmen alone who will try to enter college in Ohio from 1963 to 1965 will increase 50 percent," said Dr. Novice G. Fawcett, president of the Ohio State University. The number during the years of 1960 to 1970 will increase from 39,335 to 75,102, or 91 percent, he also predicted.

It thus becomes obvious that the competition to get into the nation's 2,000 colleges and universities is taking on a keener edge every year.

Part of the needs will be met by the growing number of two-year community colleges and branch universities. The six state-supported universities maintain 28 branches in towns satellite to the home campuses. Admittedly, these branches may not provide all the "atmosphere" of a mere traditional college. But, for many students the live-at-home advantages and the opportunities for part-time employment outweigh the disadvantages. The students later are able to spend their final two years on the main campus.

The towns themselves benefit from the presence of the branches, which also offer adult education and community cultural activities.

The 104th Ohio General Assembly failed to provide money for college capital improvements. And, according to the Ohio Foundation of Independent Colleges, business firms are contributing only slightly more than half the needed gifts to maintain its 32 colleges.

The General Assembly did for the first time provide authority for the formation of local taxing districts which may set up independent community colleges or may build physical facilities within which such university branches may operate.

Especially interesting is a current effort of local individuals, associations and industry in Chillicothe. The community is in the midst of a lively $200,000 development fund designed to secure 80 acres for the location of permanent facilities for the Ohio University branch there. The branch opened in Chillicothe High School for night classes during World War II and has had a successful run since.

Dr. Vernon Alder, Ohio U. president recently told Chillicothe Rotarians that the branch, given this encouragement, could grow to some 3,000 or 4,000 students in a short time. He foresees a two-year college with faculty-in-residence that "may even become a four-year institution in time."

It appears, therefore, that communities such as Grove City, Reynoldsburg, Canal Winchester or Hilliard, may some day provide a good climate for two years of higher education or of a community college such as Westerville has in Otterbein.

Our largest campuses ultimately will reach a limit, and neighboring residential communities may be called on to help solve the space problem.

It's not too soon to think about it.

SAVINGS

In these hectic days of high prices and taxes, who can save a buck for the proverbial "rainy day"? But, remembering Benjamin Franklin's maxim about saving, many know it can be done and are doing it.

There are many modern ways of saving assets, not always in cash. Home investment and life insurance are examples. Trust funds and securities are attractive to some, but sound advice is needed there.

In rural southern Ohio half a century ago, farm and highway laborers earned $1 for a 10-hour day. A man with a team of horses or a span of ox received $2.50 and one meal for man and beasts.

Of course, prices were in proportion. The variety of consumer goods was limited and the quality usually poor. Frozen foods were unknown and perishables were not obtainable out of season.

One must save more dollars today to make it worthwhile because they have more of them. A man can save something unless he has had to endure too many of "the slings and arrows" after supporting himself and his family and sharing properly with others.

It says here . . .

The dollars you save work for you after you've worked for them.

Blue Skies? We Think So!

Bleak weather prevented Governor-elect James A. Rhodes' inauguration from being held outside of the State Capitol Monday, but to those who jammed into the rotunda and to thousands of others throughout the state it was a bright day for Ohio.

Just as we change from one season to the other, so are we shifting governors. What makes us look forward to a new season? Usually it's how we felt about the preceding one.

Will James A. Rhodes' administration be like going from winter to summer? Time will tell. Certainly, the people of Ohio are expecting this for it's in Governor-elect Rhodes—and his impressive new cabinet members—that they've placed their confidence for the next four years.

At this point we see a fine administration ahead.

Stomp Out Trading Stamps? Just Try!

"I didn't know women were so gullible," said Mrs. Clarence Hunter in a recent letter in which she lambasted trading stamps.

McPeek

Disregarding for a moment the evils of trading stamps, it is obvious that Mrs. Hunter has not been taking my earlier columns serious—columns in which I repeatedly focused on the gullibility of women. Needless to say, this lack of confidence brought heavy tears to my eyes.

But because I wholeheartedly agree with Mrs. Hunter's views on trading stamps, I shall cooperate and devote this column today to the "Stomp Out Trading Stamps" movement.

Mrs. Hunter went on in her letter to say that perhaps men are just as gullible as women (a questionable contention).

"A lady wants a new lamp," said Mrs. Hunter. "Her husband says, "We don't need it." But the lady replies, "What if I get it free?" The husband then agrees a new lamp is needed."

But is it free? said Mrs. Hunter. Someone has to pay for those stamps. And you can bet it won't be the storekeeper. He has to earn a profit. So the cost of the stamps will be absorbed by increasing prices on certain items. Result: the customer pays. Nobody gets anything for free. When will people learn this?, Mrs. Hunter puzzled

Then there is the nuisance angle, Mrs. Hunter continued. "For example, we shop at several different stores, each of which offers trading stamps. This has resulted in cluttering up our drawers with seven different kinds of stamps and accompanying books and catalogs. They are a complete pain in the neck."

Most everyone will agree with Mrs. Hunter.

Even most merchants complain about them. But they have been forced into issuing stamps because a competitor offers them and if they expect to retain their customers they have to do likewise.

Remember the recent gasoline station stamp wars in Columbus? Those wars were started by the station owners themselves in an effort to wipe out the parasitic stamps.

Many other grocers and merchants also have made efforts to get rid of trading stamps.

But alas, it seems stamps will stay with us until all people learn they can't get anything for nothing.

Brevity Of Life Should Lead Us To Wisdom

"So teach us to number our days, that we may apply our hearts unto wisdom." Psalm 90:12

It was a great moment in the history of painting when men learned how to give the effect of the third dimension to what is essentially a two-dimensional medium — that is to say, when they learned the art of perspective. By means of perspective we are able to convey an impression of depth and distance to a landscape, and relative size and shape to objects in still-life pictures.

Rev. Everson

Some such discovery is necessary if we are to understand, to live, and to represent this human life of ours truly and accurately also. It was something of this nature which the psalmist was talking about when he prayed, "So teach us to number our days that we may apply our hearts unto wisdom." Wisdom is something very different from knowledge, the mere accumulation of information. The lust for knowledge may very easily crowd out wisdom. We may easily turn out to be among the best-informed but least-wise among the generations of men.

The psalmist put his finger on the consideration which ought to lead us to wisdom — the brevity of life. It is when we measure our little lives against the immensity of the ages that we see them in their true perspective. It is then that we realize how little time we actually have, and that we can only afford to spend it on the things that matter most. "The bird of time has but a little way to flutter, and the bird is on the wing."

"We live life forward and understand it backwards," wrote a very wise man in the 19th century, and if we would be wise unto salvation, we will give considerable time to surveying the past — our own past — and assessing its accomplishments. When we realize how much of the journey of life lies behind us, and how far we yet are from attaining its goal, we may with greater wisdom apply ourselves to that which remains to us of life. Only a fool in his folly will turn his back upon the past, as if it had nothing to teach us for the living of the future.

The best wisdom to which any human being can come is to know that he is a child of God, made in His image, made to think God's thoughts after Him. It well may be that before this decade is over, men may stand upon the surface of the moon, but we would be well-advised to acknowledge that this is not what he was made for. It is of much importance for us to be kind and loving parents and children, honest and trustworthy workmen and citizens, rejoicing in the humble joys and triumphs of ordinary life, being able to endure sickness and disappointment, to be able to comfort one another in bereavement, and to face each day with courage and hope. The wisdom of life is shown much more in its ordinary humdum routine, than in its spectacular exceptions.

We need this element of perspective to save us from a shallow optimism or a shallow pessimism about the future. Men who have no perspective are likely to vacillate between high hopes and deep despair about the human situation. But those with perspective know that the human race has been around for a long time: the probabilities are that it will last a long time yet. Not even its own devilish cunning will be able to bring about its destruction, until the purpose of God to create for Himself a faithful people shall have been accomplished.

Frosting On The Cake

By

"UNCLE DOC" ROSS — U.S.A.

No successful man or woman, who has done better than average in life and is still "on the way up," ever pays in full the goodwill debts he owes to so many.

Individuals with healthy ambitions learn early in their careers that taking care of their own "public relations" is a vitally important part of achievement.

Those who never pay goodwill debts, and think and strive only for acquisitive results, miss the bus tragically, no matter how successful they may appear to be. Success, without also finding the secret of happiness, is too often, a hollow sham. By failing to take care of the "put-out" as well as the "take-in" they are wide open to the charge of being ungrateful, and the ingrate is always the most miserable of humans.

The ideal of service rendered "out of the heart" as well as from skills and experience is the catalyst that makes decent people honestly successful.

There are a few words that are never overworked by those who have not the slightest desire to pay any goodwill debts. They are "thanks," "please," "excuse me" and "I'm sorry." No one ever completely forgets such recognition and appreciation honestly expressed.

Many top rated, successful people are beloved by many because success has gone to their hearts instead of to their heads. Too many who are ambitious and possess great talent, energy and tenacity of purpose, are still willing to "climb up on the necks and bruised hearts" of others.

One thing for sure — the most delightful persons are those who never lose the quiet and polite "common touch" in life. Obscure, unknown and unsung men and women have repeatedly been important in the rise to prominence and success of exceptional individuals.

Success built solely on the stand of "everyone for himself and to hell with the hindmost," is false as plastic sleighbells, and never give off a real tinkle of joy and genuine happiness.

The practice of good manners, goodwill and good fellowship is the formula for success and happiness. The most important big shot is the man who knows how to take worthy and deserving people up the ladder with him. No one ever achieves real success and happiness without taking care of the humanities, as well as "taking care of his job."

Hits Government's Processing Of Information

To The Editor:

The "generation" of news lies with the event, and not in the province of executive authority. The admission, on the part of Mr. Kennedy, of his having "generated" news becomes more serious after the facts are "in."

No authority vested in the President of the United States may be considered to have given him the right of decision concerning our access to a factual accounting and subsequent evaluation of the Cuban situation.

Our survival as a free nation depends upon our ability to properly weigh the circumstances in any vital area of national concern. Our Constitution expressly forbids the very action undertaken by Mr. Kennedy and his hirelings.

"Generated" news is as good as no news, and is in fact another way of describing propaganda. Propaganda concerning our national survival is unwarranted, and such an act is in violation of the fundamental precepts of freedom as we know it.

"Generated" news is the tool of tyranny, now or in the future, and should be shunned by our leaders as unworthy.

Rabbit Pie Provides Mid-Winter Feast

INSIDE ON THE Outdoors By ROB COCHRAN

It's the season for meetings of the Hot Stove League, and with few exceptions all the hunting and fishing going on nowadays takes place in barbershops, sporting goods store and conservation club meetings. Creature comforts are difficult to resist, as the wind blows and snow piles higher.

Rugged ice fishermen are out, mostly on weekends. This is a growing sport in this area, and each year a few more try it. But it's sedentary fishing, and can not take the place of a hike in the snow. Rabbit season is open through January, and this may be the excuse you've been looking for to get outdoors.

If a hunt on a cold winter's day does not tempt you from an easy chair, perhaps a rabbit pie will. All avid sportsmen take great pleasure in preparing fish and game for the table, and a rabbit provides the makings for a mid-winter feast. Here is one recipe you might try:

Cut rabbit into serving pieces. Soak in equal parts vinegar and water for 12 to 24 hours. Drain and wipe dry. Sprinkle with salt and pepper and dredge with flour. Sear quickly in frying pan. Add water to cover and simmer slowly in covered pot for one to one and one-half hours. Add two onions, two medium-sized carrots and two or three potatoes, all cut into pieces. Cook until vegetables are done. Thicken the stew with flour. Put in greased baking dish and cover top with pie crust. Return to oven and bake until dough is done, about 15 to 20 minutes. Ring the dinner bell.

It is a long time until next fall by any hunter's calendar, and unless you have some game in a freezer you will have to hunt, and hunt quickly, for your dinner. Snow will help you collect a rabbit or two. The white background makes them easy to see as they bound away from brushpiles or other hiding places. Also, rabbits seem to like to sit out in the snow. You can find more of them crouched down in some shelter more often than at other seasons.

The fact that rabbits are our No. 1 game animal has been known for many years. Since they are so common, I'm afraid that a lot of hunters do not prize them. A cock pheasant or some quail have more "trophy value." But when it comes to sport and table fare, Mr. Cottontail takes its rightful place high on the list. We are lucky to have the rabbit.

Now, that wind doesn't seem so cold after all, does it? If you brave the elements, you might very well find me out after a rabbit pie too.

Suburban Press Called New Communications Skyrocket

By JERRY WOLFROM
Business Editor

A year ago when two giant Los Angeles newspapers ceased operations, so-called experts in mass communications were quick to say, "I told you so — the newspaper business in America is anemic and swiftly becoming a secondary news vehicle."

Apparently these "experts" overlooked one item in making their rash generalizations —the suburban press, truly a modern mass communications skyrocket.

In the Los Angeles area where the two newspapers with a total circulation of more than a half-million collapsed, 27 suburban newspapers are thriving.

In the past 10 years, the number of dailies in the United States has shrunk from 1761 to 1731, but in the same period the number of suburban newspapers has increased by 2000!

Suburban papers are finding their popularity going higher each week. Residents of Suburbia are clamoring for more local news. They want to know who's who in local government; they are interested in tax levies and municipal issues; and they like to know what their neighbors are doing. Suburbanites ask that two-paragraph stories in large dailies be supplemented.

Separate Entities

The potential growth of the press in the suburbs is staggering. As decentralization continues at a record rate accompanied by super-high ways, airports, offices, industrial plants, and shopping centers, suburbs are becoming more self-sufficient. As separate entities, each slowly is acquiring a separate identification.

These communities represent more growing pains, more news, more social, economic, and political problems than any other geographic area. There are decisions to be made and the suburban press, once merely a bulletin board, is rising to help explain and solve the problems.

Marketing Changed

Not to be overlooked is the changing marketing pattern. Food chains, especially, are becoming less and less identified with the central city. Marketing is becoming more selective because of new purchasing habits dictated by the exodus to the outlying areas.

The suburban press is an effective contact with this exploding market. This communications medium provides the information and leadership necessary to help suburbanites understand, appreciate and adjust to a different way of life.

"In booming communities, weeklies are becoming dailies, and weeklies are being established to fill the gaps left by metropolitan dailies," commented Turner Catledge, managing editor of the New York Times.

Professional Journalism

With the demise of the dailies comes an expanding pool of professional newsmen who are discovering the suburban press. One Ohio publisher recently reported a flood of job applications from men with 20 and 30 years' experience, all left jobless by folding newspapers in Cleveland, Detroit, and Pittsburgh.

With this influx of professional journalists suburban newspapers swiftly are adding quality and depth to their editorial format. For 13 million households there is no substitute for the suburban press.

It is estimated that by 1970 at least 70 per cent of our population will live in what is now the hinterlands.

With this in mind, it can correctly be assumed that today's suburban newspapers have hardly scratched the surface in this "new journalism."

Well - balanced editorials, civic boosterism, human interest features, personalized as well as "hard" news, and responsible coverage of "hot" controversies are only a few areas in which suburban newspapers will excel in the immediate future.

AN 1963

Smaller Cities Can Provide Elbow Room For Colleges

By 1964 the bumper baby crop of the postwar era will have become of age to enter our colleges and universities.

"The number of freshmen alone who will try to enter college in Ohio from 1963 to 1965 will increase 50 percent," said Dr. Novice G. Fawcett, president of the Ohio State University. The number during the years of 1960 to 1970 will increase from 39,335 to 75,102, or 91 percent, he also predicted.

It thus becomes obvious that the competition to get into the nation's 2,000 colleges and universities is taking on a keener edge every year.

Part of the needs will be met by the growing number of two-year community colleges and branch universities. The six state-supported universities maintain 28 branches in towns satellite to the home campuses. Admittedly, these branches may not provide all the "atmosphere" of a mere traditional college. But, for many students the live-at-home advantages and the opportunities for part-time employment outweigh the disadvantages. The students later are able to spend their final two years on the main campus.

The towns themselves benefit from the presence of the branches, which also offer adult education and community cultural activities.

The 104th Ohio General Assembly failed to provide money for college capital improvements. And, according to the Ohio Foundation of Independent Colleges, business firms are contributing only slightly more than half the needed gifts to maintain its 32 colleges.

The General Assembly did for the first time provide authority for the formation of local taxing districts which may set up independent community colleges or may build physical facilities within which such university branches may operate.

Especially interesting is a current effort of local individuals, associations and industry in Chillicothe. The community is in the midst of a lively $200,000 development fund designed to secure 80 acres for the location of permanent facilities for the Ohio University branch there. The branch opened in Chillicothe High School for night classes during World War II and has had a successful run since.

Dr. Vernon Alder, Ohio U. president recently told Chillicothe Rotarians that the branch, given this encouragement, could grow to some 3,000 or 4,000 students in a short time. He foresees a two-year college with faculty-in-residence that "may even become a four-year institution in time."

It appears, therefore, that communities such as Grove City, Reynoldsburg, Canal Winchester or Hilliard, may some day provide a good climate for two years of higher education or of a community college such as Westerville has in Otterbein.

Our largest campuses ultimately will reach a limit, and neighboring residential communities may be called on to help solve the space problem.

It's not too soon to think about it.

SAVINGS

In these hectic days of high prices and taxes, who can save a buck for the proverbial "rainy day"? But, remembering Benjamin Franklin's maxim about saving, many know it can be done and are doing it.

There are many modern ways of saving assets, not always in cash. Home investment and life insurance are examples. Trust funds and securities are attractive to some, but sound advice is needed there.

In rural southern Ohio half a century ago, farm and highway laborers earned $1 for a 10-hour day. A man with a team of horses or a span of ox received $2.50 and one meal for man and beasts.

Of course, prices were in proportion. The variety of consumer goods was limited and the quality usually poor. Frozen foods were unknown and perishables were not obtainable out of season.

One must save more dollars today to make it worthwhile because they have more of them. A man can save something unless he has had to endure too many of "the slings and arrows" after supporting himself and his family and sharing properly with others.

It says here . . .

The dollars you save work for you after you've worked for them.

Blue Skies? We Think So!

Bleak weather prevented Governor-elect James A. Rhodes' inauguration from being held outside of the State Capitol Monday, but to those who jammed into the rotunda and to thousands of others throughout the state it was a bright day for Ohio.

Just as we change from one season to the other, so are we shifting governors. What makes us look forward to a new season? Usually it's how we felt about the preceding one.

Will James A. Rhodes' administration be like going from winter to summer? Time will tell. Certainly, the people of Ohio are expecting this for it's in Governor-elect Rhodes—and his impressive new cabinet members—that they've placed their confidence for the next four years.

At this point we see a fine administration ahead.

Stomp Out Trading Stamps? Just Try!

"I didn't know women were so gullible," said Mrs. Clarence Hunter in a recent letter in which she lambasted trading stamps.

McPeek

Disregarding for a moment the evils of trading stamps, it is obvious that Mrs. Hunter has not been taking my earlier columns serious—columns in which I repeatedly focused on the gullibility of women. Needless to say, this lack of confidence brought heavy tears to my eyes.

But because I wholeheartedly agree with Mrs. Hunter's views on trading stamps, I shall cooperate and devote this column today to the "Stomp Out Trading Stamps" movement.

Mrs. Hunter went on in her letter to say that perhaps men are just as gullible as women (a questionable contention).

"A lady wants a new lamp," said Mrs. Hunter. "Her husband says, "We don't need it." But the lady replies, "What if I get it free?" The husband then agrees a new lamp is needed."

But is it free? said Mrs. Hunter. Someone has to pay for those stamps. And you can bet it won't be the storekeeper. He has to earn a profit. So the cost of the stamps will be absorbed by increasing prices on certain items. Result: the customer pays. Nobody gets anything for free. When will people learn this?, Mrs. Hunter puzzled

Then there is the nuisance angle, Mrs. Hunter continued. "For example, we shop at several different stores, each of which offers trading stamps. This has resulted in cluttering up our drawers with seven different kinds of stamps and accompanying books and catalogs. They are a complete pain in the neck."

Most everyone will agree with Mrs. Hunter.

Even most merchants complain about them. But they have been forced into issuing stamps because a competitor offers them and if they expect to retain their customers they have to do likewise.

Remember the recent gasoline station stamp wars in Columbus? Those wars were started by the station owners themselves in an effort to wipe out the parasitic stamps.

Many other grocers and merchants also have made efforts to get rid of trading stamps.

But alas, it seems stamps will stay with us until all people learn they can't get anything for nothing.

Brevity Of Life Should Lead Us To Wisdom

"So teach us to number our days, that we may apply our hearts unto wisdom." Psalm 90:12

It was a great moment in the history of painting when men learned how to give the effect of the third dimension to what is essentially a two-dimensional medium — that is to say, when they learned the art of perspective. By means of perspective we are able to convey an impression of depth and distance to a landscape, and relative size and shape to objects in still-life pictures.

Rev. Everson

Some such discovery is necessary if we are to understand, to live, and to represent this human life of ours truly and accurately also. It was something of this nature which the psalmist was talking about when he prayed, "So teach us to number our days that we may apply our hearts unto wisdom." Wisdom is something very different from knowledge, the mere accumulation of information. The lust for knowledge may very easily crowd out wisdom. We may easily turn out to be among the best-informed but least-wise among the generations of men.

The psalmist put his finger on the consideration which ought to lead us to wisdom — the brevity of life. It is when we measure our little lives against the immensity of the ages that we see them in their true perspective. It is then that we realize how little time we actually have, and that we can only afford to spend it on the things that matter most. "The bird of time has but a little way to flutter, and the bird is on the wing."

"We live life forward and understand it backwards," wrote a very wise man in the 19th century, and if we would be wise unto salvation, we will give considerable time to surveying the past — our own past — and assessing its accomplishments. When we realize how much of the journey of life lies behind us, and how far we yet are from attaining its goal, we may with greater wisdom apply ourselves to that which remains to us of life. Only a fool in his folly will turn his back upon the past, as if it had nothing to teach us for the living of the future.

The best wisdom to which any human being can come is to know that he is a child of God, made in His image, made to think God's thoughts after Him. It well may be that before this decade is over, men may stand upon the surface of the moon, but we would be well-advised to acknowledge that this is not what he was made for. It is of much importance for us to be kind and loving parents and children, honest and trustworthy workmen and citizens, rejoicing in the humble joys and triumphs of ordinary life, being able to endure sickness and disappointment, to be able to comfort one another in bereavement, and to face each day with courage and hope. The wisdom of life is shown much more in its ordinary humdum routine, than in its spectacular exceptions.

We need this element of perspective to save us from a shallow optimism or a shallow pessimism about the future. Men who have no perspective are likely to vacillate between high hopes and deep despair about the human situation. But those with perspective know that the human race has been around for a long time: the probabilities are that it will last a long time yet. Not even its own devilish cunning will be able to bring about its destruction, until the purpose of God to create for Himself a faithful people shall have been accomplished.

Individuals with healthy ambitions learn early in their careers that taking care of their own "public relations" is a vitally important part of achievement.

Those who never pay goodwill debts, and think and strive only for acquisitive results, miss the bus tragically, no matter how successful they may appear to be. Success, without also finding the secret of happiness, is too often, a hollow sham. By failing to take care of the "put-out" as well as the "take-in" they are wide open to the charge of being ungrateful, and the ingrate is always the most miserable of humans.

The ideal of service rendered "out of the heart" as well as from skills and experience is the catalyst that makes decent people honestly successful.

There are a few words that are never overworked by those who have not the slightest desire to pay any goodwill debts. They are "thanks," "please," "excuse me" and "I'm sorry." No one ever completely forgets such recognition and appreciation honestly expressed.

Many top rated, successful people are beloved by many because success has gone to their hearts instead of to their heads. Too many who are ambitious and possess great talent, energy and tenacity of purpose, are still willing to "climb up on the necks and bruised hearts" of others.

One thing for sure — the most delightful persons are those who never lose the quiet and polite "common touch" in life. Obscure, unknown and unsung men and women have repeatedly been important in the rise to prominence and success of exceptional individuals.

Success built solely on the stand of "everyone for himself and to hell with the hindmost," is false as plastic sleighbells, and never give off a real tinkle of joy and genuine happiness.

The practice of good manners, goodwill and good fellowship is the formula for success and happiness. The most important big shot is the man who knows how to take worthy and deserving people up the ladder with him. No one ever achieves real success and happiness without taking care of the humanities, as well as "taking care of his job."

Hits Government's Processing Of Information

To The Editor:

The "generation" of news lies with the event, and not in the province of executive authority. The admission, on the part of Mr. Kennedy, of his having "generated" news becomes more serious after the facts are "in."

No authority vested in the President of the United States may be considered to have given him the right of decision concerning our access to a factual accounting and subsequent evaluation of the Cuban situation.

Our survival as a free nation depends upon our ability to properly weigh the circumstances in any vital area of national concern. Our Constitution expressly forbids the very action undertaken by Mr. Kennedy and his hirelings.

"Generated" news is as good as no news, and is in fact another way of describing propaganda. Propaganda concerning our national survival is unwarranted, and such an act is in violation of the fundamental precepts of freedom as we know it.

"Generated" news is the tool of tyranny, now or in the future, and should be shunned by our leaders as unworthy.

Rabbit Pie Provides Mid-Winter Feast

INSIDE ON THE Outdoors By ROD COCHRAN

It's the season for meetings of the Hot Stove League, and with few exceptions all the hunting and fishing going on nowadays takes place in barbershops, sporting goods store and conservation club meetings. Creature comforts are difficult to resist, as the wind blows and snow piles higher.

Rugged ice fishermen are out, mostly on weekends. This is a growing sport in this area, and each year a few more try it. But it's sedentary fishing, and can not take the place of a hike in the snow. Rabbit season is open through January, and this may be the excuse you've been looking for to get outdoors.

If a hunt on a cold winter's day does not tempt you from an easy chair, perhaps a rabbit pie will. All avid sportsmen take great pleasure in preparing fish and game for the table, and a rabbit provides the makings for a mid-winter feast. Here is one recipe you might try:

Cut rabbit into serving pieces. Soak in equal parts vinegar and water for 12 to 24 hours. Drain and wipe dry. Sprinkle with salt and pepper and dredge with flour. Sear quickly in frying pan. Add water to cover and simmer slowly in covered pot for one to one and one-half hours. Add two onions, two medium-sized carrots and two or three potatoes, all cut into pieces. Cook until vegetables are done. Thicken the stew with flour. Put in greased baking dish and cover top with pie crust. Return to oven and bake until dough is done, about 15 to 20 minutes. Ring the dinner bell.

It is a long time until next fall by any hunter's calendar, and unless you have some game in a freezer you will have to hunt, and hunt quickly, for your dinner. Snow will help you collect a rabbit or two. The white background makes them easy to see as they bound away from brushpiles or other hiding places. Also, rabbits seem to like to sit out in the snow. You can find more of them crouched down in some shelter more often than at other seasons.

The fact that rabbits are our No. 1 game animal has been known for many years. Since they are so common, I'm afraid that a lot of hunters do not prize them. A cock pheasant or some quail have more "trophy value." But when it comes to sport and table fare, Mr. Cottontail takes its rightful place high on the list. We are lucky to have the rabbit.

Now, that wind doesn't seem so cold after all, does it? If you brave the elements, you might very well find me out after a rabbit pie too.

TOM PRICE

Tom Price, 805 Lawndale av, was the first contributor to Hartley Newspapers' giant Cupid edition to be distributed Feb. 6-7.

A South Side Leader carrier boy for the past five years, Tom, 14, takes the attitude "the papers must be delivered."

Last June he suffered a broken ankle and enlisted the help of his sister to help distribute the Leader. Several weeks ago, when both he and his sister became ill, his mother, with the help of a South Side businessman (who is one of Tom's customers) delivered the papers.

Tom is active in Scout Troop 511 and enjoys writing as a hobby. The poem he contributed was written as a tribute to his customers.

Hartley Newspapers' circulation manager Jack Schluep said Tom is one of the outstanding carriers in the city.

HINTERLANDS SEEK RECOGNITION

Suburban Press Called New Communications Skyrocket

By JERRY WOLFROM
Business Editor

A year ago when two giant Los Angeles newspapers ceased operations, so-called experts in mass communications were quick to say; "I told you so — the newspaper business in America is anemic and swiftly becoming a secondary news vehicle."

Apparently these "experts" overlooked one item in making their rash generalizations —the suburban press, truly a modern mass communications skyrocket.

In the Los Angeles area where the two newspapers with a total circulation of more than a half-million collapsed, 27 suburban newspapers are thriving.

In the past 10 years, the number of dailies in the United States has shrunk from 1761 to 1731, but in the same period the number of suburban newspapers has increased by 2000!

Suburban papers are finding their popularity going higher each week. Residents of Suburbia are clamoring for more local news. They want to know who's who in local government; they are interested in tax levies and municipal issues; and they like to know what their neighbors are doing. Suburbanites ask that two-paragraph stories in large dailies be supplemented.

Separate Entities

The potential growth of the press in the suburbs is staggering. As decentralization continues at a record rate accompanied by super-high ways, airports, offices, industrial plants, and shopping centers, suburbs are becoming more self-sufficient. As separate entities, each slowly is acquiring a separate identification.

These communities represent more growing pains, more news, more social, economic, and political problems than any other geographic area. There are decisions to be made and the suburban press, once merely a bulletin board, is rising to help explain and solve the problems.

Marketing Changed

Not to be overlooked is the changing marketing pattern. Food chains, especially, are becoming less and less identified with the central city. Marketing is becoming more selective because of new purchasing habits dictated by the exodus to the outlying areas.

The suburban press is an effective contact with this exploding market. This communications medium provides the information and leadership necessary to help suburbanites understand, appreciate and adjust to a different way of life.

"In booming communities, weeklies are becoming dailies, and weeklies are being established to fill the gaps left by metropolitan dailies," commented Turner Catledge, managing editor of the New York Times.

Professional Journalism

With the demise of the dailies comes an expanding pool of professional newsmen who are discovering the suburban press. One Ohio publisher recently reported a flood of job applications from men with 20 and 30 years' experience, all left jobless by folding newspapers in Cleveland, Detroit, and Pittsburgh.

With this influx of professional journalists suburban newspapers swiftly are adding quality and depth to their editorial format. For 13 million households there is no substitute for the suburban press.

It is estimated that by 1970 at least 70 per cent of our population will live in what is now the hinterlands.

With this in mind, it can correctly be assumed that today's suburban newspapers have hardly scratched the surface in this "new journalism."

Well - balanced editorials, civic boosterism, human interest features, personalized as well as "hard" news, and responsible coverage of "hot" controversies are only a few areas in which suburban newspapers will excel in the immediate future.

WEATHER SIGN An icicle is one sign that real winter cold has arrived. Another is when you notice it takes more heat to keep you comfortable inside the house.

To provide this extra warmth your gas furnace works longer and harder. During the winter months, and especially during severe cold, you will be using more natural gas to heat your home. Your gas bill will be higher.

To meet winter demands your gas company has developed a precisely engineered delivery system. That's why so many people in this area can enjoy the comfort and convenience of gas heat for their homes — no matter how cold the weather.

AN 1963

COLUMBUS . . . FIRST 150 YEARS

First County Courts Held In Franklinton Home

There was no courthouse or public building of any kind in Franklinton when the village was named seat of Franklin County governmet in 1803.

When the courts came to the settlement, judges presided in a room in the house of a settler, John Overdier, until the courthouse was built in 1807-08 at the northeast corner of Broad and Sandusky-st.

The square structure, with its octagonal cupola, continued to serve as courthouse until the county seat was moved to Columbus in 1824.

After that it was used as a schoolhouse and, in 1873, was torn down to make way for Franklinton Elementary. This building, in turn, was razed a few years ago.

County courts, after the seat of government was moved to the capital, were held first in the United States Courthouse

Judges of the Court of Common Pleas when sessions were moved from Franklinton were Gustavus Swan, president judge, and Edward Livingston, Samuel G. Flenniken and Arora Buttles, associate judges.

A. I. McDowell was clerk of courts, and Robert Brotherton was sherrif.

A low, one-story brick structure, built at the rear of the US Courthouse in 1828 or 1829, housed county offices.

Divided into four sections, each with an outside entrance, the building's north portion was occupied by the clerk of courts; next was the office of county recorder, then county treasurer and, in the south room, county auditor.

County offices remained in this building until 1840 when they were moved into the present courthouse at Mound and High-st. The building was razed in the spring of 1857 when the square was graded.

Two lots at the southeast corner of High and Mound-sts were deeded to the county in 1837, for the location of a courthouse, county offices and jail by Dr. and Mrs. M. B. Wright.

Soon after the building's construction, however, the site was found to be too small for its intended purposes and a third lot, adjoining the first two on the south, was purchased for $1,556.04. South boundary of the additional lot was then called Strawberry Alley.

The purchase extended the tract to about two and a half acres, an entire city block.

The basement of the main building was used as a jail, the first story above for the sherrif's residence, and the courthouse was located on the second floor.

Two small wings housed offices of the clerk, auditor and treasurer.

Official business increased as the county and city grew and larger facilities were soon needed, promoting the construction of second building in 1852 and 1853, a few feet south of the original courthouse and facing High-st. The two were connected by a passage on the upper floor.

Log Prison First Jail In County

A little log structure, built by Lucas Sullivant in 1804 as a jailhouse, became the first official building of Franklin County. Sullivant received $80 for construction of the prison.

Built of 12-foot logs, their sides hewed to fit snugly, the prison had two floors and a roof of large shingles, or clapboards, split by hand and kept in place by heavy poles laid across them, rather than by nails.

The building had one door and two windows (eight by ten inches) secured by two bars of iron.

Four years later Lucas and Sally Sullivant deeded to Franklin County "Inlot 25," as the location of a new prison.

This structure, built of bricks, was to serve as a prison until 1824 when the seat of county government was transferred across the river to Columbus.

County prisoners were at first lodged in Columbus in a brick building on the south side of Gay-st, between High and Third-st.

When the new court house was completed in 1810, they were moved to cells in the basement of the building. Escapes from the insecure prison were frequent.

Construction on the present county-jail, east of the court house and facing Mound-st, was started in 1864 and completed in May, 1866.

The front of the two-story building was built of brick and housed the sheriff's office and residence. The rear of the structure, with massive stone walls, contained the prison.

US Court Comes To Columbus

Citizens of Columbus, in spite of determined opposition, succeeded in 1821 in having the United States Courts moved from Chillicothe to the capital.

The United States Court House was built on the Public Square in a line with the first state house and about 50 or 60 feet north of the state offices.

The plain, two-story brick structure was about 50 feet square, with a roof rising on all four sides to a circular dome.

A broad, winding stairway from the large entrance hall, led to the second floor. Two large rooms on either side of the center, first-floor hall housed offices of the clerk and marshal, and jury rooms.

The courtroom and a jury room were located on the second floor.

Although financed partially by an appropriation passed by the legislature, the greater part of the building funds was assumed by citizens who raised the money by subscription.

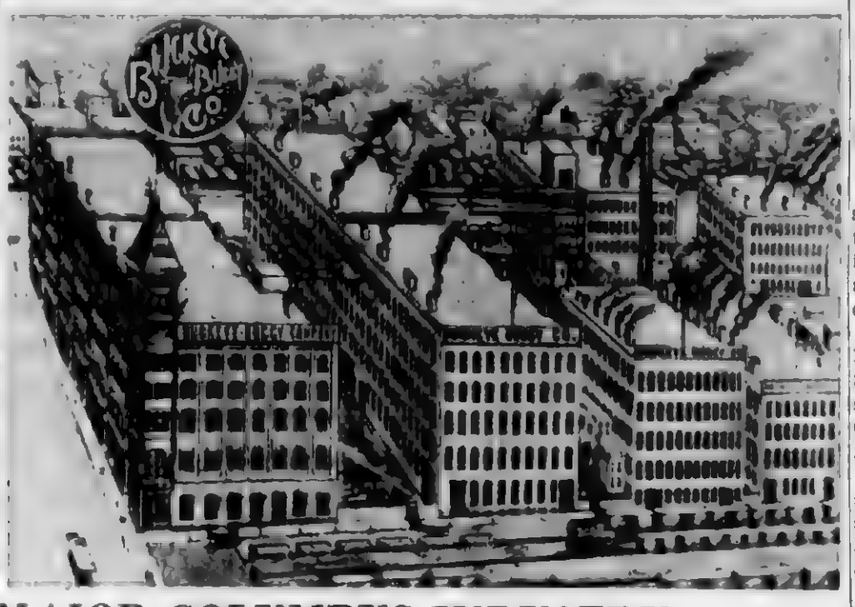
United States court continued to be held in Columbus until 1855, when the state was divided into two districts and the courts moved to Cincinnati.

The court house was torn down soon after.

When the court came to the capital Harvey D. Evans was clerk, and Dr. John Hamm of Zanesville was marshall.

William K. Bond of Chillicothe became clerk after Evans died in 1825, and Bond was succeeded in 1829 or 1830 by William Miner who continued in the post even after the court moved to Cincinnati.

Marshals who succeeded Dr. Hamm were William Doherty, Gen. John Patterson of Jefferson County, John Patterson of Adams, Demas Adams, John McElwin, D. B. Robertson of Fairfield County, G. W. Jones of Knox County, and H. H. Robinson of Cincinnati.



FORTS OF 1812

The Ohio Historical Society administers the sites of two War of 1812 forts for public appreciation: Fort Meigs, Perrysburg and Fort Amanda, Auglaize County.

CITY IN 1834

Columbus was incorporated as a borough in 1816 and, in 1834, became a city by special act of the Legislature. Population was then 3,500.

BUGGY-MAKING WAS ONCE MAJOR COLUMBUS INDUSTRY

OHIO'S CAPITAL was, for many years, an important center for buggy manufacture. Hundreds of people were employed in the industry, the most important one in town. The Buckeye Buggy Co. grew from a humble beginning, at left, to the bustling business, at right.

Township Is Named For Marion

Marion Township, now a part of Columbus, was organized Feb. 24, 1873, and named after William Marion, pioneer from Boston, Mass., who settled in the area in 1807.

William and his brother, Nathaniel, owned nearly 2000 acres in what was to become Marion and Truro Townships, purchased soon after their arrival.

He married Sally Waite from Johnstown, N.Y., the same year, and died in 1837 at age 50.

The first settlement along Alum Creek was in 1799, and pioneers in the region were John White and his wife, Col. and Mrs. E. C. Livingston from New York, David Nelson and Col. Frankenburg, an officer of the Hanoverian army.

George Turner, William Reed, John Starr, Nathaniel Hamlin, John McGown, Andrew Culbertson, William Moobrey, Thomas Hamilton, Alfred E. Stuart, David Aultman, Jacob Hare, John Wallace and Herman Ochs.

Agriculture Advanced By Weber

Weber-rd in north Columbus perpetuates the name of an early settler who was a pioneer in agriculture in that area.

Frederick Weber purchased a five-acre tract with a log cabin, between what is now Weber-rd and Oakland Park-av, east of Indianola-av, in 1834.

The area was sparsely settled because of its wet, heavily-timbered condition.

However, the industrious Weber by means of crop rotation, drainage and proper plowing, found that potatoes cabbage and other vegetable could be raised, in addition t wheat and corn. He al planted an orchard of apple and peaches

During the fall and winte Weber and his sons were bu clearing more land. Ha working and thrifty, W soon extended his land hol ings to a productive farm a ow Hudson-st.

CITY HALL IS BURNED

COLUMBUS' FIRST CITY HALL was this ornate structure, later destroyed by fire and replaced with the present structure.

Ohio School For Deaf First State Institution

The establishment of the School for the Deaf, first state educational institution for the handicapped in Ohio, came about largely through the efforts of Dr. and Mrs. Hoge of the First Presbyterian Church on Spring-st and members of their congregation.

Their petition, signed by a large number of prominent citizens, was presented to the State Legislature in its 1826-'27 session. Recommended by Gov. Morrow, the act of incorporation was passed.

The school was opened Oct. 16, 1829 in a small rented building at the corner of Broad and High-st, with three pupils.

First superintendent and only instructor of the school when it opened was Horatio N. Hubbell, who studied at the American Asylum, Hartford, Conn., for a year and a half to become qualified for the post. Hubbell continued as superintendent of the school until 1851.

Enrollment during the first rm increased to 10, and dur- ng the first year, to 22.

The preceding February 829, a 10-acre site about half mile east of the State House on E. Town-st was purchased for $300.

Construction on the first building at the new location was started in 1832, and a three-story structure, 50 by 80 feet, designed to provide school, lodging, dining and sitting rooms for 60 to 80 pupils, was occupied in the fall of 1834.

A south wing four stories high was added, and occupied in October, 1846.

By 1848 100 pupils were attending the school, and nearly 360 had been educated there.

Applicants so far exceeded the school's facilities that in March, 1864, an act was passed for the construction of a new building with accommodations for 350 pupils and staff.

J. M. Blackburn, architect, submitted the approved plan and was appointed to execute it.

Among items included in the cornerstone, laid Oct. 31, 1864, were portraits of Pres. and Mrs. Lincoln, Gov. Brough and generals, currency, copies of State documents, the emancipation proclamation, newspapers, and a list of the officers, teachers and pupils.

The new building was occupied in September, 1868, but the formal opening was not held until Feb. 11, 1869.

Camp Chase Housed 7000 During Civil War Years

Columbus was half a century old when Camp Chase, bustling center of Civil War activity in this part of Ohio, was established.

The encampment, sprawling over 635 acres of land on what is now W. Broad-st west of Hague-av, resembled a bustling town within months after it was constructed in the spring of 1861. The site was then four miles from Columbus.

Seven thousand men encamped there, and its 160 buildings included officers quarters, private quarters, mess halls, stables, hospitals, cooking and baking houses, a large parade ground and the prison.

The prison section, located on Sullivant-av at Hague-av, was enclosed by a 14-foot board fence topped with spaced platforms for use by sentinels, and all was enclosed by an outer fence that continued around the entire camp and parade ground.

Known first as Camp Jackson, the camp was temporarily established first in Goodale Park, and then torn down and moved during the spring of 1861 to its new site, where it retained its original name until June.

Col. A. E. King was first commander.

Salmon P. Chase, whose name the camp bore, was once a United States Senator and later elected governor of Ohio in 1855 and 1857. Following a term as secretary of the treasury in Lincoln's Cabinet, he was named chief justice of the US Supreme Court.

Camp Chase Cemetery, on Sulivant-av two blocks west of Hague-av, burial ground for 2260 Confederate soldiers and spies, is all that remains of the post.

First prisoner was received June 29, 1861, and on July 5, 23 prisoners from the 23rd Virginia Regiment, captured in the Kanawha Valley, were brought to Columbus.

At the time of the surrender at Appomattox, there were 3,400 prisoners at the camp.

At war's end Camp Chase, so teeming with action for five years, became silent and empty. In February, 1866, military records and documents were moved to Columbus and an un-armed guard stationed at the place to keep watch over the property.

On July 14 of the same year, the prison property was offered for sale by order of Gen. Richardson, the camp torn down and a portion of the lumber shipped to Dayton where it was used in the construction of the National Soldiers Home there.

Records are sparse—there are none to indicate exactly how many troops were encamped there during the war years or how many Confederates housed in the prison.

But stories told by the headstones are eloquent. Spies were identified simply as "citizens." All prisoners' graves are numbered and labeled.

Final pages of the camp's history, with the high death rate from widespread disease during the closing months of the war, are clearly written. Men died so quickly that some graves contain bodies of two men.

The heartbreak of family divided, the tragedy of all Civil Wars, everywhere, is told in one headstone, the story of two brothers, so divided in their opinions and loyalties that they enlisted on opposing sides.

The Confederate soldier was captured and sent to the prison at Camp Chase. And here he met his brother, a Union guard.

The Confederate became ill and died; the Union soldier in his official position as a guard was forced to bury his brother as an enemy.

Many Southerners made the sad trip to Columbus at war's end seeking the graves of loved ones. Some were successful here, others continued on.

Simple white headstones mark each grave, identifying the soldier and his military connection. A small American flag is placed at the head of the grave.

A monument in the center of the cemetery is a stone archway bearing the single word, "Amercans." On the top of the arch is a statue of a Confederate soldier, and beneath it, a huge rock bear-enclosure."

The Robert E. Lee Chapter of the Daughters of the Confederacy maintains the cemetery.

Darby Creek Is Settled Early In 1810

A settlement sprang up along Darby Creek as early as 1810, 20 years before the township was to be formed.

James Boyd, John Hayden, John Patterson and W. Renler were among the earliest, with others arriving at intervals along the banks of Darby until 1825, when a number of Welsh families joined them.

A sawmill was built along the Darby in 1837 and later, while the Urbana and Western Railway was being built, a steam sawmill was constructed to provide railroad ties.

Joseph O'Harra was named first postmaster for the Darby postoffice in 1848, a post he would hold for 10 or 12 years.

Other pioneer families in the area were those of Jacob Rogers, James Langton, John D. Acton, Paul Alder, William Walker, Henry Francis, James Huggett, Chauncey Beach, N. E. Fares, George M. Clover and John Kilgore.

Ohio Escapes Disaster In '37 Financial Panic

Ohio was saved from the financial disaster that overwhelmed other states during the panic of 1837 to 1841 through the singlehanded efforts of a Columbus man, Alfred Kelley.

Kelley had come to the city in 1830 as acting canal commissioner, responsible for building the Ohio Canal System. Although this was his principal work he was also interested in railroads, turnpikes, taxation, banking, public credit and schools.

Ohio at that time, and many other states as well, was embarked on a gigantic program of building and expansion of roads and canals, all financed on borrowed money and to be repaid from expected revenue from toll roads and canals.

When the speculatory bubble burst in 1837, state after state was overwhelmed and, impoverished from overextending their credit, was forced to repudiate or disclaim their debts.

Some projects had to be abandoned, half-finished and unproductive, while others were found to be premature and impractical.

Kelley was in New York at the time, trying to borrow money by pledging or selling bonds in order to pay interest on the canal bonds he had helped to negotiate. Financiers, however, refused the bonds as pledges of security.

Ohio's treasury was empty and legislators were considering repudiating the state's debts.

It was then that Kelley offered his own notes, even though failure in their payment would have meant personal bankruptcy.

The money was advanced and Ohio's interest was paid. The state neither repudiated her debts nor ever again kept her creditors waiting.

Some of the states who had taken the action later paid her debts, but others still remain unpaid.

Kelley returned to Columbus and helped Ohio rebuild her finances.

$800,000 Simulators Train EB-47 Crews

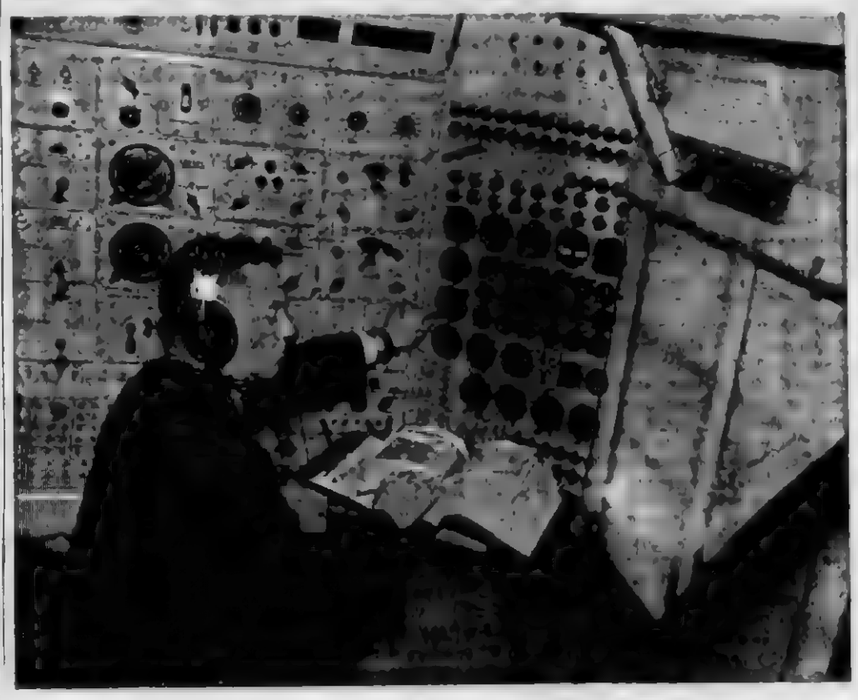
Any emergency except structural failure and gravity forces can be demonstrated on the two EB-47 Simulators at Lockbourne AFB.

The $800,000 training devices are scheduled 13 hours each, per day, according to Maj. Donald R. Feitley who is in charge of the Simulator program. Each EB-47 pilot and co-pilot must spend two and one-half hours on emergency procedures plus one-half hour each of briefing and debriefing a quarter plus eight hours of instruction annually. Co-pilots who are undergoing preparation to become aircraft commanders are also required to spend a 26-hour period in the trainer.

The EB-47 is a converted Boeing six-engine jet bomber with a cruising speed of 600 m.p.h. The mission of the wing is to jam enemy radar with electronic counter-measures.

Although Gen. James Doolittle had experimented with instrumental link trainers as early as the late 30's, the B47 which was developed after World War II was the first craft designed with tandem seats for the pilot and co-pilot which precluded an instructor riding beside the pilot during training. Thus it became necessary for the Simulator to be used for instructional purposes.

Now Simulators are designed simultaneously with each new type craft manufactured. Each is an exact replica of the cockpit of the bomber with all instruments, and the hydraulic and electrical systems.



First Lt. Gordon Clovis, co-pilot, is in control of these systems as well as air refueling which Maj. Feitley classifies as the most important function toward maintaining safety of the craft. The two 20MM cannons, the only armament of the converted bomber which originally carried over 20,000 pounds payload, are also Clovis' responsibility as well as shooting the sextant for celestial navigation for the navigator, the third member of the crew.

Crew On "Alert"

The crew which is on alert is never separated except when a crew member remains with the ship or in the crew's alert car in preference to accompanying the others to training sessions, meals or other occasions.

Living in the Alert Building, or "mole hole" as it is known, the crew can be airborne in less than 10 minutes from sounding of the alert.

This speed is possible in spite of the usual hour and one-half check out required before take-off, as the 171 check points necessary before starting the engine are already covered in a plane on alert status.

AT THE CONSOLE of the EB-47 Simulator sits Capt. Frank Hasty, dreaming up emergency situations as failure of the hydraulic systems, smoking engines and icing difficulties to be met by Maj. Mario Cappelli, pilot, and his co-pilot, 1st Lt. Gordon Clovis.

"I WONDER WHAT HASTY WILL COME UP WITH NEXT," ponders Maj. Cappelli at the controls of the EX-47 Simulator at Lockbourne AFB. Cappelli, Columbus Country Club-rd, who flew in Italy dring World War II and in Korea in 1951 has logged more than 3000 hours.

West Sider Uses Norwegian Elkhounds To Track Black Panther In S. Solon Area

By ED CHURCHILL

Panther hunting may seem like an unusual sport around Columbus, but David Foughty, 739 Campbell-av and his brother Chuck of Westerville, think they have just the ticket for "cat catching."

The former Foughty is the proud owner of two Norwegian Elkhounds he purchased last year in Montana where they are used for hunting mountain lions and he seems confident his dogs can track down the black panther reported running loose in the South Solon area.

No one knows where the panther came from, but a circus camped in Lafayette for the winter has offered $1,000 reward for capture of the cat —alive.

A large search party is being organized in South Solon, but the Foughtys plan to go after the animal alone.

In fact they have already been out once (last Saturday) but had no luck.

They had planned to go out Wednesday night (Jan. 16) if there was any snow on the ground so the beast could be tracked.

The Elkhounds are very similar, in size and appearance, to Huskies, used in the Arctic countries as sled dogs.

The male, "Duke," is 18 months old, weighs about 60 pounds and is "very powerful," according to his master.

Lady, the "better half" of the pair, is a year old, and slightly smaller than Duke.

Foughty said he is expecting a litter of pups in about another month.

He believed the dogs were on the panther's track last Saturday, but couldn't catch up with him, so the Foughty brothers decided to try the hunt again at night.

As for the $1,000 reward—Foughty said he is interested in it, but placed the welfare of his brother, himself and the dogs above that of the cat.

Girl Ill From Fumes

An eight year old Welch-av girl was made ill by carbon monoxide fumes from an unvented space heater at her home Sunday, a city inspector reported.

Connie Romine, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Romine, 381 E. Welch-av, was treated and released at Mercy Hospital where she was taken by firemen.

Housing Inspector Charles Armstrong said he ordered Romine to install a proper vent.

Aug. 15, 1914, the Panama Canal was opened officially.

MAN WITH CAMERA

WELCOME WAGON

A Radiant CLEAN LIFE

The housewife cleans her home until it shines with a radiance that gives contentment and joy to those who view it.

It pleases God to see our lives clean and wholesome. We all need help, to keep our lives clean. David prayed to God for help in this matter. "Create in me a clean heart, O God; and renew a right spirit within me."

Lean upon the Lord. Seek his help and he will not deny it. Attend church this Sunday and let your life be centered in the Lord.

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

Familiar Faces Expected At Trudeau Guild Dinner

Since many Trudeau Guilds function within the area of this paper, and many key board offices are filled with local women, it is to be expected that many familiar faces will be seen at the third annual Trudeau Guild dinner Sunday, Jan. 20, at the Arlington Inn.

The event will be held from noon until 8 p.m.

The $2 adult, $1.50 children's tickets will entitle one to a choice of a beef or chicken dinner. Local board officers and committee chairmen are: Mrs. Donald Ryan, president; Mrs. John Kessler, vice-president; Mr. William Paulus, expansion; Mrs. Earl Yorkey, project; Mrs. Howard Merritt, patient adoption; Mrs. Paul Lenox, publicity; Mrs. James Claar, calendar; Mrs. Charles Huebner, telephone.

Former South Siders also on the board are Mrs. Herbert Hampton, corresponding secretary, and hospital entertainment, Mrs. J. Vincent and Mrs. J. Walters. The public is invited to the dinner; no reservations are necessary. All profits are used for the benefit of the patients of the Benjamin Franklin Hospital.

While thoughts are on the hospital it would be appropiate to include portions of the thank-you letter received from Louise Kennedy, director of special services anent the "Gifts For Giving" Christmas project. It is as follows: "The proper words are hard to find to describe the feeling I have for your Gifts-For-Giving program. Despite their confinement and illness our patients have a compelling desire to give at Christmas time. You and your dedicated group give them the most precious gift of all. I tried a new idea this year by prearranging a Christmas Eve celebration around each tree for the patients and nurses on duty. I appointed a Santa who in turn picked song leaders for hymns, a Bible reader and a distributor of gifts which the patients arranged under each tree. Your spirit of letting them give perhaps helped to formulate this idea. I also would like to bring this theory into entertainment. Will you help me along this line? My thoughts have not progressed further than "participation versus witnessing."

It doesn't seem possible that the mid-mark of the first month of the year has been reached, but these youngsters are delighted, for it means they have a birthday to celebrate: Kathleen Kennedy, Roberta Davis, Donald McClain, Danny Gillenwater, Susan Rausch, Peggy Richardson, Donald Boyer, Jeffrey Henry, Susan Porzik, Susan Youhas, Johnny Craggs. A belated greeting to Joan Church.

The "Twixt and Tweeners" include Dick Porzik, Brenda Finch, Linda Newkirk.

Community adults who celebrate birthdays include Betty Justus, Mrs. Hiser, Nellie McGiven, Jewel Castle, Marie Lyle, Jeanette Graham, Magdalene Loudner, Serina Wood, Tim Souder, Walter Denney, Ruth Karch, Glee Aleta McNutt, Leona Sutorius.

Mrs. Harry Esselstein, 808 Jaeger-st is the premium stamp chairman of St. Mary's Parish. She may be reached at HI. 3-6903.

Dr. John Terry, of the hospital ship "Hope," will be the guest speaker of the Stewart Avenue PTA when it meets at 7:30 p.m., Tuesday, Jan. 22. He will show slides "Peru and Peruvian Indians," showing Indian patients "before and after plastic surgery. The tribe is the same one which sent representives to Columbus last autumn who appeared in a downtown store. The public is welcome. Refreshments will be served.

Now settled in her Florida home and eager to hear from her Columbus friends is Mae Dean, long-time resident of 33 E. Jenkins-av. She reports that she enjoys her new home and new furniture, but misses her family and friends in Columbus. She would love to hear from them. Her address is 206 E. Tarpon-st, Ocala, Fla.

The Links of the South Side Settlement hope to secure a jeep for use at the "Triple S" camp, by holding a Special Gifts Campaign. Anyone who has ever visited the "Triple S" camp site knows that the terrain there abouts is as rugged as any to be found in Ohio.

Chairman of the gifts committee is Mrs. Elmer Jauch, 444-7987, who is assisted by Mrs. Harry Lewis, 837-2249. Either one of these women will gladly give full details of the campaign to interested persons.

Approves—

out that the police could protect the proposed $450,000 recreation center in the park.

In the early stages of this controversy, which began brewing two months ago, Parks Commission Superintendent J. Richard Lawwill brought out some of the most vehement protests when he maintained that the substation would be a "traffic hazard" to youngsters in the area.

Southwick contended Monday that other city departments and divisions had to purchase their own land and he saw no reason why the Police Department had to encroach upon the park land.

Service Director Ernest Stork had said that the need was very great to get a substation in the South Side and he was "fearful" what would happen if the city had to "set out and buy land" for this purpose.

As Columbus Police Chief George Scholer sees it, this is one of the primary steps in eventually setting up a precinct system in the department here.

"We're sprawled out too much to continue to operate out of a central police station," Scholer has said in the past. "A South Side station could eventually become a precinct for us — as will the Franklin Park and other existing substations."

The plan to locate the substation on the Lincoln Park grounds received the tentative approval by the Council of South Side Organizations about a month ago during its annual Christmas party at which Chief Scholer was the featured speaker.

Prayer—

more schools with vocational training facilities. That is, to disperse these areas throughout the schools in the city. I hope to someday have adequate technical and vocational training and eventually a junior college type set up," he said.

A patent for the calliope was granted Oct. 9, 1855, to Joshua Stoddard.

AQUINAS SWEEPS PAIR

Cowboys Bop Rebs; Rams' 5 'Bucked'

By ART KIENZLE

South High's basketball team was hit with both barrels Friday night as Charles Castle and Steve Barnard of West made 20 and 24 points respectively to beat the Rebs, 71-59.

South had a fair first quarter effort and kept the game even at 14-14.

BY INTERMISSION West had shown a little more ability as they pulled off by five points, 31-26.

West ran even faster in the second half, opening the lead by 10 points or more for most of the way, and finally winning by 12.

South had a big surprise from sophomore Lloyd Pate, who played well and threw in 18 points. Secorid high man for the losers was Paul Hunt with 15.

The Rebs stand 0-3 in the CL, being separated from the basement only by Walnut Ridge (0-5), their next opponent tomorrow night at South.

ST. MARY'S, struck low by an ice-cold second half, suffered a major setback to their County League title aspirations Friday night as University's all-winning Bucklings listed the Rams as their eighth straight cage victim, 79-43.

The Rams matched the Little Bucks almost point-for-point throughout most of the first half, trailing only 41-33 at intermission. But it was an abrupt turnabout the second half as the Rams could collect only 10 points while University was busy scoring 38 markers.

St. Mary's bright spot was Bob Yates, who scored 16 points. John Howard popped in 29 big points to pace the Bucklings.

THE OTHER HALF of the area's County League combination—Rosary—could do no better against University, falling under the Bucks' point scoring attack Saturday night, 70-33.

Ed Roehrenbeck led the Crusader scoring with 11 points with Rick Stokes' 10 markers close behind.

The Crusaders could fare no better against neighborhood rival Academy, bowing to the Vikings in another CL encounter, 66-38. Jim Groce paced Rosary in this one with 20 points.

Over in the City League, Aquinas won a pair over the weekend while Marion-Franklin dropped its only cage effort.

Aquinas, outshot from the field, converted 42 of 61 foul shots to gain a 78-61 advantage over the Red Devils from M-F.

The Terriers, who never trailed, built up an 8-0 advantage before the Red Devils were able to break the scoring ice. Steve Jackson's 14 points paced the M-F offense while teammates John Jackson and Harold Hall added 12 more markers each.

Pat Mental and Mike Welling led the Irish offense with 20 and 18 points respectively.

THE TERRIERS bested Watterson, 54-40, Saturday night to boost their win-loss mark to 7-2. The Eagles held on for the first half but Aquinas broke a 21-all tie at the outset of the third period and gradually built up its winning margin.

Pat Mental and the Terriers' Hartman topped Irish scoring with 19 and 16 points.

All area teams see action on the hardwood Friday and Saturday nights. On the Friday docket, Aquinas (7-2) is at North, Walnut Ridge (1-8) is at South (3-6), Eastmoor (3-4) is at Marion-Franklin (2-8) while St. Mary's (6-3) renews its traditional rivalry with Rosary (2-7) at the Catholic Center, (K of C).

One area game is on tap for Saturday play as St. Mary's hosts Holy Family (1-9).

Pro Woe—You Can't Tell The Players Without A Spotcard

"I'm not so halve to think that in any league of this kind, with so many players, that there may not be a few boys who would have some contact or association with people who might be considered tainted."

Such were the words of AFL Commissioner Joe Foss on the suggested infiltration of the pro football ranks by the forces of evil.

FOSS PROBABLY has taken the most sensible stand on the situation. This way bossman Joe isn't dressing his boys in cherub's robes, which would look a little ridiculous, but on the other hand he isn't chancing any motor tuneup, gangland-style either.

Ever since the old-time White Sox had their hose dyed black after the baseball fix, people have been going Sherlock Holmes every time a whiff of scandal stinks up the sporting atmosphere.

Of course, basketball was hit twice and boxing has been saddled with shady implications for as long as we can remember. But the fuss that George Halas has stirred up can do little more as far as we can see than cause too many people to slap a "blanket condemnation" on the sport and start overworking that "one apple rotting the whole barrel" adage.

LIKE A CANCEROUS growth, the spy system spread from the Bears to the Lions with even "Golden Boy" Paul Horning's name linked with the undesirables.

It's getting to a point where you might expect the lineup vendors to start shouting, "You can't tell the players without a spotcard."

As far as personal associations go, it's hard enough for a high school coach to dictate rules of company-keeping to his boys, much less general managers shaking a finger at a 245-pound tackle and telling him not to run around with "Mac the Knife."

THE WHOLE THING boils down to one unsoluble point. As long as there are big-time athletic events and big-time gamblers with patrons willing to chance a buck, there's going to be the implication of a "fix."

There are those who believe that publicity on a scandal helps to keep the wolves at bay but we wonder if this type of psychology doesn't do more harm than good.

Our only suggestion to Pete Rozelle (NFL commissioner) and Foss, if the inquiry hurricane doesn't blow itself out soon, is to contact Sam Huff, Big Daddy Lipscomb and Joe Schmidt and set up shop in Eliot Ness' old "Untouchables" office.

SPEAKING OF "UNTOUCHABLES," Paul Brown got the word that no mortal man is indispensable even after 16 years in a move that probably wasn't quite as "shocking" as it seemed at first glance.

It wasn't a very well kept secret in Cleveland that too many people have been dissatisfied with the Brown operation for too long a time. Rumors of strained player relations were confirmed by reliable sources after the season and something had to give.

It's always been the accepted practice in athletic echelons to bring in new blood, coachwise, when success afield became too obviously elusive.

BUT WITH BROWN it was different, or so most people thought until last week. We only met Paul once, following him around six holes on a Mansfield golf course in our infancy as a sportswriter.

All we can remember about Brown was our amazement at how he could talk pro football and stay out of the rough all at the same time.

Perhaps the most shocking part of Brown's dismissal, at least to us, was the report of the small share of Brownie stock that Paul possessed upon release as head coach.

IT WILL SEEM rather strange not to see the little man in the dark overcoat and characteristic hat pacing up and down in front of the Brown's bench next season.

But it was the only way Brown could go. We don't feel he would have ever retired — at least not until he had rebuilt the dynasty that had made him and his Cleveland team a legend in pro football history books.

Maybe pro football had "outgrown" Paul Brown. This is often the case as pupil excels teacher. We were not unaccustomed to "second-guessing" the veteran mentor on many a Sunday afternoon over the past few seasons.

But now that Brown has been given his cup of hemlock, we don't feel it's "sour grapes" at all in feeling that Paul's 16-year tenure has added a special touch to the professional football spectacular.

BITS OF WIT(T)—Columbus St. Mary has come up with a new look at the Rams' home games. Not only do the players warm up to the tune of "Sweet Georgia Brown" but there's also a new mechanical addition to the scorers' table that electronically informs fans when the one-and-one ruling goes into effect on four shots.

Whitehall wrestling coach, Vince Gonino, has high hopes for his 122-pound entry in the Rams' mat corps this year. Gonino looks for Al Rosenblum, captain, to follow in the footsteps of former Whitehall wrestling stars Mike Beery and Gary Joseph and gain some state-wide honors for the Rams.

Church Loops Begin Play At South 'Y'

The South Side Branch YMCA's Inter-Church winter sports program got underway last week with action starting for 55 teams participating in seven basketball leagues and one volleyball circuit.

Volleyball — Scottwood Community held the strong Capital Seminary sextet to an even break in their two-game match while St. Paul Lutheran and St. Paul United swept into a first place tie by scoring two-game victories over Christ Methodist and Livingston Methodist respectively.

Senior Basketball — Redeemer Lutheran outclassed Scottwood and Hope Lutheran finished fast to top St. John United in the Senior League play. Falkner, Sacker, Chuck Graver and Dick Brixner led the scorers.

Tuesday Juniors—St. Paul Lutheran showed real team strength in beating the defending champion St. Paul United quintet in the opening game on the card. Ohio Avenue EUB topped Hungarian E and R and Parsons Baptist nosed out a scrappy Livingston Methodist team in a real thriller. In other games Larry Jones (16), Mike Coleman (13) and Cam Roberts (10) led the point makers.

Girls—In the Girls' League Nancy Leslein led Ohio Avenue to an important win over the always powerful St. John United lassies, while Emmanuel Lutheran was awarded a victory over South Methodist.

Wednesday Juniors—Roger Crum scorched the nets for 24 points to help Oakwood Methodist outscore Emmanuel, while South Methodist defeated St. John United in another cage tilt.

Intermediate Boys — There was plenty of action in this division as Frebis Church of God rolled past Williams Road Presbyterian; Southwood Church of God rolled past Williams Road Presbyterian; Southwood Church of Christ eked out a win over South Methodist; St. Paul Lutheran defeated Trinity Lutheran; Oakwood Methodist outscored Hungarian E and R, and Ohio Avenue EUB showed mid-season form in winning over last year's champions, the St. Paul United five. John Evans led the scorers with 17 points, followed by Larry Blanton (15), Jerry Robison (15), Paul Nick (14), Andy Porzik (14), Bill Howard (13) and Gary Kipp (13).

Wrestling Wrapup

Franklin Heights got back into the winner's circle in the high school wrestling arena Saturday by defending its crown in the Pleasant View Invitational Tourney.

The Falcon matmen piled up 105 points to top the host Panthers, who were runners-up with a score of 80. F-H took five of the 11 weight divisions matches.

AZIZ DERE, a 122-pounder from Franklin Heights, and Pleasant View's 114-pound John Holloway, the only two returnees to the tourney, retained their titles for the second straight year.

Other scores in the tournament were: University, 46; Circleville, 42; Groveport, 34; Grove City, 23; Grandview, 22, and West, 15.

Rosary Frosh Win

Glen Hahn's 20 points led Rosary's frosh cagers to a 49-45 win over St. Marys last week. The Crusaders built up a wide first half margin but had to slam the door on a Ram rally in the second half to pick up the win.

Suburban Loop Situation Remains At 'Status Quo'

The situation in the newly-organized Suburban League remained unchanged this week after the charter members — Pleasant View, Franklin Heights, Teays Valley and Hamilton Township — concluded their "constitution" meeting last week.

President Theodore Dagg announced that no new schools submitted applications for entry at the meeting but the business conducted revolved around the application of finishing touches to the league constitution.

DAGG ADMITTED that six schools had representatives at the meeting and that two additional schools have shown interest in the new circuit.

"We're trying to speed up work on the constitution," Dagg said. "We don't expect any further action from other schools until we set up league policy."

Dagg said the Suburban loop's constitution committee had just about finished the constitution and were halfway through the by-laws.

"THERE ARE IMPORTANT points such as financial breakdown, eligibility and admission prices to be settled before we have a solid base of league policy to present to the interested parties," Dagg concluded.

The league's next meeting has been set for Feb. 24 at 7:30 p.m. at Pleasant View High School. All schools interested in the league should have a representative at the meeting.

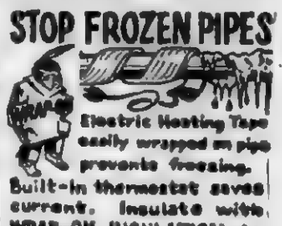
No Place Like Home?? Fish Record Proves It

Here's a fisherman who added to his angling pleasure by keeping a record of his catches during 1962. He fished the Scioto River in Franklin County and its O'Shaughnessy Reservoir in Delaware County, so he didn't travel far for his sport. Yet, he caught 931 fish.

Arthur Hegedus, 9364 Dublin-rd, Shawnee Hills, Dublin, gave his fishing data to Clarence Clark, fish management staff specialist for the Ohio Division of Wildlife.

Crappies were most abundant in his creel. He caught 761, probably most of them in the reservoir. Hegedus took 88 largemouth bass, probably also from the reservoir, and 31 smallmouth bass, these from the shallowest portions of the river. He also listed 18 bullheads, 13 bluegills, 10 channel catfish, two walleyes, three quillbacks, three rock bass and two carp.

Hegedus' records show that May was his best month when he landed 471 fish. In September he caught 223, April-138, June-48, August-41, July-10 and October two. His success per hour of fishing was highest in May when he averaged 7.9 fish; September-five, April-4.2, August-2.9, October-2, June-0.9, and July-0.5.



Clark pointed out that while Hegedus added to his angling pleasure by keeping records, he also added something to fish management knowledge, especially on fishing success.

"This angler's record shows that by persistent effort fishermen can catch a lot of fish close to home," said Clark.

Don't Force Yourself, But Visit 'Forcing House' Soon

Planning to visit the Franklin Park Conservatory soon? Visit the growing or forcing house while you are there.

At the present time, they are forcing roses for the Flower and Garden Show to be held at Veterans Memorial this coming March.

Lantana is another plant being forced and there are are some in bloom at present.

These plants can be grown inside and out. If they are kept inside they should be kept in a south window. Outside Lantana is used for a low growing border plant and the spent blooms must be pinched off regularly.

There happens to be a weeping variety in bloom, also, in the conservatory.

DIED Bulletin Says Ohio Industry Did Well In '62

The latest country to gain independence from Great Britain is the Island of Jamaica.

A recent edition of the Ohio Department of Industrial and Economic Development bulletin indicates the state's economic picture in 1962 was far from disastrous.

The Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad reported earnings for the first 10 months of 1962 increased substantially from the corresponding period in 1961.

The company's net income for the 10-month period was $27,711,000, or $3.37 a share, compared with $21,964,000, or $2.67 a share. Gross revenues amounted to $283,727,000, compared with $258,117,000.

Babcock and Wilcox Company, Barberton, has received a multi-million-dollar contract from the Baltimore Gas and Electric Company for a universal pressure steam boiler that will be used to generate 319,000 kilowatts of electricity.

The Victoreen Instrument Co. here reports earnings of $1,303,000 for the first nine months of 1962, compared with only $7,984 in the same 1961 period.

President and chairman of Victoreen, David H. Cogan, adds that sales for the latest nine months climbed from $13,417,000 to $16,609,000. Cogan pointed out that sales and earnings for the nine-month period were highest in the company's 30-year history.

The Goodyear Aircraft Corp. has won a $250,000 add-on contract for a study of correlation guidance system techniques. The study, in its fourth year, is sponsored by the Air Force System Command's Aeronautical System Division.

Five Ohio cities have been approved for Federal Urban Planning Assistance grants totaling $60,887, according to the Ohio Department of Industrial and Economic Development bulletin.

POOLING TALENTS

An anonymous benefactor contributed a "Skill Pool" game recently for the youngsters at Schiller Park. Only trouble is that recreation leaders there find it hard to work with the temptation of playing the game themselves. For instance, physical education director Joe Campbell is the undisputed champion right now.

REAL FRIEND

Columbus Recreation Director N. J. Barack has become a real friend of the South Side. He's done much work in pushing the Lincoln Park Recreation Center and was one of the main leaders in getting the new gymnasium for Schiller Park, among other projects.

CLEAN SWEEP

John Marshall, president of the South Side Business and Industrial Association and representative of that group to the Council of South Side Organizations, says the idea of wire trash baskets in the area is quite popular. Ten are in use now and Marshall (who pushed this project first) says there are more to come.

Final Date Nears For Cost-Sharing On Tree Planting

Final date for requesting cost-sharing for ACP practice A-7, tree planting for forestry purposes is Friday, Feb. 1, according to Carl W. Schacht, Franklin Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation committee Chairman.

The cut off date has been established, Schacht said, to enable the County ASCS office to process requests and the farm forestor to make necessary determinations before the most favorable date for planting trees.

The farm forestor is required to visit each farm which requests cost-sharing under the practice and approve both the proposed planting site and species.

The county ASCS office will furnish information on ACP practices for 1963.

Junior Achievement Program Will Have Its 37th Birthday

National Junior Achievement program is preparing to celebrate its 37th anniversary next spring.

The program, which gives high school students an opportunity to experience ownership, management, and operation of a miniature business, was originated by Horace A. Moses, chairman of the Strathmore Paper Co. in 1926.

In 1942, a National Headquarters was established and regional offices were installed in Chicago, Cleveland, New York, Pittsburgh, and Middletown, O. By 1950 29 areas areas were in operation, and 10 years later 166 areas had been established with 4196 Junior Achievement companies and 68,825 members participating.

Junior Achievement was incorporated in Columbus in 1950 through the efforts of the Columbus Rotary Club. There were 22 companies with approximately 350 teenage members. The program is supported by contributions from some 150 local business and industrial concerns.

Last year there were 31 companies with 673 members. Each sponsoring business or industry provides advisers who are junior executives in the sponsoring company.

Junior Achievement is a non-profit national organization which develops and expands a spare-time program to give teenage youth experience in the overall aspects of business.

The objective of the organization is to give young people a preview of the business world so they may discover for themselves the type of work they like and for which they are best suited. They receive training and experience in all phases of American business operation.

The emphasis in the program is on "learning by doing," and students are able to study the relationship between those who manage, those who produce, and those who supply funds. Students learn why business is run as it is if it is to succeed.

Each student company sells stock to raise capital, buys materials, and makes a product which members sell — mostly door-to-door. At the end of a fiscal period — a school year — the companies close their books hoping to show a profit.

Individual awards in the form of college scholarships, trophies, and plaques are made each year at the "Future Unlimited" banquet held in May. More than 800 representatives of the sponsoring firms, advisers, board members, achievers, and parents attend the annual dinner.

Wilbur T. Collins presently serves as president of the Junior Achievement Board of Directors. Warren E. Parkinson is the executive director. The Junior Achievement Center is located at 214 N. High-st.

Schools which participate in the program are: North, East, Central, Eastmoor, Grandview, Holy Family, Watterson, Marion-Franklin, South, West, Linden-McKinley, Bishop Hartley, Upper Arlington, St. Charles, Gahanna, Walnut Ridge, Whetstone and Bishop Ready.

COUNCIL OKAYS AID FOR LINCOLN PARK

After holding up on ordinance introduced three weeks ago, Columbus City Council finally approved Monday night a request by Recreation Director N. J. Barack to contract for federal aid on a proposed recreation center in Lincoln Park.

The proposal had met early opposition because of what some council members thought were "strings attached," giving the Federal Government too much control over the center.

The proposed contract was approved when Barack explained that it was no different than several others already in effect.

Right Side, Sir!

Next time you have occasion to attach an identification card or tag to your dress or coat lapel why not place it on the right side instead of the left.

Take time to experiment. You will find that your eye rather automatically picks up an identification when the tag is on the right side and at the same time you can see the person bearing the tag. Try it.

Saxbe Disappoints Sunday Sales Enforcement Backers

A Hartley Headliner Report

By JOHN AUBLE, JR.

Any preliminary groundwork laid by ex-Attorney General Mark McElroy in this state's Sunday sales law enforcement battle has seemingly been tossed to the winds with the recent change of administration.

As a result, there's plenty of evidence in the capital city of hard feelings between the Greater Columbus Sunday Association and newly-elected Attorney General William B. Saxbe.

The association, in essence, claims that Saxbe took "shocking and disappointing" action when he dismissed 11 corporation suits filed through "quo warranto" writs by McElroy shortly before he left office.

Actually, McElroy filed 12 suits but one, Arlan's, agreed to a change in their corporate policy and chose to close on Sunday voluntarily.

The other 11 were dismissed by Saxbe "five minutes after he came into office," Association Secretary Gene King claimed Tuesday, "and, without even consulting those concerned, including the church and labor groups depending on the attorney general's aid in this fight."

The association official further charged that Saxbe had agreed to a meeting Jan. 22 with Sunday Association officials, church, labor and retail merchant groups before taking any terminal action.

Saxbe, on the other hand, reported Tuesday that he hadn't "heard a word" from the association. He did concede that his first assistant, Jerry Donahue, had received a letter about the meeting.

When asked why he took such quick and direct action, Saxbe said, "I have no doubts that these people are violating the law but I don't think we should take over the powers of prosecution unless the legislature wants us to."

Saxbe said he had promised to dismiss the suits if he was elected, "and I just moved ahead with plans," he added. He also maintains that his basic reason for this is that he doesn't feel that the McElroy act was within the "role of the attorney general of any state."

As to the "role" of the attorney general, Ted Saker, first assistant to McElroy, former attorney general, defended the action of his administration by saying:

"We have used quo warranto on several occasions in highly divergent fields and, of course, we have followed the pattern of prior attorney generals and this type of suit has been filed in Ohio courts for the last 100 years or more.

"The Ohio constitution gives authority for this type of suit," Saker commented, "and authority is also given in an entire chapter in the Ohio Revised Code."

McElroy had issued quo warranto action (law suit against large corporations) Dec. 28 against Whitehall Discount City and Arlan's of Columbus, Econo-Fair of Cincinnati, Uncle Bill's of Cleveland, Shoppers' Fair of Dayton, Ontario's of Toledo and Miracle Mart of Akron.

He took similar action Jan. 8 against Giant Tiger of Cleveland, Ontario of Cincinnati, Mason's Discount Store of Toledo, Big City, Inc., of Columbus and Clarkin's of Akron.

Saxbe also criticized McElroy's office for its "timing" in issuing the legal action, feeling that it was "dropped" right into his lap when taking office.

"I feel that we were charged with our responsibilities until noon Monday," Saker said in reply.

Saxbe said he's still looking forward to the Jan. 22 meeting. "They can come to my office anytime," he said. The groups were to meet there at 10:30 a. m. but, according to King and the association, it's doubtful that the meeting will transpire.

"We have nothing to say to him now," King said. "We're extremely disappointed and feel that he's taken a swipe at not only the association but also at the church, labor and business factions.

"We thought we had an understanding with Saxbe," King continued. "If we can't count on him to file action against corporations, who do we count on? Nobody. This is the proper function of the attorney general's office."

If the meeting does go on as scheduled, Saxbe's office said it would "probably just be a general discussion of the problem and he (Saxbe) will set forth his views."

It was pointed out, also, that even though Saxbe asked the Supreme Court to dismiss the civil suits, the court still has to accept the proposal. In the past, the court has usually upheld action by the attorney general, however.

NURSING HOME HOLDS OPEN HOUSE

MURRAY HILL MANOR, 880 Greenlawn-av, non-sectarian nursing home was officially opened last Friday. Open house was held Sunday with some 3000 visitors touring the building. Built by Virginia Homes, Inc., the manor cost more than $500,000. It is affiliated with Mt. Carmel Hospital and is supervised by Robert W. Stuart. Police Exam, Openings Announced By Scholer

Chief of Police George W. Scholer and the Municipal Civil Service Commission have announced an open competitive examination for police patrolmen.

"We have a number of openings," the Chief said, "to be filled by young men in our area. There are qualified individuals in and around Columbus who want to become a member of our department, but who have not taken the necessary steps," Scholer continued.

"We hope these men will contact the Civil Service Commission for an application and further information.

The following qualifications are listed by the Civil Service Commission.

Capital Rug Cleaning Enters 75th Year

The Capital Rug Cleaning Co., 366 Zimpfer-st, will celebrate its 75th anniversary this year.

The firm was founded by Gustav Poenisch, grandfather of present owner, Richard O. Poenisch, in 1888. Since that time it has specialized in rug and furniture cleaning, remodeling and repairing rugs and pads, dyeing and wrapping rugs for storage.

Capital also offers carpeting installation, and has portable equipment for in-the-home carpet cleaning.

Gustav Poenisch, a rug weaver in Germany, came to America in the late 1800's to establish the business. At the time there were only three rug cleaning establishments in Columbus.

In 1923 Gustav's three sons, Otto, Oscar and Fred, took over the company. Originally known as Gustav Poenisch Sons, the name was changed to Capital in the mid-1920's. Richard joined the organization in 1949 and assumed control in 1954. Since that time he has been assisted by his wife, Mary.

Today the firm offers county-wide pick up and delivery service, free estimates, unconditional guarantees on its work, and complete insurance coverage.

Despite the cold weather, 428 Scouts and Scouters participated in the White Oaks District winter camporee this past weekend at Edgewater Park.

On Saturday afternoon the district held activities for patrols from each troop. The first was a scavenger hunt, to test the Scouts ability in observation.

There was also a first aid rescue operation later on in the afternoon. Three blue ribbons for first place were awarded for these contests. They went to the Eightball Patrol of Troop 68, the Woodsmen Patrol of Troop 166, and the Hernando Patrol of Troop 107.

Troop 166 was the only troop to have all of its patrols place.

Troop 422 was the host troop and spent a lot of time prior to the camporee in preparation.

The winter camporee for the Mohawk District will be held Feb. 1, 2 and 3 at Camp Lazarus.

Public Vs. Private Utility Service

We have long been advocates of private business handling all jobs pertaining to the welfare of the public insofar as is possible.

It was interesting to note that the development of Telstar seemed to be headed in the direction of government control. It is hoped that any benefits forthcoming will come via private business operation. It will be necessary if the utmost in accomplishment is to be realized and passed on to our people.

Back in 1920 the telephone companies started installing dial phones. Now the automatic phone system is spread from coast to coast and the company employs 2½ times as many people as back in 1920.

In this same time the post office has made so very few improvements in handling the mail that it stands out as the prime example to demonstrate the merits of the private system over that of the government operated program.

Today we are all paying another penny for the delivery of a letter. This price can and will go higher unless something is done to reduce actual costs of handling the mail. This can come about only through the use of greater mechanization of the system.

It would appear that this country needs a postal system as modern as the rest of the country. We have good men in the postal service. But they need the proper tools for their profession.

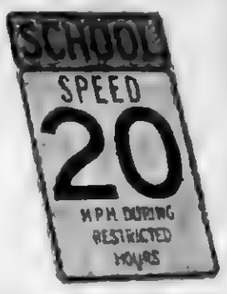
$9.5 Million Frank Road Extension Project Viewed

Let's See Now . . . Thirty Days Hath September And It's Now 8:24½ a.m., and . . . Oh, Boy!

By JOHN AUBLE, JR.

A calendar and a stop watch would be helpful and, if you're a traffic engineer that's all the better—when it comes to traveling through school zones marked with the traditional sign saying "During Restricted Hours Only."

Actualy, City Traffic Engineer Jack Gallagher even had some trouble interpreting a portion of the state law regarding those "restricted hours."



The law reads: "20 miles per hour when passing a school building or the grounds thereof during school recess and while children are going to or leaving school during the opening or closing hours when appropriate signs giving notice of the existence of a school are erected."

In case you're not a Philadelphia lawyer, this passage —when interpreted—plainly indicates that there are times when you can ignore that 20-mile per hour limit in school zones and still be within the law.

It's deciding when those times occur that might cause you an executive-sized headache.

For example, that word recess is about as dated now as high-buttoned shoes, Gallagher theorized. "The changing times have created this defect," he pointed out.

"Back when the law was put on the books," Gallagher continued, "recess time meant that children would be playing near the street area. All Columbus schools have chain-link fences and playground areas back from the road. Recess now is confined to these 'safe' areas."

So much for recess. The "restricted hours," when school opens and closes are not actually hours at all. They're 20-minute periods according to Gallagher. That is, you must observe the 20 mph limit 20 minutes before school opens in the morning and 20 minutes after it lets out at night.

This wouldn't be so bad except for the fact that the Columbus School Board doesn't start school until the odd time of 8:45 a.m. This means that (taking 20 minutes from 8:45) you'll be expected to slow down beginning at 8:25 a.m.

School lets out at 3:30 p.m. and the 20-mph limit is in effect until 3:50 p.m. See?

Now then, you can forget the 20 mph signs if a couple of classes are walking from the school on, say, a nature

A preliminary engineering report has been reviewed by the Columbus Traffic Commission on a South Side project that has been on "the drawing board" for over three decades.

Traffic Engineer John Gallagher produced a "Plan and Profile, Plan I, Plat 2" which he said was the consultant's recommended plan for the Frank-rd exension.

He explained that "basically it takes off from the Interstate Route 71 Interchange — to the west of the Scioto River — and goes past the quarries and Twin Lakes" a portion which is largely in the county.

At the Twin Lakes point, the extension is expected to become a four-lane divided expressway with full control of the access. There is also expected to be a clover-leaf (or interchange) at the Twin Lakes site for the aggregate companies in the area.

The next access point will be at High-st. Gallagher said there is provision for a sort of "diamond interchange" using the existing Frank Road as a west-bound "on" ramp and are installing an additional clover-leaf for west-bound traffic.

Then, it is to continue north of Fornof-ln, crossing over the narrowest portion of the railroad tracks and between the Buckeye Steel Casting Co.

Next major interchange, the engineers pointed out, would be at Groveport-rd, just across the railroad track. Another would be a diamond interchange at Lockbourne-rd.

Final interchange would be at the end of the project — at Alum Creek-dr and Refugee-rd. This portion would require another connection over to the presently - under-construction portion of U.S. Route 33.

Gallagher added that the cost of the extension would be $9,688,000 and would include some four and one-third miles.

Most of the commission members seemed to like the plan. Only comment was that they wanted it completed as soon as possible.

'WASTE OF MONEY'

Highway Department Book Frowned Upon By Administration

By JOHN AUBLE, JR.

Many eyebrows in the cut-expense-conscious new state administration are raised this week over some governmental spending done during the last reign of power.

Case in point is a 247-page paper back book entitled "Ohio Department of Highways Four-Year Report to the Governor," bearing the name of former Highway Director E. S. Preston and directed to Ex-Governor Michael V. DiSalle.

The booklet was attacked by both the present Highway Director P. E. Masheter and Governor James Rhodes' administrative assistant, Dean Jauchius.

Total cost of the project was reported at $8,732.35. The highway department was provided 5,000 copies.

"They were given pretty wide circulation," Masheter pointed out. "One went to each of the highway officials in the 50 states, a copy went to the Better Highways Information Corp. in Washington and all public sub-division, county, city and state officials received one. In addition, all public libraries were supplied with one and a number of copies went to the Ohio Contractors Association."

Still, Masheter said that some 240 of them were left over and are now stored in the highway office at 450 E. Town-st.

"This administration is opposed to it completely," Jauchius said. "It was obviously done in an effort to exhaust available surpluses in the Finance Department and put out for political purposes."

Jauchius also pointed out that it "duplicates a job done at private expense" which covers basically the same material.

Masheter said that his office is "still studying" the contents of the booklet to see if it "took credit" for work done by him while he was director of Design and Construction up until 1959. The book says that it covers 1959 to 1962.

The printing date listed on the back cover reads Dec. 31, 1962. It reached the offices of most press media throughout the state with a Jan. 8, 1963 postmark.

"It's certainly a waste of public money," said Masheter, who added that his department may have problems getting out any reports at all due to "the financial position we've been left in."

Masheter, who also termed the book a "propaganda report," said that he hadn't gone over one section of it — entitled "Looking Ahead To 1980" — to see if it agreed with the program he plans to pursue.

A statute in the Ohio Revised Code provides that each state department publish an annual report on its progress. Jauchius said that the Highway Department had published annual reports during the last four years and that this book represented an "unnecessary rehash."

The professional-looking book contains a number of pictures and includes a 177-page "Appendix" listing every county in the state and the projects done by the previous administration in each.

Besides this, there are five "pull out" double-page maps in the back which depicts such items as "Scenic Highways" and "Correction of Accident-Prone Portions."

Ex-Highway Director Preston was vacationing in Puerto Rico this week and unavailable for comment on the project. Former Governor DiSalle could not be reached, either, at his Park Towers apartment address.

Excuse Us, Please! May We Tell You About South High's Courtesy Program

By KAREN FIAONE
(Contributing Writer)

Beginning next Monday, the "Yes Ma'ms" and "No Sirs" should be flowing freely from the South High School grounds.

It's all part of a Student Council plan for a three-week courtesy campaign which will start Monday, Jan. 28.

Heading up the "Courtesy Committee," if you please, is Chairman Helen Miller, a senior, who will be assisted by Tom Scheiderer, Karen Zeller, Lyn Mitchell, Karen Fiaone and Jo Ellen Beals.

Part of the attack will be handled by slogans to be posted on the school's bulletin boards. One, for example, is "There Is Great Force Hidden In A Sweet Command."

If this isn't enough to make the students (perhaps, even the faculty) courtesy conscious, a "Miss" and "Mr. Courtesy" will be chosen each week.

"Courtesy in one of the things that will help students in whatever they do throughout their lifetime," according to Pauline Jones, student council faculty advisor.

"After the campaign is over, we hope that those who are careless about being thoughtful and polite will realize the real importance of courtesy," Miss Jones continued.

If you'll excuse me, we'll end this here. Maybe other stories would like to use this space.

OHIO-AV PASTOR

Rev. Herbert, Noted EUB Minister, Dies

Service was held Sunday at the Oak Hill EUB Church for Rev. Glendon Herbert, 46, of 973 S. Ohio-av, minister of the Ohio Avenue EUB Church, who died early last Thursday in University Hospital.

The minister, who was widely known for his preaching ability, had been unable to return to his pulpit since undergoing major surgery in October.

He had previously served at Hillsonia and North Linden churches.

The minister, who gave his first sermon at the age of 14 in the Second EUB Church, Portsmouth, was licensed to preach in 1930.

When he was graduated from high school, his fellow classmates at Oak Hill, asked him to preach the baccalaureate service.

Later, while enrolled at Ohio University, he served six country churches — living in McArthur and commuting to classes in Athens. He was ordained in 1947.

He was a member of Tau Kappa, speech society, and in his collegiate days won first in oratory for colleges and universities in Ohio.

In addition to his degree from Ohio University, he held a degree from the seminary at Capital University.

He had been active in various committees of his denomination and of the Columbus Area Council of Churches. He was former chairman of

First Mass For Spanish-Speaking Residents Planned Next Sunday

For the first time in this area, Spanish-speaking residents will be able to attend a Roman Catholic mass conducted in their native tongue.

The first monthly mass and sermon for Cubans and all other Spanish-speaking residents of the Greater Columbus area will be offered at Holy Cross Church, Fifth and Rich-sts, on Sunday, Jan. 27, at noon.

The innovation was prompted by Columbus Bishop Clarence Issenmann who made the suggestion Jan. 6 in the K of C Hall during a party for Cuban refugees brought to this country through the Catholic Welfare Bureau.

Confessions in Spanish will be heard before the special mass, beginning at 11:30 a.m.

The services — to be held regularly on the last Sunday of each month — will be conducted on Jan. 27 by Fr. Robert O'Brien of St. Charles Seminary.

Other Spanish-speaking priests in the area will lend assistance during succeeding months, according to Joseph Gibboney, director of the Cuban Placement Program of the Welfare Bureau.

The move was termed a "necessity" by Bishop Issenmann who pointed out that Ohio ranked fifth in the number of Cuban refugees in this country.

EGG-STRACTION

THIS ODDITY, held by Evelyn Russell, 433 Frebis-av, was discovered Sunday morning when Miss Russell's sister, Gale, began making breakfast. It's a small, soft-shelled egg discovered in a regular-size egg which came from a Grove City farm. "I don't know what I'll do with it," Miss Russell said. "I'll probably just show it around." Maybe she should call Ripley?

Final Treatment Plant Buy Eyed

Columbus City Council Monday night authorized the purchase of 21-acres at the site of the proposed Southerly Sewage Treatment Plant near Shadeville.

According to William Huggins, senior assistant city attorney, preliminary negotiations have already been carried out and all that remains is the final purchase. "No figures, however, have been discussed yet," Huggins commented.

AN 1963

IN DEFENSE OF THE CUBE . . .

A great deal of interest was generated on this page last March when Hartley Newspapers published a speech, "Who Is Tampering With The Soul Of America?," by Jenkin Lloyd Jones, editor of the Tulsa (Okla.) Tribune.

Jones will speak in Columbus this Friday (Jan. 25) at noon in the Ohio Union. He is appearing at the invitation of the Clintonville Women's Club. Reservations already are closed.

Readers who have asked to hear more from Jones should enjoy this condensation of a talk he gave last October at the national gathering of Sigma Delta Chi, professional journalistic society. The speech, in part, was a rejoinder to a letter protesting Jones' part in the program. The letter, and Jones' speech (abridged) as published in Sigma Delta Chi's magazine "The Quill," follow:

by Jenkin Lloyd Jones

In the October issue of Sigma Delta Chi's magazine, The Quill, there appeared the following letter, and I quote it in its entirety:

"Why has Jenkin Lloyd Jones been invited to give the keynote speech at the Sigma Delta Chi convention? For laughs?

"Are we going to take a place alongside the American Society of Newspaper Editors in displaying the miserable state of the American press? Are we going to settle for cliches and stereotyped thinking?

"Why do we have to settle for a man who has become a hero by coming out against sin and for (legitimate) motherhood?

"As a member of Sigma Delta Chi, I protest the selection.

(Signed) Elwood W. Landis
Mt. Pleasant, Mich."

It's flattering to learn that I have become a hero, although the word apparently hasn't yet reached Oklahoma. But since your convention committee doubtless felt too embarrassed to withdraw their invitation at that late date, I suppose Brother Landis' letter might just as well serve as a text for my brief remarks.

Alas, it is true. Perhaps it is a symptom of creeping decrepitude, but as I have grown older I have grown increasingly intolerant of many forms of sin. And legitimate motherhood looks better all the time.

In short, you are looking upon a square John, a cube, a cornball, one who is plainly not with it. And I am d—— glad I'm not with it. Because it seems to me that the man in the communications business who has achieved a state of complete tolerance or complete cynicism is a zombie.

There is, of course, what might be called the police reporter syndrome. Many of us went through it in our callow youths. It is heady wine for any youngster to be on speaking terms with all the madames in town. It marks you as a man of the world and you hope people will forget that you only have to shave every other day.

Your girl might be impressed if you point out the local hoodlums and talk sneeringly and knowingly to the effect that every office holder has his price. You are a man above the thundering moralists. You are a commentator of vast sophistication and great tolerance. You look upon the strugglings of men from a high eminence and you observe the scene with a yawn or a curled lip. At least, that was me—once.

And then a few great truths gradually began to dawn. The more I thought about it the more I realized that the average madame is not particularly glamorous and her average employe is so stupid and so ungifted that she can't even qualify as a dancer in a burlesque. And if you are a burlesque buff you know how little talent it takes to qualify.

Most hoodlums are bums with over-inflated egos and a spastic understanding of the rights of others. The only truly interesting people in any penitentiary are that tiny minority with good minds who, due to a rare twist of fate or a twist of personality, have wound up on the wrong end of the chase. The majority of penitentiary inmates are sad individuals who due to laziness or congenital inadequacy will not or cannot compete with honest men.

As I grew older in the newspaper business I kept meeting what, in my immaturity I had denied existed, namely, pretty sincere politicians. And I met a lot of politicians who would have been more honest if the public, and, parenthetically, the press had been more inclined to cry out at sleazy practices and to praise dedicated public service.

In the hospital emergency rooms I came to be less cynical about doctors. In the jungles of Africa I learned not to sneer quite so readily at missionaries.

On a Navy aircraft carrier I used to watch the young pilots lying on their bunks staring silently at the overhead on the nights before the strikes. You knew they were wondering who wouldn't come back. Some of them didn't, including my roommate. As Brother Landis might point out, the boys suffered from stereotyped thinking. They were full of The Stars and Stripes Forever, and gung ho for victory, and all that jazz. They were also scared, but they laid their lives on the line. . .

My friend, Brother Landis, has warned you that I may say something against sin. I certainly shall. But first, let's see if we can get an intelligent definition of sin. Sin is not the violation of a man-made code, because men can make errors. The code in every dictatorship forbids a citizen from speaking out in an effort to correct his rulers. Few of us in this room would consider this a sin. Custom among peoples forbids the eating of animal flesh on Friday or the consumption of pork at any time or permitting the shadow of an untouchable to fall upon one's food.

Let us not confuse custom with sin. So-called moral codes are subject to widely-conflicting human interpretations. In Puritan New England it was a sin to wear a silver buckle, and among many Eskimo tribes you commit sin if you do not lend your wife to the stranger staying overnight. Let's forget these puzzlements.

I would like to define sin as that behavior which endangers human happiness and smothers that which is best in human beings.

The case of legitimate motherhood was made long before Moses brought the tablets down from Mt. Sinai. For primitive human beings discovered, quite pragmatically I'm sure, that those who produced children without assuming the responsibility for their support and their training endangered the convenience and the welfare of all who did assume that responsibility.

That is why I look with something less than enthusiasm upon a relief system that subsidizes illegitimacy. I am unmoved by the plea among the welfare staters that illegitimacy is not the child's fault. Of course it isn't the child's fault. The child must be cared for. But in our own self-protection we may soon find it necessary to remove the children from disorderly houses and stop the subsidies of these brood sows who call themselves mothers. . .

Let me make it plain that I am no admirer of the perpetual and professional angry young man. If you are going to stay righteously indignant all the time you are soon driven to misinterpreting people's motives in order to keep your anger at white heat. Before long you lose touch with reality altogether.

And we should avoid, as a plague, the "liberal" or "conservative" self-image. I am saddened when young reporters look upon themselves as liberals or conservatives, for this means that they have checked their brains. They will put on colored glasses of one hue or another in an attempt to make their image of the world conform to what they regard as their philosophies.

When old John Nance Garner used to retire to his capitol office with some of his cronies for a short snort he used to say as he tilted the bottle, "Let us strike a blow for freedom."

I can't think of a better motto for the modern American journalist. Freedom implies the right to do as we will, provided that in so doing we don't abridge the general welfare. True freedom is not the freedom to make a left turn from a right hand lane. This imposes an unnecessary peril. It threatens the freedom of movement of others by a needless and heedless act.

Similarly, freedom is not a license to commit murder or robbery or even libel, nor is it the freedom to live in idleness on the fruits of the work of other men. These manifestations of irresponsibility make life less secure or less happy for men, of good intentions. We must find freedom somewhere in the middle zone between the approaching welfare state which crushes liberty with the plea that it is dedicated to the security of all, and the 19th Century laissez-faire state in which the powerful and the able rode rough-shod over the weak and the slow-witted.

To achieve sensible positions on these issues requires the exercise of brainpower. They will not be achieved by formula thinking. We will be sad communicators, indeed, if new ideas and the realization of changing conditions can only batter their way into our brains over the quivering bodies of our "liberal" or "conservative" preconceptions.

We will serve very little if we worship either the novel or the old. Our aim should simply be the promotion of those attitudes and institutions and behaviors which will lead to the greater effectiveness and, ultimately, to the greater happiness of the human animal.

If we are in the communications business for any other purpose we will be, not artisans, but mere mechanics and we will miss all the fun.

Reader Takes Issue With McPeek, Letter

To The Editor:

In reference to reader Emma Johnson's letter praising John McPeek's article "Fear Knowledge and You Block Truth," I would agree that Jesus would never have used force — physical force, that is.

However, I believe that in giving us the Ten Commandments we are bound by force of conscience to obey them. He gave us no alternative.

In answer to the question "Are we obligated to obey the Commandments of God.?" Bishop Morrow explains in his book, "My Catholic Faith," the following: "God has imprinted the substance of the Ten Commandments in the human heart and mind, and they have therefore binding force. Even if they had never been revealed, we should still be obliged to keep them, for they are dedicated by reason, and taught by natural law."

I too, read John McPeek's article with much interest, but not with much pleasure. He readily admits that the book, "Tropic of Cancer," contains much obscene filth, but implies that reading one illuminating passage justifies wading through 50 pages of smut.

It would seem to me that a quote from "The Sermon on the Mount" which you published last year in your paper would apply here, i.e., "Do men gather grapes from thorns, or figs from thistles? Even so, every good tree bears good fruit, but the bad tree bears bad fruit A good tree cannot bear bad fruit, nor can a bad tree bear good fruit."

Frosting On The Cake

By

"UNCLE DOC" ROSS — U.S.A.

Show me any man or woman who is "having the time of his life," doing the best he can at something he would rather do than anything else in this world, and I will show you a sane, happy, oriented individual who has "found that magic and priceless something that puts colors in the rainbow instead of bunions on the soul."

Show me a man or woman who lives simply and wisely in matters of good health habits, sane and modest diet, and—above all else—ownership of some Faith greater than any self-possessed powers of mortal wisdom. I will show you men and women who are getting some "frosting on the cake."

They are young for their years and don't weigh too much, or suffer from hypertension or insomnia because because they are at peace with themselves and the world. They are "in the world" but not of it or seduced into folly by the hypocritical pretenses that pass for success and STATUS today.

If millions of otherwise fine people would just stop saying things that hurt other humans, what a sweet world it would be. Thousands of marriages every year are winding up in bitterness and violence (and in the divorce courts) solely because one or both marriage partners never learn how to take the vinegar out of his voice.

No wonder millions of people have ulcers and migraine headaches and "fluttery tickers" solely because they have never learned how to control their feelings. Such people are always being slighted, or insulted by someone who would be nobody if he didn't have money. Keeping up with the Joneses is the most insane mania that ever enslaved this yet-free land. Morbid self-consciousness has become almost a mass psychosis today for millions of people who are still "adult infants" in mental capacity or emotional maturity. There is a way out, work, faith, love, infinite patience, and finally, growing up!

Must Guard Morals

To The Editor:

Congratulations to you for the article your papers carried about the smut movies. I thought the article by John Auble, Jr., was very timely and well presented, and I know that you did a tremendous service to our community when you published this article for the public. I only hope that it lights a fire that will burn the obscene movies off the screen.

Stamp Fan Speaks

In answer to John McPeek's article of last week concerning trading stamps:

Who is gullible, the man or the woman? Not all women, but a great many get comforts for the home with trading stamps that their penny-pinching husbands deny them and at the same time enjoy. In that way they needn't humiliate themselves or expose the fact they are married to such a stupid ox. Why put up with it?

Stamp Licker

'Article Is Service'

John McPeek stated in his article "Fear Knowledge and You Block Truth" that he hates "all who have the unmitigated gall to set themselves up as 'protectors' of their neighbors," and Emma Johnston reiterated his thoughts by saying "no Christian would set himself up as keeper of his brother's morals."

Mr. McPeek might just as well have said he hates all who have the unmitigated gall to tell us we must give our fair share to the United Appeal, or that it is our duty to fight polio, cancer, heart disease, etc., or that the standard of living of those living in slum areas must be raised, or that we must aid underdeveloped countries by giving them foreign aid.

I do not understand how one can be unconcerned about his neighbor's moral well-being and at the same time have an almost insatiable desire to alleviate all the physical and material ills in the world. History has proven that the material and physical well-being of man do not alone constitute the answer to peace of mind and heart.

To have genuine charity toward our fellow man we must consider his moral well-being.

Editors Perpetuate Work Of Astrologers

For shame!

What is it with my journalistic brethren who labor in the magazine vineyards?

McPeek

In recent weeks they have launched a concerted attack (obviously inspired by some evil force) upon newspapers' starry-eyed astrologers — the official keyhole-peepers into the "House of Life."

Tumbling almost one upon the other, they have been dashing off tongue-clucking exposes on the duplicity of America's newspapers in pandering to the public's desire to be hoodwinked.

Apparently basing their malicious accusations on facts in the encyclopedia which term astrology as "one of man's oldest superstitions, practiced only by quacks," they charge that it is a multi-million-dollar racket.

Righteous editors stoutly deny this vicious charge, contending that astrology columns are amusement features, not taken seriously by readers . . . at least not most readers.

I don't know about that! I for one am four-square behind the astrologers. Nobody who has been in business as many centuries as they have could be entirely disreputable . . .. could they? After all they were going great way back in ancient Babylonia. By the Fourth Century B.C. they had become the darlings of the Greeks. And it wasn't much later that the Indians and Chinese got into the act with their own astrologers.

But there was a spell in the early days when it looked like the astrologers had had it. That was when many of the Babylonia priests went off on a liver kick. Inasmuch as liver contained life's blood, the priests naturally figured it also contained the answers to life's problems.

So they took to studying the contours and bumps on the livers of sacrificial animals to ascertain the will and intention of the gods.

But it was a messy task at best and within a few centuries lost favor with many finicky customers who strayed back to the more tidy stargazers. And any chance that hepatoscopy (official name of the liver prognosticating business) had for a comeback went down the slaughterhouse drain with the advent of packaged meats and today's high prices.

(A few years ago there was some talk that A&P was considering inserting fortune cookie-type messages in their packaged livers, but nothing came of it).

Unlike most astrology disciples who have one favorite swami, I enlist the aid of three. Why be one-third safe?

That way I can heed the astrologer whose advice is the most appealing.

For instance, take today. One of the local papers advises those born under the sign of Gemini (that's me) that "there is vast opportunity for romance today." Well, right off I can see this guy won't be of much help because it's been two days since my wife has spoken to me, and the last time we tried to balance our joint checking account she didn't speak to me for four days.

A Chicago paper's soothsayer cautions: "Avoid wishful thinking, don't jump at overtures from strange women." That obviously cancels out the first advice in total.

So I'm left with only the other local paper's oracle who warns: "What you want to convey today may not be easy, but this should not deter you."

Furthermore, it's too late to go get another out-of-town newspaper.

Where Shall I Look? Psalms Have Answer

Unto Thee Lift I Up Mine Eyes, O Thou That Dwellest In The Heavens: Psalms 123:1.

A few nights ago bells rang and whistles blew, to mark the end of 1962 and the beginning of 1963. The hour which ties two years together found more people engaged in merriment than any other single hour of the year.

Why must that be . . . ?

Rev. Payden

It is very evident that the world would like to forget something. It arranges loud parties, in the hope of drowning out the quiet whisper of an approaching eternity.

"Time flies on silent wings." That silence becomes oppressive for those who fear eternity. But, time waits for no man. We see it in the faces of friends whom we have not met for some time; they are older. We see it in every falling leaf and every drooping flower. We are reminded of it every time a merchant hands us a new calendar. Whenever the Bible refers to the passing of time, it speaks in solemn words. God wants us to think serious thoughts whenever the truth forces itself upon our attention, that "we spend our years as a tale that is told."

What kind of thoughts does God want us to think? On the basis of the first verse of Psalm 123 and with Annie Johnson Flint's beautiful poem as a guide, we ask, "Where shall I look at the turning of the year . . .?"

On that New Year's evening you and I wrote the last words of another chapter in our life's record. That midnight we placed the last period after the last sentence. When I take this last chapter and read it with Jesus looking over my shoulder, there are certain sentences I am ashamed of. I have made many mistakes in 1962; many good and noble deeds that I might have done to the Glory of God and to the welfare of my neighbor, still remain undone.

This last chapter records these sins of omission. Ugly blots are scattered all over the page. Some day the very last chapter in the book will still read the same.

An old man, lying on his death bed, summed up the situation when he told his pastor, "I am about to stand trial for eighty-five years of sinning." What shall I do . . . Where shall I look today?

We cannot look back. We can only ask God to cover the past with his mercy and forgiveness, in Christ. We come at the dawn of this year to receive the assurance of pardon for all that has been wrong in 1962.

The poet says:

I don't look back; God knows the fruitless efforts,
The wasted hours, the sinning,
the regrets;
I leave them all with Him who blots the record,
And mercifully forgives,
and then forgets.

Municipal Railroad, Columbus' Only Venture Into World Of Iron Horse, About To Pass

By ED CHURCHILL

The day of the small-time railroad owner is over and the City of Columbus, being no more unaware of the trends of progress than any other, has decided to get out of the railroad business for good.

Nobody has been able to find out for sure when it was, but Service Director Ernest Stork, unofficial authority on Columbus, believes it was between 1900 and 1905 when the city built a stretch of railroad from just below Greenlawn-av to what was then the garbage reduction plant.

The reduction plant was located just south of the Men's Workhouse on Jackson-pk.

A bridge was built by the city just below Greenlawn-av for the railroad and the tracks joined the Hocking Valley RR (now the Chesapeake and Ohio) on the east side of the river.

A very original name was given to Columbus' contribution to the world of the iron horse — "The Municipal Railroad".

Columbus used the trains to haul garbage to the reduction plant and haul coal back to the city.

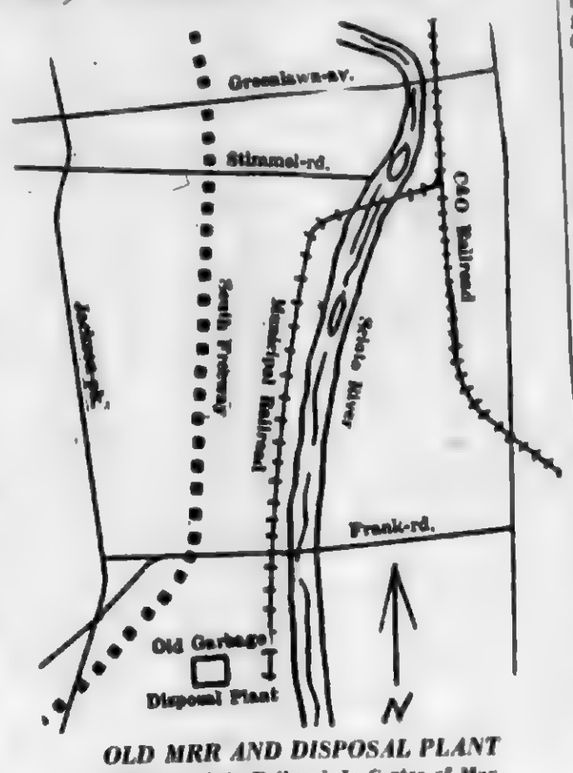
At the time the city boundaries only went as far south as Greenlawn.

But now the 60-year-old tracks will have to be torn up to make room for widening of the Scioto River and of Frank-rd.

Stork said the river will be widened, deepened and the levee will be raised four feet on the west side, thus taking the land which the tracks now occupy.

Whether or not all the track will be torn up, Stork was not sure, but that which Frank-rd crosses definitely will have to go since the city and county have lined up a joint project of widening the road to four lanes to make it part of the expressway system.

The MRR actually went out of service in the mid-30's when Columbus installed incinerators to get rid of garbage.



Recollections of the changeover, when householders had to wrap garbage in newspapers, brought some chuckles from Stork as he recounted the tale of the railroad.

Occasionally, since the 30's, the tracks have been used to haul coal into Columbus but was taken over by the Columbus Rendering Co. about 10 years ago and now it is the sole user.

The agreement made upon the sale of the MRR was that either party would have to give six months' notice of intent to abandon it and Stork said the rendering company has been told of the city's plans.

Now all that's left for the city's lone venture into the railroad business is a short wait until construction workers start tearing up its tracks and make way for progress.

According to the service director, going over or under the tracks would cost at least $500,000, and it "obviously isn't worth it."

Area Chamber of Commerce with executive capacity, and that of Clyde McBee as assistant, foretells a fine program ahead for the C. of C. in our opinion.

We have long had a high regard for Mr. Roberts as a civic leader in this area and a gentleman who has demonstrated his abilities as well as his interest in service while a member of the Ohio Senate.

His knowledge of the needs of Columbus and the background of Mr. McBee with the Chamber of Commerce for many years will certainly provide a good team in this vitally important organization in our Central Ohio Area. We wish them well.

FOOD MARKETS THIS WEEK

Kraut-Frankfurter Week Brings Savings

By ESTELLE B. FRANKS

THIS WEEK LOOK FOR:

Fruits — Apples, grapefruit, winter pears, Emperor grapes.

Vegetables — Red potatoes, yams, carrots, white cabbage (old crop), celery, leaf lettuce.

Meats — Frankfurters, pork roasts, beef "specials," fryers.

Other — Kraut, large eggs, dairy products, canned vegetables.

One glance at the food ads this week will remind you that National Kraut and Frankfurter Week begins Jan. 24 — a time when retailers offer you the makings of some good meals at exceptionally low prices. Natural "go-withs" for pork and kraut are mashed potatoes and apples in some form to add tartness — and, note that both potatoes and apples are also on the list of good buys.

Mrs. Franks

As for other meats, market men say that slightly lower retail prices are likely on beef since marketings of fed cattle are on the increase. Recent price weakness at wholesale level on ribs and loins, combined with the seasonally good demand for roasts, make steak cuts likely prospects for retail specialing in the weeks ahead. However, for strict economy, ground beef and liver are probably your best bets.

Market reports also indicate that pork supplies have dropped from peak levels of late fall and are likely to decline a little more this month and next. Retail prices are are not expected to change much for several weeks, but you'll likely see fewer specials on fresh pork.

Broiler marketings from January through March are expected to be about 13 per cent above a year ago, so broilers will keep their low price tags whether they are featured by the store or not. Egg prices, which have been relatively strong during the past several months, moved a little higher as a result of the recent cold weather, which temporarily cut egg production. Even so, there's no better protein buy offered than eggs; the large sizes continue to be the best values by weight.

At produce counters, the weather still is playing a dominant role. The cold wave that hit fruit and vegetable areas on Jan. 14 — this time in Texas, Arizona and parts of California — did considerable damage to such crops as tomatoes, lettuce, peppers, green onions and leafy green vegetables. The navel orange crop and other fruits also suffered from the cold temperatures. Official estimates of damage are not available at this writing.

You will notice price advances on many western vegetables this week, including green cabbage. However, increases are expected to be only temporary, barring another weather upset.

Florida's vegetable crops are recovering rapidly, although supplies can't be called abundant. A few snap beans are in markets now — only cucumbers and corn seem to be in short supply.

Again this week a number of canned vegetables are being suggested as economical substitutes for the higher priced fresh items. Tomatoes, snap beans, corn, peas, lima beans and kidney beans are a few of the good values; we suggest you scan the grocery shelves for others. The heavy stocks of frozen green beans are resulting in good buys at the frozen food chests, while fresh beans are scarce.

Use Of Sporting Firearms Is Defended

INSIDE ON THE Outdoors
By ROD COCHRAN

The information in this column today is by no means exclusive or original. Indeed, I hope you read the same or similar material several times in the near future. The subject is this, the number of "anti-gun" articles and editorials that have appeared in national publications.

While these articles may reflect the best of intentions and honest conviction, the logic involved is somewhat difficult to understand. In most cases, the evidence presented in support—and even abolition—of privately-owned firearms is extremely ill-conceived and dangerous, to you individually and to our society.

This week the "pro-gun" argument is being stated at the fourth annual Seminar of Firearms and Ammunition Development, Alton, Ill. Lowell E. Krieg, vice-president and general manager, Winchester-Western Division, Olin Mathieson Chemical Corp., is making a speech entitled "The Private Ownership of Firearms in the United States."

Here are some of Krieg's points:

"No responsible person — in or out of the firearms industry, sportsman or not — wants firearms to be freely used by criminals or other maladjusted members of our society."

"By the same token, no responsible person should desire or attempt to limit the free use of sporting firearms by other responsible members of that same society.

"A gun never killed anyone, robbed a bank, threatened or molested a defenseless individual. It is an inanimate object that is as harmless as a lump of metal until the moment a human being provides the energy to give it action.

"It is nothing short of ridiculous to assume that the criminal intent on armed robbery will register his gun before he commits a crime.

"It is the criminal himself who provides the secret to the prevention of crime. Society is misleading itself when it trys to punish a knife, rope, gun or the proverbial 'blunt object.'

"There is only one way to restrict the use of firearms by criminals: make the penalty for the use of guns or any deadly weapon in the commission of a crime so severe that criminals will be afraid to use them. In other words, the deterrent penalty will far outweigh any possible criminal gain. The criminal is penalized and not the honest citizen.

"Education, proper supervision and preventive safeguards are the answers to safety problems concerning household objects that hold a potential danger for any member of the family.

"Sporting firearms — and there are literally tens of millions of them in the United States — hold a huge potential for recreation, pleasure, sport and applied skill. They hold a very small potential for danger relative to their use, numbers and in comparison to other sports."

The next quotation is not from Krieg's speech, but from the U.S. Bill of Rights, Article II: "A well regulated militia being necessary to the security of a free state, the right of the people to keep and bear arms shall not be infringed."

Copies of the Krieg paper are available free on request: Winchester News Bureau, 460 Park-av, New York 22, N.Y.

Big Brothers Say 'Week' Was Best In History

More than 120 "brothers" and "several hundred" associated members volunteered during "Big Brother Week", Jan. 6-13 to make it the most successful week in the 30-year history of the organization, according to President, Herbert Wise.

"I am sure our active members will be able to follow-up in recruiting additional volunteers so we will have enough men to serve the 300 boys now on our waiting list," he added.

The report on the week's activities will be given at the annual meeting Thursday, Feb. 21 at the Desert Inn and the national conference to be held on the Ohio State University campus in May.

BidsOnAddition OpenNextMonth

South-Western City Board of Education will open bids for the addition to Pleasant View High School at a noon meeting Monday, Feb. 4. Contracts will be awarded at a meeting that evening.

The board will also hold a meeting Monday, Jan. 28 to receive bids on the three elementary schools to be built in the district. Robert Beatty of East Liverpool is the architect for the elementary buildings.

Park Federal Total Assets Hit $32 Million Mark In '62

Outstanding growth in assets, reserves, and members, along with major expansion of facilities, highlighted Park Federal Savings and Loan Association's 73rd year of continuous service in the Columbus area.

Total assets reached a new high of over $32 million as of Dec. 31. Reserves, keeping pace with the dynamic growth of the association, now stand at more than $1,900,000.

Carl F. Fergus, president and director of Park Federal, said the association has been making sound advancement in Greater Columbus ever since 1890.

Today, Park Federal serves 22,480 persons in the Columbus area.

Fergus said Park Federal has played an important part in community progress over the years. Since its founding in 1890, the association has provided more than $82 million to finance the building or purchase of homes in greater Columbus.

In 1962 the firm celebrated the opening of its new branch office for the West Side. Known as Park Federal West, the office is at 4770 W. Broad-st in Lincoln Village.

Manager there is Harry Hewson, a graduate of the school of Business Administration of Franklin University. Hewson was formerly with the city attorney's office in the department of fund acquisition.

The new branch in Lincoln Village, which was made necessary to meet the requirements of increasing numbers of members, brings the number of Park Federal offices in the Columbus area to four. The association's main office is at 1885 Northwest-blvd, the downtown office at 20 E. Long-st, and the Worthington office at 777 High-st.

One hundred forty-six consecutive dividends have been distributed, and Fergus pointed out that in 1962 the largest total dividends for any 12 months in the association's history were paid.

Present officers in addition to President Fergus and including new officers elected at Park Federal's recent annual meeting are: Jacob C. Baas, vice-president and director; H. W. Brinker, vice-president and director.

Jack W. Chilcote, vice-president and secretary; John C. Fergus, attorney and director; Richard C. Addison, general counsel and director; T. F. Hambleton, treasurer; James D. MacAulay, assistant vice-president; Harry W. Hewson, manager of Park Federal West Alexander Gray, manager Home Improvement Department.

William F. Meyer, assistant treasurer; Gerald Knose, assistant treasurer, and Jerry Tilton, assistant treasurer.

Rounding out the association's directors are Frank T. Sayers, Dr. Charles W. Harding, and Walter E. Barr.

South Socks Scots; Rams Rock Rosary

By ABT KIENZLE

Coach John Colmery and his battling Bulldogs pulled off their first City League victory Friday night, trouncing Walnut Ridge, 77-50.

Walnut tried to keep the contest close as they trailed by only one (17-18) at the first period mark.

THE SECOND STANZA saw Reb Fred McGhee hit three straight field goals; this, plus W-R's inability to score until 4:23 of the final quarter put the Bulldogs out of reach.

Paul Pate led South in scoring with 18 points on nine field goals. McGhee was close behind with 17. Joe Middendorf, who entered the game in the final minutes, grabbed nine.

Game scoring honors went to Walnut Ridge's John McQuaid, with 21 points.

ROSARY BATTLED "arch rival" St. Marys on even terms for one half until the Rams overpowered the Crusaders, 63-51, in a County League encounter Friday night at the Catholic Center.

Rosary closed to within one point of St. Marys, 30-29, at intermission but the Rams slowly began to pull away in the third period. Big George Maurer topped all scorers with 27 points but it was the deadly outside shooting of Mike Gray and Bob Yates (12 points each) that put the game out of reach.

The Crusader's Ed Roehrenbeck topped Rosary scoring with 17 points, hitting from the corners. Don Spurlock and Jim Groce added 15 and 12 points respectively for the Crusaders.

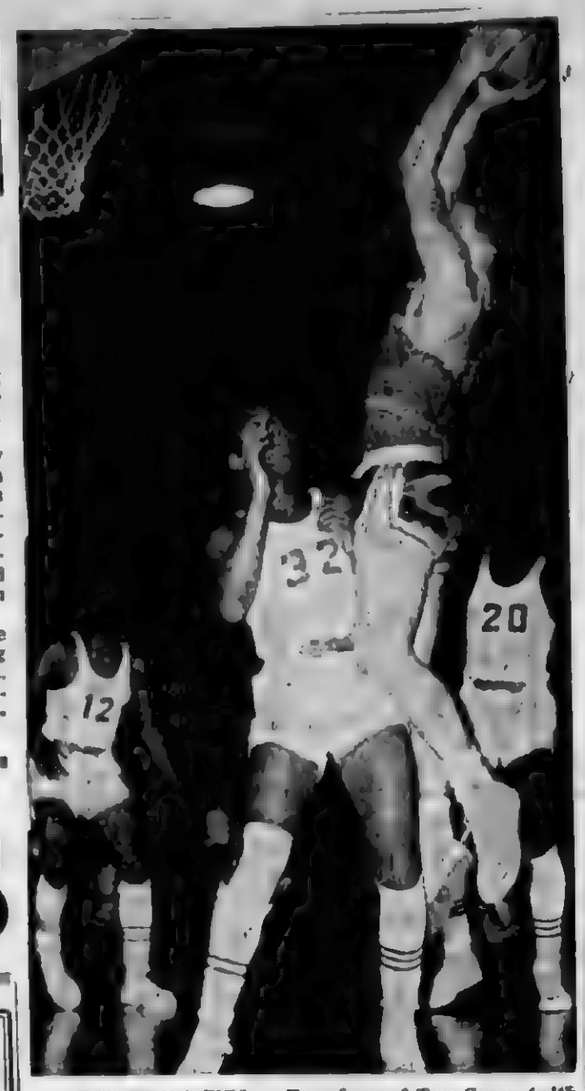
THE RAMS HAD an easier time scoring their ninth win of the season Saturday night with a 90-58 win over Holy Family. The Raiders trailed only by four at the first period break but St. Mary increased the margin to 20 by halftime and coasted the rest of the way.

Tim Saver's 23 markers paced the Ram scoring and Maurer and Tom Sauer each added 15 more.

EASTMOOR shook loose after intermission to hand Marion-Franklin another City League setback over the week end. The Devils, paced by Darrl Jones' 13 points, trailed by two at halftime but were unable to match the Warriors' scoring in the final two quarters.

Elsewhere around the area, Aquinas dropped a pair of court battles over the week-end.

North pulled away in the second half to top the Terriers, 75-60, Friday night and St. Charles avenged an earlier season loss to the Irish the following night with a 59-45 reversal.



Pat Mentel (22), Tom Hartmann (16) and Tom Woodward (14) topped scoring against the Polar Bears while Mentel's 14 markers was best against the Carolians.

FRIDAY NIGHT play around the area finds South (4-6) at Whetstone, Linden at Aquinas (7-4), New Albany (2-11) at St. Marys (9-3), Rosary (2-8) at Reynoldsburg (4-7) and Mansfield Madison at Marion Franklin (2-9).

Three additional games are on tap for Saturday evening as Reynoldsburg hosts St. Marys, Watterson visits Marion-Franklin and South journeys to Findlay.

STEPLADDER SHOT — St. Mary's Bob Yates (45) appears to be climbing an imaginary stepladder as he drives past Rosary's Ed Roehrenbeck to drop in a field goal for the Rams. Moving in on the play at the left are Rosary's Don Spurlock (32) and Butch Micheals (24) and St. Mary's George Maurer (behind Spurlock). St. Mary's defeated Rosary, 63-51, to keep their slim County League title hopes alive.

TOM TRIES TWO — Ram forward Tom Saner (with ball) goes to the air to aim a field goal attempt at the basket as Rosary's Don Spurlock (32) forms an obstacle to the St. Mary cager's progress. Zeroing in on the basket are Rosary's Paul Meadows (12) and Jim Groce (20).

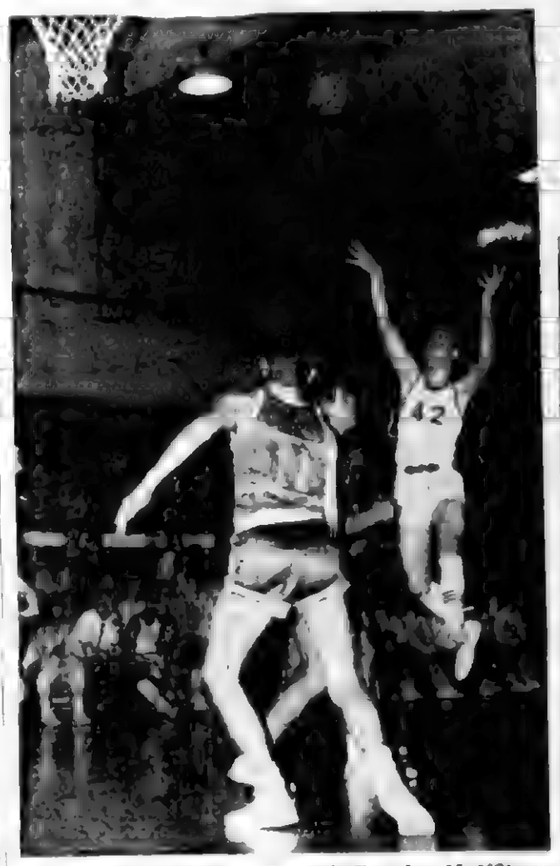
Hope Lutheran Is Undefeated In South 'Y' Play

With first night flaws corrected, last week's play in the South Side "Y" Inter-Church sports program proved more interesting for all concerned.

Senior Volleyball—Scottwood Community and Capital Seminary forged into a first place tie by winning both games from Brookwood Presbyterian and St. Paul United respectively. Christ Methodist evened their season record at two and two by taking a pair from Livingston Methodist.

Senior Basketball — Hope Lutheran remained undefeated as they overpowered Scottwood. Redeemer Lutheran continued its winning ways over St. John United. Chuck Graver, Dan Mitchell, Dale Falkner, Jim Kuhn, "Red" Courtney and Bill Deibert had a good night, putting the big sphere through the little loop.

Intermediate Boys—Action in this ten-team loop saw Frebis Church of God, with their power-packed cage machine hitting on all five, trim South Methodist. St. Paul Lutheran pulled an upset, defeating the "Big Blue" of Oakwood Methodist, 29 to 27. Ohio Avenue EUB tightened their defense in second half to pull out a win over the Williams Road Presbyterian quintet.



Trinity Lutheran showed tremendous scoring strength in topping Southwood Church of Christ while St. Paul United held on to edge Hungarian United in other games. High scorers were Bill Howard—24, Larry Anderson—20, Mike Rickard—18, John Evans—16, Jerry Robinson—12, and John Salyers, Rick Coverdale and Dave McGrew with 11.

Girls—Ohio Avenue EUB won a well played game from St. Paul United and South Methodist, rating superior on defense, beat defending champion St. John United in games on Barrett hardcourt. Judy Carpenter, Nancy Leslein and Sue Woodward turned in fine performances.

Junior Boys—Ohio Avenue won the "big one" in the Tuesday night league by coming on strong in the second half to win over the basketeers from St. Paul Lutheran. Larry Jones, skyscraper center of Parsons Baptist, pourd in 22 points to lead his team into victory lane in their tussle with Williams Road Presbyterian, while Livingston Methodist's fast break cagers got hot in the closing minutes to down Hungarian United, 19 to 16.

Wednesday's card found South Methodist and Oakwood Methodist continuing their race for the league's top rung with wins over St. John United and Emmanuel Lutheran, respectively. Other playrs who caught the crowd's fancy with their fine play were Roger Crum, John Workmaster, Phil Swisher and Bill Hylton.

Men in a nuclear age who pick quarrels are fools. Men who stir a pot that is simmering are knaves. — Earl of Home, British foreign secretary.

COURT BALLET — Rosary's Ray Arnold (42) appears to be performing a near-perfect pirouette as he aims a shot toward the Crusader basket. George Maurer (center) seemed a bit awed by Arnold's acrobatics while Larry Bellemy (11) moves in for a rebound attempt.

Suburban Loop Meets Tonight

The next meeting of the South Suburban League, previously announced for Feb. 24, has been set for this evening at 7:30 at Franklin Heights High School.

League president Theodore Dagg announced Tuesday that the loop's constitution was just about completed and that the group hoped to wrap up work on the by-laws at the meeting tonight.

OHSAA Studying State Champ Plan

Ever since a certain Southern eleven whose name we have since sworn never to to mention again beat out Ohio State's 1957 Big Ten champions in the final football polls, we have always scoffed at and refused to recognize national ratings as any accurate measurement of gridiron greatness.

Our biggest argument was that the ratings were no more than popularity polls that helped to promote one-sided routs and never really proved anything in the final reckoning.

THE BIGGEST LOOPHOLE in the "top ten" parade seemed to lie in the apparent disregard for the quality of opponents. It didn't matter "who" you played. You topped the ballots by accumulating the most points in the "How many did you beat" and "by how much" categories.

The same basic principles of selecting top teams are also applied to the high school level. But the present plan is no more foolproof among the school-boy set than it is on the collegiate scale.

However, Lee Strang, head football coach at Massillon High School and chairman of the Ohio High School Football Coaches Association's committee to select a plan for determining the Ohio football champion, is presently working on a new setup that could correct the situation—at least locally.

ASSISTING STRANG on the three-man committee are Bron Bacevich of Cincinnati Roger Bacon and Marv Morahead of Upper Arlington.

The plan, which works on a point system, evaluates the quality of competition and provides for playoff games at the end of the season to determine the state champion.

As far as the point system goes, two points would be awarded for each win over an opponent. Ties provide one point and losses no points. Winning teams then receive two points each time the team they defeated wins a game and one point per opponent's victory if the two teams should tie.

THIS SYSTEM WILL encourage teams, hopeful of state ratings, to schedule tougher competition, e.g. teams that are capable of winning seasons.

Eeach team and/or local news media would keep a count of the individual point totals. The playoffs would take place at the close of the regular season with the top four teams in the state in each classification opposing each other.

Team one (highest point total) would play team four and team two would play team three, with the finalists battling for the undisputed state title.

TO BE ELIGIBLE for the playoffs a team would have to compete 80 per cent in or above its own class, with school enrollment determining the breakdown of classes (AA-1, AA-2 and A).

In case of point ties, the team with the least average points scored per game against them would be selected for the playoffs. All point totals for the playoffs would be certified by the OHSAA who would also make all playoff and game arrangements.

We had a chat with Marv Moorhead last week in regard to committee's progress on the proposal.

THE "MAKE OR BREAK" decision, according to Moorhead, won't come until the first week in March. At that time the Ohio High School Athletic Association's board of directors will act on the proposal and either accept or reject the plan.

"You might say the proposal's in the 'incubation period' right now," Moorhead said. We're trying to anticipate the "bugs" in the plan. We know there's going to be problems but we don't feel they'll be insurmountable."

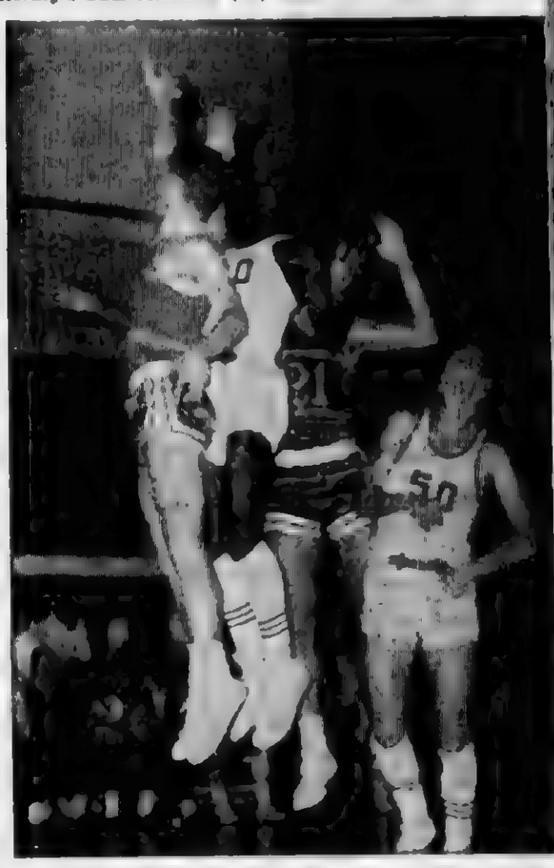
In reply to our question about public response, Marv admitted that he has been encouraged by the favorable acceptance the plan seems to have achieved locally.

"THE PLAYOFF GAMES seems to appeal to a lot of people. This type of thing has never been attempted in Ohio but there are many other states that have a similiar setup which has worked out very satisfactorily."

Moorhead felt that the plan, if accepted, would help correct some of the inconsistencies evident in the present rating setup and make a "better game for the kids."

But as Moorhead pointed out, there will be problems. Even though the pattern of post-season basketball tournament has been okayed by the secondary schools, we wonder if the post-season grid playoffs would be met with the same benevolent nod.

ALSO, IF ENOUGH teams became interested in setting their sights on statewide honors, the present league setups around the state could be disrupted as stronger teams would frown on their loop's "weak sisters" as mandatory opponents and consequently "poor point risks."



Wouldn't everybody want to go "independent" so they might be free to schedule top-flight competition?

Wouldn't every school be forced to play the same number of games?

Wouldn't the plan reduce the number of players participating in a game since the games would probably be closer and substitution consequently less likely?

OF COURSE, the plan, if able to gain wide interest, could go a long way in correcting league imbalance along the same lines.

There are good arguments on both sides of the fence, as there always are on proposals like this. But we do feel this is certainly a step in the right direction as far as the fair and sensible means of determining a state champion is concerned.

SQUEEZE PLAY — From the looks of things, all this quartet of combined Rosary and St. Mary's players needs are some top hats and canes to add the finishing touches to their high-stepping routine. The lineup includes the Rams' Tim Sauer, Rosary's Jim Groce, St. Mary's George Maurer and Rosary's Ed Roehrenbeck. The theme of the entire number was a field goal attempt by Groce.

Don't Force Yourself, But Visit 'Forcing House' Soon

Planning to visit the Franklin Park Conservatory soon? Visit the growing or forcing house while you are there.

At the present time, they are forcing roses for the Flower and Garden Show to be held at Veterans Memorial this coming March.

Lantana is another plant being forced and there are are some in bloom at present.

These plants can be grown inside and out. If they are kept inside they should be kept in a south window. Outside Lantana is used for a low growing border plant and the spent blooms must be pinched off regularly.

There happens to be a weeping variety in bloom, also, in the conservatory.

Childhood PLEASURES

"Even a child is known by his doings, whether his work be pure, and whether it be right."

A mother only has to glance at her child to know if his play is pure, or if it is leading to mischief. Our Father in heaven can as easily look on our hearts and judge our ways. "A good man out of the good treasure of the heart bringeth forth good things: and an evil man out of the evil treasure bringeth forth evil things."

Seek the Lord in his house, so that your heart will be right with God.

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

Gas Station Owners Out In The Cold, Too

By JOHN AUBLE, JR.

It's winter and a young man's fancy usually turns towards thoughts of gas stations—that haven in the snow where the mehcanics are magicians and the kid working after school pumping gas is a friend, indeed.

This conversation was overhead at a local gas station during the wee hours of the morning. Four cars were stalled outside the warm, one-room station office. The not-so-heated discussion went thusly:

Station owner (on phone) — "Does it turn over at all, ma'm?"

Part-time high school attendant—"Whatsa matter, Mr. Killenberger? Is it cold out there?"

Mr. Killenberger—"Wh-h-hat?"

Station owner—"Listen, ma'm. If it turns over maybe it's just flooded."

Second customer, entering—"It was so cold this morning that I went to the closet and my topcoat was wearing my overcoat.

Part-time attendant—"Whatsa mater, Mr. Harmon? Is it cold out there?"

Mr. Harmon—"I haven't heard any offers to go swimming this morning, if that's what you mean."

Station owner—"Maybe it just needs a push. Are your neighbors up and around somewhere close . . . ?"

Fourth customer—"Aw, you fellas don't know what cold is. There's was a winter in 1936. . . ."

Mr. Harmon—"Seems like I've heard this before somewhere."

Station owner—"What do you mean can I send someone out to boost your battery? How do you think should get my service truck to start?"

Add Winter Enjoyment

Sub zero weather has its compensations and now that we've had a prolonged touch of "old time" winter we have to admit that it has some compensations.

It would be hard to find many youngsters who wouldn't agree that they enjoyed the news that school would be closed.

And what great joy comes to a boy who cuts a 10 inch thick hunk of ice out of his skating pond, thus assuring himself of a long skating period ahead.

You haven't witnessed real appreciation until you watch the birds gather around a freshly-filled feeder. Without this kind of weather you might not have had an opportunity to pay for their cheery [illegible].

Even a stalled car or one mired down along an icy curb bring out volunteer assistance and you say to yourself, "Gosh, people are human, aren't they?"

And what's more delightful than rosy cheeks and a pleasant smile from a halo of ear muffs on a pretty girl?

Yep! Winter has its compensations!

Coming Events

A most delightful thing happened to me Monday. I received a fine full color seed catalog and a nice letter from James Wilson out in Mountain View, Calif.

Mr. Wilson advised that a former Hilltopper and a long time reader of ours, Rex Grabill, president of Ferry-Morse Seed Co. had told him of my winter pastime of reading seed catalogs.

A big "Thank You" to Mr. Grabill and to Mr. Wilson.

As this is being written, the thermometer outside the kitchen door says 5 below. The night before it was 16 below.

But tonight I'm warm with

Founder Of CBU, Ralph Hoffhines, Is Dead At 83

Retired president of the Columbus Business University, Ralph E. Hoffhines, 83, died at his home, 1234 Bryden-rd, Monday. He had been ill for some time.

For 26 years he was associated with the Columbus Public Schools. He started his teaching career in 1899 at High School of Commerce. He served for many years as director of commercial education in the Columbus junior and senior high schools.

In 1926 he resigned from the public schools to devote his time to the development of the Office Training School. This school, organized in 1911, was incorporated as Columbus Business University (CBU) in 1953.

During his life, he served as president of the Columbus Teachers' Federation, Columbus School Masters Club and was a member of the Arlington Country Club, Columbus Country Club, Athletic Club, Young Businessmen's Club, Rotary Club and Kinsman's Masonic Blue Lodge.

Surviving are his daughters, Mrs. Owen B. Smith, Palatine, Ill., and Mrs. Mary June Buerstetta, of the residence; son, Robert; two grandsons and one great-granddaughter.

Funeral services were held Tuesday (Jan. 29) at Schoedinger State-st Funeral Home. The body was to be cremated.

'Private' Junk Yards Spotted

FROM SMALL beginnings in 1937 to recognition as one of the most influential clubs in the South Side YMCA organization is quite a step. But, this is how it happened for the Right Angle Club — a club recently recognized as the second such group affiliated with the "Y" to attain a quarter century of service to youth. Shown here is M. V. "Cap" Hoover (right) presenting the recognition award to Dave Wilson, Right Angle president. At bottom of picture is Cliff Olson, Right Angle member and chairman of the South Side YMCA Board of Management. Hoover led the club and is an honorary life member.

A city inspector said Tuesday he's not getting "any co-operation" from Marion Township residents in his efforts to clean up junk yards in the far South Side.

Wayne Chaney, refrigeration inspector, says he's been handling the "junk yard detail" for some 10 years, recently at the direction of Service Director Al Giles. Chaney added further he may seek police help to get the co-operation he needs.

"I can't very well tell the junk dealers to clean up their lots when residents in the area have messes comparable to junk yards in their own front yards," Chaney said.

"We'll do all we can to make the South Side look clean and decent but there's little we can do about residents who, on their own property, have junk autos and lumber and other debris," Chaney continued.

He said he was considering asking Police Chief George Scholer to order the residents to remove the debris from their yards and toss it into one of the junk yards in the area.

Chaney said this action will probably come ". . . as soon as the weather breaks."

The irony is that its been the Marion Township residents who have led the attack on sloppy junk yards, Chaney said that recent calls from the residents have been so frequent that "it would keep four men busy just answering the phone."

Most work in efforts to clean-up the junk yards is being staged by John Maloney of St. Stephen's Community House. He has been trying for sometime to arrange a meeting with the dealers, City Council members and Council of South Side Organization representatives.

So far, however, he has been unable to find an agreeable time.

Meanwhile, Howard Henry, secretary of the South Side Council, has been delegated to ask Giles to speak to the next monthly meeting of the group Feb. 14.

Giles, when contacted by telephone Tuesday, said that

Right Angle Club Typical Of Lasting Friendship At South 'Y'

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the first in a series of articles being written to better acquaint you with the South Side YMCA, it's work and its leaders. To be spotlighted in this four part series will be groups or individuals who have been singled out by "Y" officials for outstanding service. The new YMCA, 190 Southwood-av, is currently staging a fund-raising drive for furnishings and it's hoped these notes will help prove the drive's worthiness.

By anyone's standards, the beginnings of the South Side YMCA's Right Angle Club at Schiller Park in 1937 were bleak ones. Perhaps any other group starting out, as this club did, would have disbanded years ago.

But, much of the credit for its "stick - togetherness" can be credited to the individuals who formed the backbone of this organization—a group of men who still proudly affiliate with Right Angle even though they have long since left the South Side boundaries.

On that day in 1937 15 boys playing in the South Side YMCA basketball league decided to form the association and, under the strong guidance of M. V. "Cap" Hoover then a "Y" leader — began a long period of growth.

Perhaps one of the most interesting facts about the club is how it received its name. History shows it grew out of the natural setting of their meets and was determined while the original members were seated around a campfire at the old YMCA Park.

It was suddenly observed that the group was seated

Faulty Communications Held Up Greenlawn-av Stop Light

It's ironic but the new Fire Department communications complex on Greenlawn-av has been made a victim of an embarrassing mix-up. What makes it so embarrassing is that faulty communications caused it.

At least, that was the explanation offered by both Fire Chief Walter Strickfaden and City Traffic Engineer Jack Gallagher, when commenting on the need of a traffic control system for emergency use on Greenlawn-av.

Plans for a light were started in September but due to an evident lack of communication between Gallagher and Strickfaden, a light has never been erected.

The matter was brought to light during a Traffic Commission meeting last week when Gallagher, answering Senior Assistant Fire Chief S. H. Zaayer, said he had sent the plans to Strickfaden for approval and never received a reply.

Later, Strickfaden said he was irate at Gallagher's "buck-passing" and added he would attend the next traffic meeting for a "showdown."

Strickfaden stated that after he received the plans he phoned Gallagher. The traffic engineer wasn't in but his secretary said she would have him

THE COLUMBUS Association for Childbirth, a nine-year-old organization, will hold its Winter Open House Thursday, Feb. 7, at 8 p.m. in St. Edward's Episcopal Church to acquaint expectant parents with its work. Here, Mrs. Ruth Niekirk, R.N., M.S.N. (left) checks over some films to be shown with Mrs. June Kohler, president of the club.

CHILDBIRTH OFFICIALS SAY:

If You're Jumpy As Father Who's Expecting, There's Still Hope

By JOHN AUBLE, JR.

The old story about the jittery papa-to-be grabbing the suitcase and forgetting his spouse en route to the hospital isn't far from the truth according to childbirth authorities.

Mrs. June Kohler, president of the Columbus Association for Childbirth Education explained this week that a good deal of their program is designed for Dad who, they say, has to be taught to relax.

The group, founded by five women in 1954, will expand their program further during the Winter Open House for all expectant parents in Columbus to be held Thursday, Feb. 7, at 8 p.m. in St. Edward's Episcopal Church.

At this time, the association will explain why it's in operation and how it offers comprehensive, authoritative advice to make the ordeal of having children a little less frightening.

"Perhaps 'fear' is the key word with expectant parents," Mrs. Kohler commented. "Much of our work dispels psychological fears that make childbirth so complicated—whethers it's the first child or the seventh."

As stated, the program is slanted, in part, toward the father and even includes such things as a "plan of attack" to get the mother to the hospital and registered with as much ease as possible.

"We take our members (now numbering in the hundreds) on a trip through the hospital," Mrs. Kohler continued. "We show them what door to use and what to say to the desk clerk. This is accompanied by planning ses-

CSSO Gives Sub-Station Its Approval

After some dissention, Columbus is moving ahead with its plans to build a sub-station on the Lincoln Park grounds and the project received strong support from the Council of South Side Organizations.

Council member William Neno made a motion that approval be given to the city for the construction of the station but the move was frowned upon by the Parks and Forestry Commission who criticised it as a "safety hazard."

'Well Done' Is Rule For Cooking Pork

Your food market is apt to "special" pork at this time of year. These specials can perk up family meals and your food budget.

When you serve pork, be sure that it is as safe as it is tasty and nutritious, says Mrs. Pauline Hall, extension nutritionist, Ohio State University. That means you must always cook pork thoroughly.

Eating raw or partially cooked pork may result in a serious disease — trichinosis, caused by tiny worms or parasites called trichinae. Even clean, healthy swine can harbor the worm at any time of the year.

Few people die of trichinosis but it is a serious, unpleasant disease. The symptoms vary so greatly that diagnosis is difficult.

The disease is easy to prevent. All that's necessary is to be certain that all pork is cooked thoroughly before eating.

To test for doneness when broiling or frying chops or other thin cuts, cut into the meat near the bone. Pinkness indicates that the pork has not been cooked enough for safety.

Use a meat thermometer for roasts. Pork must be cooked to 137 degrees fahrenheit to kill trichinae. But internal roasting temperature recommended for fresh pork is 185 degrees and 165 to 170 degrees for cured pork cuts.

EDITOR JENKIN LLOYD JONES
"America . . . is 'bugging' the rest of the world"

SPEAKS AT OSU

Jenkin Jones Wins Columbus

By MARCUS ORR

The editor from Tulsa came to town last Friday.

For about 45 minutes, Jenkin Lloyd Jones, in an address at the Ohio Union, talked about things that concern people most — politics, war, education, music, morals and traditions, among others.

Women in his audience (there were more than 300) forgot to compare hats. Guest ministers attentively took notes for future sermons. It was that kind of speech . . . made of the same solid stuff that has endeared Jones' writings to people throughout the nation this year.

It was not hard for the Clintonville Women's Club to fill the hall. People here remembered the astute editor's "Who Is Tampering With The Soul Of America," a speech which was reprinted in Hartley Newspapers and Readers Digest last spring. In recent weeks another piece, "In Defense of The Cube," was printed. The people came to hear [illegible]

Jones, admittedly awed by his sudden prominence, said he is simply saying the things he believes in.

"They've taken our traditions out of the child's early educational development," he said during a press interview. "The result of this could be seen when some of our young soldiers were captured in Korea. Under the pressure of commie interrogators they couldn't give reasons why they are glad to be Americans."

Quizzed after his talk, Jones had this to say about current "Spirit of '76" controversy over the teaching of a course on communism in the schools: "If you teach only communistic theory and not its practice— you are wrong. The selection of teachers for such courses is not an easy task," he said, "but the student should have opportunity to learn about all forms of government."

"The collegian," he continued, drawing on his own background, "may be bright or even brilliant, but he's still too young to have a sense of history. This sometimes is reflected in the student press," and he added, "the student newspapers, however, are a very specialized type of journalism."

Taking up other issues of our day, Jones pointed out that "the desire of Americans to stand in individual dignity . . . is 'bugging' the rest of the world."

"But, self determination is in itself not an answer to man's inhumanity to man," he stated, citing recent incidents in the Congo.

Editor Jones, who has toured most of the countries of the world, observed that governments are effective as great distributors of wealth but not as producers of wealth.

Ending on an optimistic note, Jones declared that the "greatest sin is cynicism and despair" . . . and, "there are things of the spirit that confound the science of war."

Movie Industry Still Has Time To Scrub Up

If and when the motion picture industry dies, an appropriate epitaph for its grave marker would be "This is the only stone we've left unturned."

Perhaps it's too inconceivable to imagine a world without motion pictures. "The dream world of a darkened theater can never be replaced," you may think.

So did people think about vaudeville.

The saddest thing about the movie industry, though, is that it seems hell-bent on destroying itself. It's heading at high speed down a dusty, dirty road and there is bound to be a point of no return.

Already this theory is being spotted by members of the industry itself. Most outspoken recently has been Helen Hayes — the first lady in anybody's theater — who reported in an Associated Press article that the industry is 'in an era of terrible trouble."

Clarifying her statement, Miss Hayes pointed out that Hollywood has "lost touch with public taste" and went on to say that "if Hollywood is still in the Tennessee Williams era, the rest of the country isn't."

History shows that "losing touch with the public tastes" isn't a particularly new thing for the motion picture industry. It's happened before. Most critical of these periods was in the Early Thirties. Remember? James Cagney was slapping girls. Mae West was slapping guys and sex and violence reached a then all-time high on the "silver screen."

The public raised protest — strong, verbal protest. Leaders in the industry at the time were saying "Sex and filth has no place in public view" — or words to that effect.

And, an about-face was made. Led by a child— Shirley Temple — motion pictures emerged from the slime of bad taste and, once again, the boom was on.

Times may have changed but the public still seems to desire the same wholesome type of motion pictures. What other explanation can be offered for the success of Walt Disney releases of family entertainment?

Today's sex and violence — a larger dose of the former — makes movies of the Thirties as tame as a PTA meeting. Sure, it provided a definite boost to box office sales following a near-KO punch by television, but the public is growing weary now.

Let's not overlook the fact that movies like "Gorgo," "King Kong" and the rash of science fiction thrillers heightened box office sales.

So did the late Marilyn Monroe and Jayne Mansfield.

Now, it appears, a new approach needs to be taken. Just what that is, of course, is a perplexing problem that will require serious consideration by the men making the decisions on motion pictures.

Much of the decision, we feel, will be (and, should be) based on opinions being gathered and formed by such groups as the Citizens for Decent Literature and Motion Pictures and, perhaps even local groups as the Columbus Movie Review Board.

The industry has run the spectrum from the violent to the spectacular to the filthy and neither is now able to click in today's theaters. Hollywood has, certainly, left few stones unturned in its search to please the public. And, in the process, has turned many stomachs.

Cherries Add Sparkle To February Meals

By ESTELLE B. FRANKS

THIS WEEK LOOK FOR:

Fruits — Apples, small grapefruit, Emperor grapes, canned juices.

Vegetables — Potatoes, carrots, yams, Romaine canned corn, tomato products.

Protein Foods — Beef "specials", Boston butts, sausage, fryers, large eggs, dairy products.

Red tart cherries are on the plentiful foods list for February — a bright note when you remember the many holidays coming up that call for cherry pies and desserts.

Mrs. Franks

Stocks of canned red tart cherries are about 60 percent larger than last year and frozen cherries holding about the same as a year ago

For the main dish, the man behind the meat counter says beef supplies for February will increase and will be greater than a year ago. Pork supplies for the month will be ample. Of course we must keep in mind that old man winter is still with us, and movement of livestock can be slowed down by lots of snow and extremely cold weather. However, when this happens, it usually means only temporary shorter supplies with fewer featured cuts offered. Fryers and turkeys will continue to be good buys — large eggs are a better buy than the smaller ones.

As for fresh vegetables, it appears you need not worry too much about deleted supplies . . . on the basis of "what to eat" anyway. This has been an unusual year with a number of damaging cold waves hitting practically every growing area in the country at one time or another during December and January.

Economy-minded shoppers will keep potatoes and carrots on the list. Prices on both white and sweet potatoes are low and expected to remain so, with the exception of Idaho bakers. Idaho holdings are 21 percent smaller than in January 1962. New red potatoes are on the increase, priced only slightly higher than the old crop.

Canned corn may add a sunny note to your February meals. It's now in record supply and all styles of pack are economically priced. You'll find bargains in tomato products too — all good to help supply that needed Vitamin C. For a note of spring (not at bargain prices) there is more hothouse rhubarb in the market.

From the fruit bin, apples will probably lead as the best fruit value this month due to weather and supply conditions of other fruit. Regular storage apples are holding good quality and "Controlled Storage" apples will appear in limited quantity. Grapefruits likely will be the best citrus buy — the small ones show best quality at the present time.

What about the price of orange juice? At this writing, it's hard to predict, for much depends upon the Valencia crop — the best orange for juice. In Florida, harvest is under way but juice yield still uncertain, and the California Valencias were badly damaged by the last cold wave. So,

"I'm careful of the words I say,
I keep them soft and sweet;
I never know from day to day
Which ones I'll have to eat."

FUN WITH LIMERICKS

No writer would say his limericks are poetry. They are just another way of trying to say something amusing to himself and, he hopes, to others. Here's what we mean:

There once was a lad from Nantucket
Who put out to sea in a bucket,
And he never came back
To his little old shack
When he heard a nor'easter had tuck it.

There once was a man from Altoona
Who lived on crackers and tuna,
But one time a host
Served him chicken on toast
And now he goes for it soonah.

The form of a limerick need not necessarily be interesting to a reader. Properly, all he looks for is an amusing, nonsensical idea wrapped into a small, disposable package. But it will appear to a reader with a second look that the writer must have more in mind.

Technically, a limerick has a very rigid form as to rhyme and meter or beat. Unless this form is used, you may have a little, foolish verse, but you don't have a limerick.

People must always give most of their time, thought, and effort to their burdens and their problems. Sometimes they wonder if their strength is equal to their tasks. Tension builds up. Reading a limerick or some other foolish verse could be one way to relieve it.

It says here . . .
Fun is where you find it.

'Nerves' Troubling You? Religion Offers Cure

One of the most common phrases today is— "Take it easy."

Rabbi Zelizer

Our doctors advise us to do so. When people greet each other in the street they part company with the phrase — "Take it easy."

It is, however, most difficult these days of turmoil, of tension and anxiety to take it easy. No matter who we are or what we do, we find too many demands that are made upon us. Some of us drive ourselves to exhaustion. Others use drugs or drinks to keep themselves relaxed. Then they become artificially so relaxed, that they are too tired to do anything. The net result is that our hearts and our nervous systems are adversely affected either from physical exhaustion or from stimulants.

We go to the doctor. "Nerves" is the verdict. "Nothing wrong physically" we are told. "Go home and rest" is the advice.

Religion offers another cure. God created the world in six days, we are told, and He rested on the seventh day. The Sabbath for the Jews or the Sunday for the Christians, if properly observed, was designed long, long ago to provide man the opportunity to take a break (not a coffee break) in the tension of the week's drudgery and endeavors.

Through prayer, public and private; through study of the Bible and religious literature; through discussions by the family of subjects other than those which take one's time during the week, one can provide for himself the break in the tension of the week's drudgery and endeavors.

We must do something to take our minds off the worries and the anxieties of the week. We must re-create our spiritual being. Yes, church and synagogues, the Sabbath, the Bible are some of the "pills" which the Great Doctor ordered a long, long time ago. Why not try to dissociate ourselves from the tension of the work-a-day living? Many undiagnosed ailments would disappear.

We are told time and again — "God is our strength." Why not try leaning on Him. Let us not wait for death, trouble, sickness. Let us lean on Him in time of joy, health and serenity. Then life would not drain us so fast of strength and stability.

If only we would learn this truth before it is too late. Life is an ambush. We do not know when the attack may come. Let us learn to utilize the life giving strength that can come from our religious traditions and the sources of strength they provide for us and our loved ones.

—Rabbi Nathan Zelizer
Temple Tifereth Israel

Frosting On The Cake

By
"UNCLE DOC" ROSS — U.S.A.

The hour of truth for this once proud, solvent country is much nearer than millions of semi-conscious saps realize. For 30 years the Populists have succeeded in seducing a majority of our adult citizens into the insane belief that "something for nothing" and "everything for free" is possible if they vote right.

The tragedy is that millions have not been voting right. They have been voting left, and from year to year the dollar goes down and the national debt goes up. The country is now on the toboggan of national bankruptcy of the Federal Government and eventual repudiation of the national debt.

The New Deal has become a New Delirium, and the New Frontier is rapidly degenerating into a jungle of double-talk and buckpassing.

One thing only will stop this madness and restore the integrity of our currency and the responsibility of government at all levels. The turn to the right is gaining momentum and added voices every day, all over the country. Joe Doakes, presently a "monkey on a string" for politicians of both parties, is finally getting wised up to the bitter truth that he, himself, will be the first to be destroyed by this Populist madness

Unless this crazy spending is stopped by 1964, every tangible equity will be destroyed, with the exception of unencumbered land. Social security will be a sham and most of the worthy "common good" projects that have been established out of the experience of nearly 200 years under the thesis of liberty under law, will go down the drain.

And what a tragedy it is to see that legitimate labor and all it has gained in more than half a century of honest struggle, now committing "goodwill suicide" because of radical mis-leadership. Examples are the dock strike, and the newspaper strikes in New York and Cleveland.

The real cause of this growing turn to the right is the destructive labor monopoly in huge industries.

The country has got to get back to God and WORK in 1964.

Adventure Treat Coming Feb. 2, 3

INSIDE ON THE Outdoors
By ROB COCHRAN

Veterans Memorial Hall is the location, Feb. 2 and 3 are the dates, and another Wally Taber outdoor adventure show is the attraction. The Franklin County Allied Conservation Clubs is again sponsoring an exciting and educational color film showing that will appeal to both adults and youngsters.

If this sounds like a publicity blurb, you are right. For after hearing Earl Schaeffer's enthusiastic plans for keeping local clubs organized again, you can not help but give this worthwhile group a boost. We did it last year this time, and we're glad to do it again. Tickets are $1.50 for adults and $1 for students. A 25-cent discount is allowed on tickets bought in advance at any leading sporting goods store.

The program this year will not feature Taber, but one of his experienced associates, Ebb Warren. Two films will be narrated by Warren — "Pacific Paradise" and "New Zealand Safari." On Saturday the program begins at 8 p.m., and the Sunday showing is a matinee starting at 2:30 p.m.

Ebb Warren resides in Michigan four months a year. The rest of the time he's traveling to remote places of the earth shooting film of hunting and fishing trips, and then showing it. He seems to have the sportsman's ideal job.

Let him tell you about the films to be seen here: "I can show you what must be the greatest fly fishing in the world from a New Zealand lake — 8 to 12 pounders are common. New Zealand's trout fishing is fabulous and much of its brood stock was developed from Michigan trout.

"Game is so thick the government employs hunters to keep the herds in check. There are no restrictions on foreign hunters and you can shoot what you wish. New Zealand has six species of deer, chamois, boar and elk. All of these are imported and there are no natural predators. Hunting is the only way to control them.

"Hawaii will surprise you. Even people who have been there find it hard to believe the island has pheasant hunting just as good as South Dakota, and boasts many other species of game. There's a lot more to Hawaii than just the beaches and hotels."

Asked what about the Taber program that appeals so much to sportsmen, Warren responded; "It gives people a chance to put themselves in our boots for an evening. They may never get a chance to actually go to New Zealand but they can escape there for an evening and see some spectacular fishing and scenery."

Warren doesn't believe that the world is so small that he will ever run out of places to film. His greatest ambition is to hunt Kashmir, a beautiful mountainous state claimed by both India and Pakistan.

Don't forget, Saturday and Sunday, Feb. 2 and 3 — the Franklin County clubs will appreciate it. See you there.

Leftovers . . . by John McPeek

'Corngrowers, Lend Me Your Ears!"

Who would have guessed that corn has an ear for music?

Apparently nobody — at least not until farmer George E. Smith of Normal, Ill., shucked traditional corn growing methods and piped music into his fields.

McPeek

Smith, obviously a man attuned to progress, mounted loudspeakers on poles in his cornfields and from mid-May until mid-October harvest he piped music from a record player in his barn to the tassel-dancing cornstalks.

Night and day he kept the music turning and the corn grew tall. The tempers of some of his less musically inclined neighbors also grew tall, but any concern Smith may have had to retain a good-neighbor policy went up the silo when one of his hybrids (perhaps excited by Beethoven's "Eroica," as a wag in the New Yorker said) produced three times as many bushels of corn per acre as did the musically uncultivated hybrids in neighboring fields.

Despite the fact that University of Illinois agriculture experts stated "there is no known genetic, biological or psychological reason to believe that sounds can affect plants," agronomist Smith hopes to continue his experiments.

Assuming music does stimulate corn growth, the problem would seem to be to determine which music is the most efficient. Inasmuch as there are many hybrids and varities of corn, it also would seem plausible that different forms of music would bring various reactions from each type of corn.

From this non-scientific corner, it appears only logical that popcorn may best be stimulated by recordings of the Boston Pops Orchestra; sweet corn by the mellifluous sighings of Doris Day or Dinah Shore; roasting corn by the torrid lamentations of Lena Horne or Abby Lane; and hog corn by the rock-and-rollings of Chubby Checkers or the jazzings of Fats Domino.

Perhaps if more farmers were to pitch in, the answers could be found sooner. An ideal testing ground would be around Groveport and Canal Winchester, one of the richest corn producing areas in Franklin County. For more than 100 years, Groveport and Canal Winchester farmers have vied to see who could grow more corn per acre.

Not only is it possible that those areas could gain new honors, it could become known as the hibridelity, eareophonic music center of Ohio.

And all in the name of science!

'. . NOW, TAKE THREE PACES NORTH'

THE MESSAGE ON this car's window—etched in the snow—took on aspects of a treasure hunt. The message is "INSIDE" and an arrow points the way. It doesn't take much imagination to start drawing your own conclusions. Hartley Newspaper Staffer John Auble, Jr., snappened it with a telephoto lens and reported that he was uncertain, also, as to its actual meaning. A notice for ticketing policemen? A memo to his wife? Who knows. Just chalk it up to another mystery of winter.

sions for getting the wife from the house on time and, in all, lessens much of the worry."

This program of "familiarity" certainly breeds "content" as many of the mothers — on an end-of-the-course evaluation sheet — comment they "knew what to expect and what to do about it."

At the open house in Feb., as with all of the class, expectant parents listen while experienced parents and authorities tell of the many aspects of childbirth.

Subjects included are labor, delivery, emotional changes, diet, relaxing techniques, types of anesthesia, diapers, infant care and, of course, the costs of having a baby.

There are also question and answer periods and most of the classes are conducted in a small, intimate discussion manner.

The open house, too, will serve as an introductory session to the ten weekly classes conducted under the association's auspices in two sections of the city.

East Columbus classes are instructed by Mrs. Ruth Niekirk, R.N., M.S.N., and assistant professor of obstetrical nursing at Capital University.

Classes in the North Side are instructed by Mrs. Joan Birtcher, R.N., M.N., and former obstetrical nursing instructor at Ohio State University.

One of the highlights of the instruction is a section on relaxation which has proven to be a vital part of pregnancy. However, the relaxing techniques prove to be just as valuable for Dad, too, and cut down his cigarette intake during hospital waits.

"Sometimes," Mrs. Kohler grinned, "the fathers take this relaxing thing too seriously. We occasionally have them fall asleep on us."

How can "veteran" parents be aided by the instruction? "Everyone can use refresher courses," Mrs. Kohler theorized. "The mother is taught to actively participate in birth because they'll occasionally forget what they have to do. This is how the refresher courses play an important role."

Besides Mrs. Kohler, other officers in the association are Vice-President Phyllis Hebner, Secretary, Carolyn Smith and Treasurer, Martha Istevan.

Memebrship isn't confined to the Columbus area, Mrs. Kohler said. Expectant parents as far away as 60-miles journey here to take advantage of the instruction.

Of course, the association still can't guarantee a boy or girl but, one thing's sure, it can certainly make Pop's morning sickness a little less violent.

call the fire chief.

Gallagher said he returned the call but couldn't locate Strickfaden.

The matter has hung in mid-air ever since.

Gallagher did say Tuesday his department proposed to move ahead with the plans and install the light as soon as there was a "break in the weather."

The light is designed to remain green for Greenlawn-av motorists until the time an emergency vehicle needs the go-ahead. The operator of the emergency vehicle would then push a button on a post located near the side drive and change the light to red on Greenlawn.

"It's now a dangerous situation," the chief said, "and a light of some sort is definitely needed. The biggest problem is motorists zooming off the freeway without reducing speed."

around the fire in a "right angle."

Additional thought brought to light the connotation expressed by a "right angle" was the central idea of what the members wanted to strive for—the "right angle" on life.

The name was half the battle. Now, these 15 boys had an identity and, more important, they had drive and desire and the needed ability to roll up their sleeves and get the job done.

Objectives of the club are reflected in their statement of purpose and the established committees for service, religion, education, social and recreation.

The written purpose of the club is to ". . . develop all-around manhood through religious, education, physical and social activities. It shall include service to the community and the development of leadership through practice."

What has the Right Angle done for the South Side YMCA? One of its biggest projects has been the erection of log cabins at the Y-Park on Rohr-rd.

One of its prized accomplishments is the Right Angle Building—built and completely furnished by the club. Most recent project has been the furnishing of the club room at the new South Side YMCA.

Above all, however, has been the molding of youth — and it's been a strong mold, indeed. Club members, now scattered throughout the world, still keep in close contact with their Right Angle "teammates" on the South Side.

Right Angle was recently honored at the South Side YMCA recognition banquet South Side "Y" Club to attain a quarter century of service to youth by youth.

The recognition award was given at the banquet by "Cap" Hoover, the beloved leader and honorary life member of the group who recently retired as executive secretary of the "Y."

"Members of your group have gone out into further service for youth in all parts of the country," Hoover said. "Two members of your club, E. M. Findley and R. W. Olson are presently serving on the Board of Management of this YMCA." (Olson, incidently, is chairman).

Charter members of the organization (as nearly correct as can be determined by "Y" officials) include Jack Byron, Bob Clifford, Floyd Taylor, Bill Hess, Clarence Nonnemacher, Bob Miller Howard Schneider, Jim Becker, George Both, John Kampe, John Koetz, Herb Meilke, Dave Wilson and Carl Winkleman.

Honorary life members, besides Hoover, include Tracy Peterfish, Mack Buzzard and James Wagner, now executive secretary of the new "Y."

Current officers include President Dave Wilson, Vice-President Jack Karn, Secretary Dick Arnold and Treasurer Ed Findley.

Anyone Want An Apple? Help Yourself, Buddy

Money Does Not Grow On Trees; Neither Do Apples Grow In Bags

By JANE ROBINSON

If Harry Lutz, Carroll orchardist, had his "druthers" he'd grow apples sporting not only cheeks, but legs.

Then he'd have them jump into the hundreds of thousands of four-pound plastic bags that he sells every year.

That little athletic feat would save a lot of time, money, and plain hard work.

Some people believe that when the apples are picked a grower can look forward to a winter of leisure by the fireside.

But Lutz, overseeing his huge packing house at Sand Hill Fruit Farm last week, soon put an end to that notion.

As harvest ends, the real job begins.

When the modern housewife wants an apple for a lunch pail she no longer goes to the bushel of winter apples she stashed away in the cellar last fall.

Instead she goes to the refrigerator and gets one from a small transparent bag she picked up for about 49 cents at the supermarket the other day.

That's the way she likes to do it, so that's the way apples are packed today.

Putting apples into these sacks doesn't sound very complicated, but if you could see how it is done, Lutz's daydream "druthers" would seem more practical.

As the apples are picked, he explained, they are run over the grader and imperfect, small or poorly-colored fruit taken out. The apples, thus sorted, go into his 38,000 bushel capacity cooler. Drops are sold immediately to truckers.

There, the apples remain at about 32 degrees with extremely high humidity until an order comes in. This may be next week, or six months later.

For example, a chain warehouse may order 500 "10-4's of Red Staymen, 2½ inch, min. U.S. Fancy, Columbus delivery, next Monday."

Apple Jargon translated

This jargon translated means the buyer wants trucked to his loading dock 500 boxes of apples, each containing ten four pound polyethelene bags, filled with a highly-colored variety of Staymen apples, none of which are smaller than 2⅛ inches in diameter. Also the order specifies that all apples shall, in color and quality, meet the specification set up for "fancy" by the United States Department of Agriculture.

Lutz or his superintendent, Albert Morris of Carroll, will then order crates of apples brought from the cold storage room to the packing room.

One man will stand for hours pouring crate after crate of fruit onto the grader which will propel the apples slowly forward along rolls which turn them over and over as they travel.

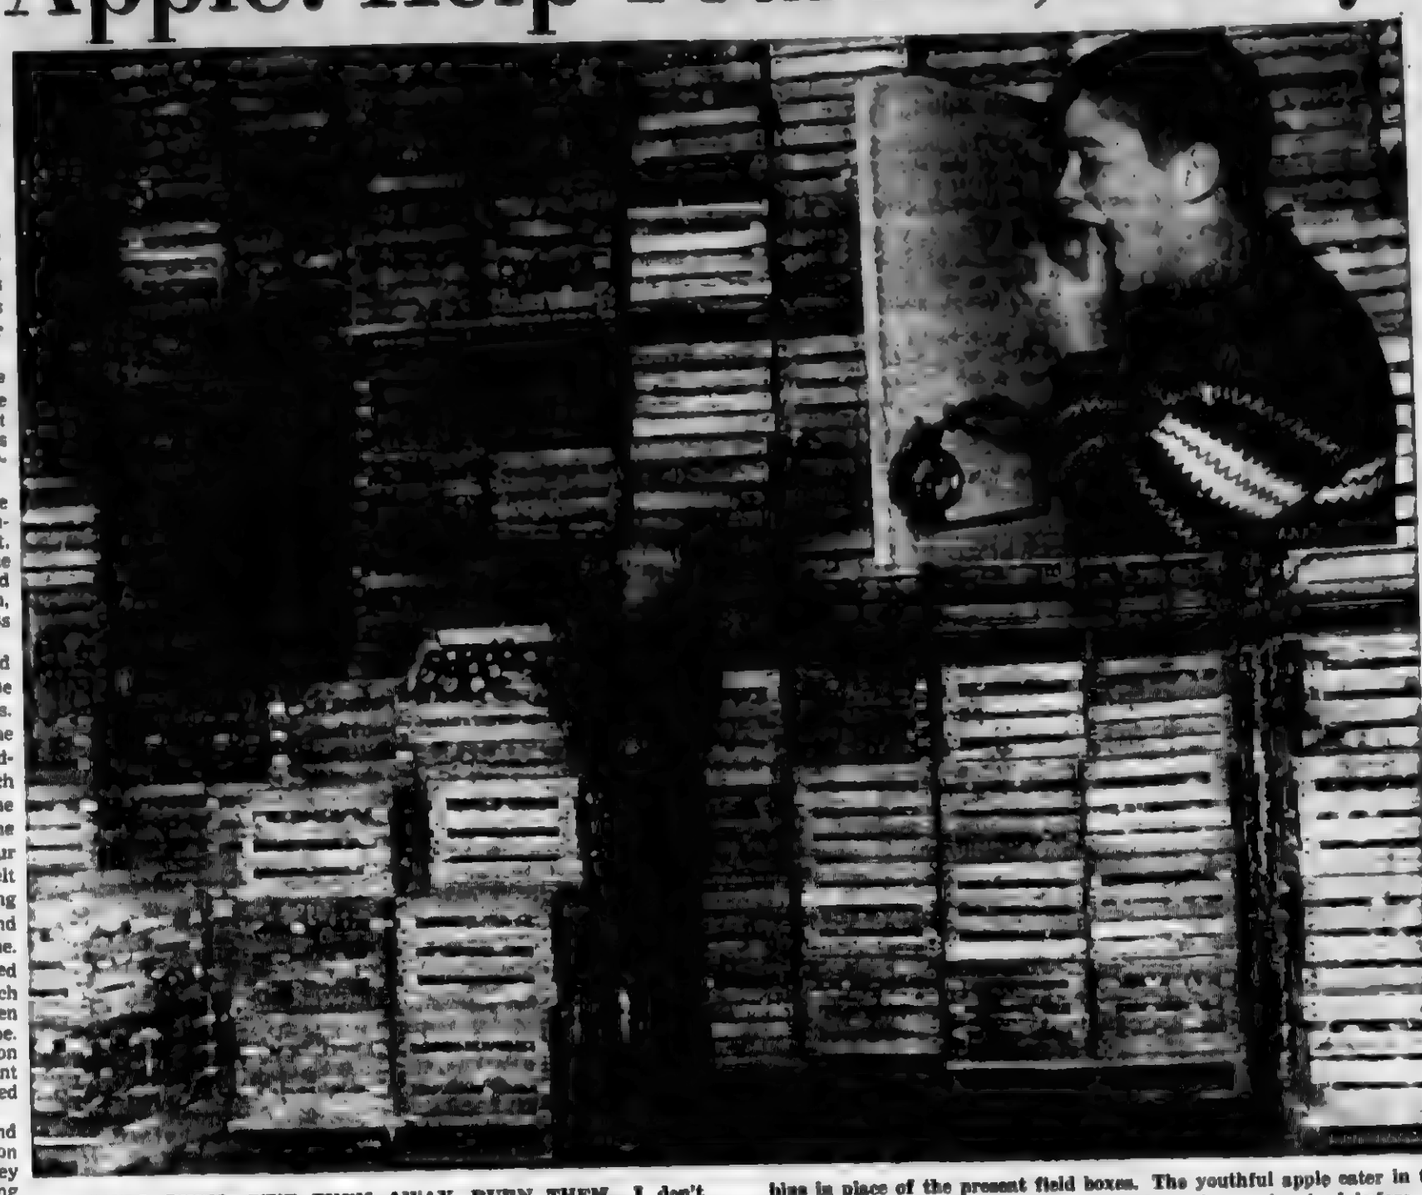
Women standing by the rolls will take out any apple that was missed on the first trip at harvest time, or has been bruised or damaged during storage.

These women are not there because of a shortage of manpower, Lutz pointed out. "These women are good," he said. "They are faster and more dependable than men, and there isn't any foolishness with them."

As the fruit is regraded it enters belts feeding the automatic bagging machines.

The operator places the "poly" bag on the springed-"fingers" of the bagger which holds the bag open as the apples drop into it. When the pre-set weight (usually four pounds) is reached, the belt automatically stops feeding until the bag is removed and replaced with an empty one.

The filled bag is then placed up-right on a conveyer which carries it past more women who close the bags with tape. Once sealed they progress on the conveyor to the point where a man is again needed for the heavy work.



He takes them singly and places them in precise fashion in the carton in which they will be shipped. After closing the cardboard master container he stacks them ready for loading.

Some Bag By Hand

When asked why several men were bagging by hand in another section of the plant, Lutz stated they were regular year-round employees who just don't believe in automation.

"When we first started bagging after the War, we bagged by hand, and they still think that's the only right way to do it," the apparently easy-to-get-along with grower laughed.

"Under the machine system, three bags come off each head every minute, he said, and with the present equipment 900 bushels a day can be handled."

"SELL THEM, GIVE THEM AWAY, BURN THEM. I don't know," said Harry Lutz, Carroll apple grower when asked what he'd do with the thousands of bushel crates he now stores apples in. He is planning for a new 50 thousand bushel storage area using 20 bushel bulk bins in place of the present field boxes. The youthful apple eater in the insert probably doesn't know how much work was involved before the apple he just swiped from the refrigerator was bought by his mother at a local supermarket.

Lots of people have babies named after them.

But Lutz's daughter, Carmen Dickenson, who lives in Corvallis, Oregon is the only person I've heard of who gave her name to an apple.

When her father budded a root stock with a Staymen and a Jonathan he was never sure which one "took".

But he knows what he got, a red sport variety that ripens early in the summer when, according to the grower, "there is no good apple on the market."

"It looks like a Jonny and keeps like a Staymen," he revealed, obviously delighted with his good luck.

Plans New Storage

He has planted 800 of the variety which are not in commercial production yet, as the oldest have only been in the ground eight years.

Forty years ago Lutz started in the apple business with 35 acres. Today he is one of Ohio's largest growers and has plans drawn up for a new 50,000 bushel storage area to accomodate the 200 young trees coming into maturity.

When the new 60 by 170 foot building materializes it will include, in addition to the storage rooms, men and women's lunch room and lavatories, office space and packing facilities.

Though he has always liked the business and knows its too late to make a change now, Lutz says that this is a "Go Easy and Come Hard" business.

This isn't hard to believe when you look at the thousands of dollars in equipment and the labor force required to suit the housewife's fancy for "bagged apples."

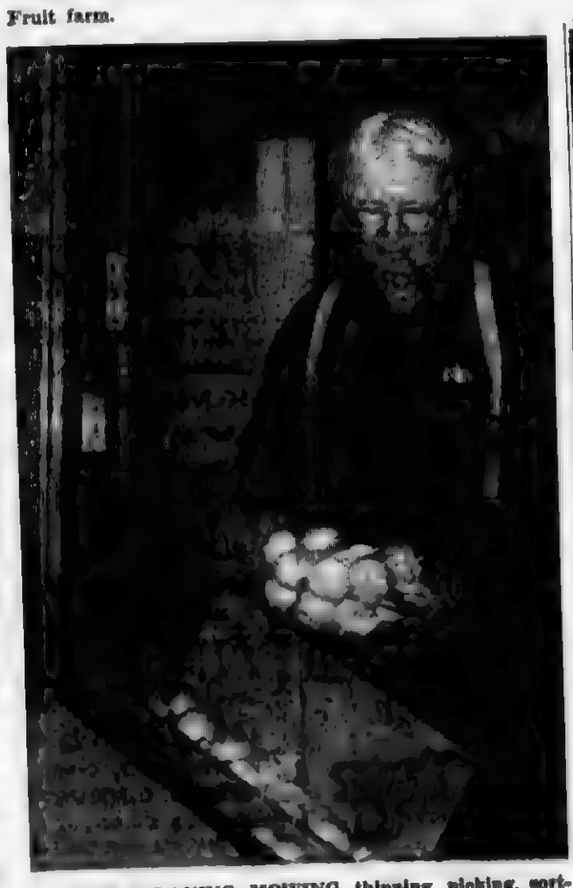
R. L. RICE GRADUATED

Ronald L. Rice, airman apprentice, USN, son of Mr. and Mrs. F. Rice of 4953 McAllister-av, graduated from Aviation Familiarization School at the Naval Air Technical Training Center, Memphis, Tenn.

APPARENTLY TIRELESS, Ira Donahue, Groveport, pours apples and more apples on the rolls as they take their last trip over the grader before being bagged in consumer packages. The winesaps shown here have been in storage since October and look as good as new.



"WHEN IN DOUBT, throw out," is a good slogan for any one sorting apples as they come over the grader. Ernestine Solt, Canal Winchester, Route 2, keeps her eyes glued to the fruit as she works. Helping her is Albert Morris, Carroll, who is the superintendent of Sand Hill Fruit farm.

EVERY THREE MINUTES another bag of apples comes off each bagging unit in Harry Lutz's packing shed. The clear bags he uses backs up his belief that the "bag shouldn't hide." Shown in the foreground is Mrs. Hazel Solp, Route 1, Carroll. Behind her is Mrs. Murele Thorne, Route 2, Carroll, and Mrs. Violet Moore, Route 3, Lancaster.

COMING RIGHT UP, Mr. Lutz. Closing the cardboard containers is the job of Lloyd Denner, Royalton, who then stacks the cartons, ready to be loaded, on the trucks for shipping to their destination. Each box contains 10 four pound polyethelene bags of choice apples.

THE SPRAYING, MOWING, thinning, picking, sorting, storing and bagging all seem worthwhile as Harry Lutz, owner of Sand Hill Fruit Farm holds a package of flawless Golden Delicious apples ready for shipment. Running strictly a wholesale operation Lutz ships most of his harvest to the local chain warehouses for state-wide distribution.

RASPBERRY-ICE CREAM VALENTINE

Meringue Shell

4 egg whites
½ teaspoon cream of tartar
¼ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon vanilla
1 cup sugar
Red food coloring

Sauce

1 package frozen red raspberries in sugar sirup, defrosted (1 lb.)
4 teaspoons cornstarch

Filling

1 quart vanilla ice cream

Make meringue shell. Beat egg whites, cream of tartar, salt, and vanilla until mixture holds soft peaks. Gradually beat in sugar, one tablespoonful at a time, and continue beating until very stiff and glossy. Add food coloring as needed to tint the desired shade of pink.

Draw an eight or nine-inch heart on heavy brown paper. Place on baking sheet. Spread mixture onto heart mounding meringue up around outer edge of heart. Bake in very slow oven, 275 degree, until dry and lightly browned. Turn off heat and allow shell to cool in oven. Cool thoroughly before filling with ice cream.

Make sauce. Reserve one cup drained berries to fold into thickened sauce. Mix juice and cornstarch until free of lumps. Add remaining one-half of berries. Cook, stirring constantly, until clear and thickened. Fold in remaining berries. Chill.

Drizzle over ice cream in meringue shell. Makes six or eight servings.

FELLOWS — PLEASE!!! — Persistent George Maurer (21), apparently unwilling to share the roundball with Reynoldsburg's Gale Bryant (30, on way to floor) gets his point across successfully as he wrestles Bryant for possession as a distraught referee (left) gets ready to scale the gymnasium wall to avoid the cavorting cagers.

FOUL PLAY — St. Mary's Mike Gray (second from right) is the victim of a little "foul play" as Reynoldsburg's Jon Heischman (right) gets a bit too familiar in covering Gray. Moving in on the basket are the Raiders' Craig Shade (34) and Jim Stover (10) and the Rams' Tim Sauer (13). St. Mary came from behind to down Reynoldsburg Saturday evening, 57-54.

'ROSARY BLASTS RAIDERS

Bulldogs Drop Pair; Rams CL Runnerup

South's Bulldogs, unable to match Whetstone's torrid 56 per cent shooting accuracy from the field, dropped a 53-49 City League decision to the Braves Friday night, suffering a second defeat Saturday evening at Findlay, 69-58.

The Rebs got 20 more shots at the basket than did Whetstone but were able to convert a chilly 32 per cent. South, who trailed by five at intermission, rallied in the closing minutes of play but couldn't quite catch the Braves.

LLOYD PATE, a sophomore brought up from the reserves to bolster the Bulldog offense, paced the Reb attack with 18 points, gathering an additional 21 the following night at Findlay.

South held the upper hand for a half against the Trojans, entering the second half with a 30-29 lead. Findlay, however, paced by Tom Miller's markers, got its offense rolling early in the third period and handed South its eighth loss in 12 tilts this season.

ST. MARY tenaciously hung onto the runner-up position in the County League race over the weekend — the only CL entry with any hope left of catching unbeaten University.

The Rams hosting New Albany Friday night clamped down the Eagles, 81-53 before holding out against Reynoldsburg's determined Raiders, 57-54, the following evening.

THE ISSUE WAS barely in doubt against New Albany after the Rams pulled away from a six-point first-period lead. George Maurer led all scorers with 28 points with teammate Tom Sauer garnering 16 more.

St. Marys had to call on a spirited second half rally the following night against the Raiders, however, as Reynoldsburg left the floor at intermission sporting a four-point bulge.

Maurer collected twenty markers to pace the Rams while Bob Yates notched an additional 14. The Sauer boys, Tim and Tom, added nine markers apiece.

THE PREVIOUS evening Rosary's Crusaders caught the Raiders looking the other way, adding up a 61-52 County win.

The Green and White bonneted off to a healthy 20-7 first period lead and although Reynoldsburg moved to within four points on two occasions, Rosary refused to relinquish its edge.

Ed Rockenbach hit for 17 points for Rosary while three other Crusaders finished in the double-figure scoring. Rick Stokes 16), Don Spurlock (14) and Jim Groce, (13) rounded out Rosary's well-balanced attack.

MARION - FRANKLIN found the going no easier outside the City League's circle of competition over the weekend as the Red Devils dropped a pair, 76-64 to Mansfield Madison Friday and 59-29 to Watterson Saturday.

The Devils fought back against Madison to leave the court at half time with a 33-28 edge. But the Mansfield five zeroed in on the bucket in the second half to pull even and then ahead to stay.

Joh and Steve Jackson paced M-F's scoring with 18 and 14 markers respectively.

Wattterson opened the second half by outscoring the Devils, 23-5, the following night as the Eagles broke a close game wide open. John Jackson's 14 points were tops for MF.

AQUINAS SUFFERED a 43-39 setback to City League competitor Linden Friday night.

The Terriers battled back to cut the Panthers' lead to one point at intermission but Linden managed to stay one step ahead of the Irish the rest of the way.

All area teams face a full weekend of hardwood activity as the cage season heads downhill toward its finish. Friday action finds East (11-1) at South (4-8), Aquinas (7-5) at Central (8-2), Marion-Franklin (2-11 at North, St. Marys (11-3) at Dublin (8-4) and Rosary (3-8) at Hamilton Township (5-5).

Three additional games are on tap for Saturday evening as Watterson (11-2) visits Aquinas, St. Marys entertains Lancaster Fenwick and Rosary hosts Hamilton Township at the Catholic Center (K of C) in a non-league tilt.

HARTLEY SPORTS EDITOR

Cold? Try Hot Stove Diet Of Encyclopedia, Trades, Tax Deduction

Our desk has been swamped during the past few weeks with continued advertising requests, urging our investment in a particular set of sports encyclopedias.

"In writing any type of sports material you'll find these volumes as indispensable as your typewriter . . . facts that never seem to be at hand when you need them in a hurry . . . if you're simply tired of thumbing through unwieldy files" . . . etc., etc., etc.

THAT'S THE trouble with people nowadays," we heard ourselves telling a colleague. Nobody figures anymore. They look it up in a book."

Given an unlimited amount of paper, pencils and time, it was the contention of an old fourth-grade teacher that ANYTHING could be solved. With the mercury outside frozen at -11 degrees, we figured we had the time.

Let's see now. Trades are often used as a barometer for figuring out the results of the approaching pennant races. There've been 81 players traded since the end of the '62 season.

WHY NOT USE that as a basis for being the first in the neighborhood for scientifically and statistically figuring out the final lineup of teams in the '63 pennant races?

(A) Total up all the batting averages of the players departing from a club and those of players arriving. (B) Subtract to see if the team gained or lost batting punch in the trade. (C) Total wins and losses of departing and arriving pitchers.

(D) Figure how many wins or losses a team had acquired by comparing pitching records. Eg. Pitcher X is acquired by team Y. Pitcher X won nine and lost six; pitcher A is traded away with a 6-20 mark. Therefore, team Y is better by 17 games since X won three more than he lost and A lost 14 more games than he won.

(E) FIGURING pitching and hitting as virtually equal in determining success afield, we arrived at these final AL and NL standings, strictly on the basis of trade improvements (or vice versa):

NATIONAL LEAGUE

	Batting	Pitching
St. Louis	Plus .022	Plus 24
New York	Plus .019	Plus 17
Houston	Plus .002	Plus 15
Chicago	Plus .036	Plus 9
Philadelphia	Minus .003	Plus 2
San Francisco	Minus .018	Minus 9
Pittsburgh	Plus .011	Minus 21
Cincinnati	Minus .007	Minus 3
Los Angeles	Minus .193	Minus 17
Milwaukee	Minus .012	Minus 2

AMERICAN LEAGUE

	Batting	Pitching
Baltimore	Plus .027	Plus 12
Boston	Minus .006	Plus 9
Chicago	Plus .141	Minus 3
Kansas City	Plus.000	Plus 1
Minnesota	Plus .000	Plus 8
Los Angeles	Minus .006	Minus 1
New York	Minus.270	Plus 6
Washington	Minus .006	Minus 4
Cleveland	Minus .160	Minus 4
Detroit	Plus .314	Minus 15

HOWEVER, TWO hours, two-thousand figures and 20 shortened pencils later, we realized we didn't have the statistics on: (1) how many players collected their BA and W-L records in the minors; (2) how many players were selected on the basis of their fielding or 'long ball' potential and (3) how many of the players would spend 99 per cent of the season riding the bench.

But where can we get information like that we wondered? "With over 2500 fact-filled pages at your fingertips you'll have no problems in comparing won-lost records . . . noting the past performances . . . etc.

Our application for the encyclopedias is currently in the hands of the postal department. Besides, who ever heard of the Yankees finishing in seventh place?

WHILE WE'RE on the subject of baseball (the thought of sunshine and 80 degree temperatures is so warming these days, here's some good news for all you income tax evaders out there!

Entertaining business associates at a baseball game continues to qualify as a proper deduction so better stockpile those diamond ducats.

The provisions of Section 274 of the 1962 Revtnue Act (applicable to the national pastime) reads, "Deductibility of cost of baseball tickets, used for purposes directly related to business, follows the same standards as used in the past."

BASEBALL TICKETS may be deducted as (1) entertainment expense, (2) business gifts, not exceeding $25 per individual per year and (3) recreational expenses for employes.

Helping to improve the strains of "take the office staff out to the ballgame" are two additional tips that 'treatment of the season tickets as a series of separate items is advantageous to the purchaser' and 'receipt as proof of payment is not required.'

What these two statements mean in simple language is that you should spread the wealth around and don't worry about crawling around under the grandstand for that ticket stub Miss Jones so thoughtlessly discarded.

You must admit that it warms the heart to see our nation's two most popular pastimes — baseball and income tax finagling—working so unselfishly together.

Wrestling Wrapup

Area matmen grappled their way through another week of wrestling activity but success proved difficult to attain for most squads.

East piled up the most impressive victory with a 26-9 decision over a tough Bexley team. It was the Tigers 10th win in 11 tries this season.

Highlight of the match was a battle of the unbeatens which saw East's Jack Hamler decision the Lions' Rick Mauger in the 165-pound division.

WORTHINGTON COPPED the last five divisional matches to remain unbeaten with a 24-9 verdict over Whitehall while Walnut Ridge and the Ohio Blind School battled to an 18-18 standoff.

Watterson compiled a total of 103 points Saturday to win the first-ever Catholic High Tourney at DeSales. Hartley's Hawks finished in the runner-up spot with 97 points while DeSales and Ready followed with 55 and 41 points, respectively.

The Eagles' Doug Chapin, a 145-pounder, was named as the tourney's most outstanding wrestler.

ELSEWHERE AROUND the area, Franklin Heights ran into trouble in Dayton, dropping a 24-17 decision to Kettering Friday. The hosts copped the final two matches to gain their winning margin.

Checking around the area for wrestling action this week, we find Whitehall hosting state power East Lake North Friday at 7:30 with another match set for Tuesday at 4 p.m. at University.

Grove City faces once-beaten Pleasant View Monday at 4:30 p.m. in the Panthers' den. F-H's Falcons have two meets scheduled — Saturday against unbeaten Worthington and Tuesday at Hilliard.

Central's scheduled meet last Friday at Groveport was canceled due to poor weather conditions.

Probably the keynoter as far as wrestling activity goes is Worthington's Invitational on Saturday. Participating with the host Cardinals will be Franklin Heights, the defending champ, Whitehall, Circleville, Arlington, Martins Ferry, Toledo Devilbiss and Sandusky.

Preliminary matches are set to get underway at 12:30 p.m. with finals beginning at 7:30 p.m.

In other matches Tuesday, East nailed down its 10th mat win of the season with a 36-10 verdict over Bishop Hartley. The Tigers' Roger Young (122), Bill Evans (127) and Jack Hamler (167) maintained their undefeated status.

Dream To Aid Children With Exceptions Materializes

By BETTY DAFT

The modern, bright brick building on the corner of Souder and State-st is a dream-come-true for baffled educators and distraught parents . . . and a lifeline for the children most often misunderstood and neglected.

Here, children with exceptions find assistance and understanding, and an opportunity to build happy, well-adjusted and productive futures.

The rapid development of the Diocesan Child Guidance Center is matched only by the faith of its founder and director, Sr. Francois, SND.

Under her inspired leadership the center, opened in 1953 in third-floor quarters in the Diocesan office building, 246 E. Town-st, soon needed enlarged quarters, and moved to 1000 Bryden-rd. Finally, in the fall of 1961, it occupied the new, specially designed and equipped building across from Mt. Carmel Hospital.

Children of all ages, of all races and religions with exceptions ranging from speech and hearing defects, and emotional disturbance to an unusually high mentality, are helped here.

In their efforts to solve the increasingly complex problems of young people, from "Why Johnny can't read," to "Why Janey has lost contact with reality," parents and teachers are turning more and more to the center for help.

Sr. Francois and her expertly-trained staff study the uniqueness of each child's case through exhaustive physical and psychological testing, and recommend a course of training or treatment.

Children are treated on an out-patient plan. Very nominal fees are charged to those who can afford them, but none are refused because they cannot pay.

Careful, thorough physical examinations are given each child to determine his speech, hearing and seeing capabilities. Psychological testing follows. Finally, after consultations with the child and his parents, a remedial program is planned.

Babies are also given exhaustive physical and psychological testings at the center before being placed for adoption.

Sr. Francois, her name synonymous with the Child Guidance Center to Columbus educators, is the bridge between troubled children and their parents, and the highly specialized services at the center.

Her personal interest in each child and his needs, mirrored in her cheerful, friendly, informal manner, is reassuring to all who seek her help.

Of the center, Sr. Francois says, "With our heads in the clouds and our feet on the ground, we have dreamed this dream." Her faith that the dream would be matched with a million dollars and be materialized in the new Child Guidance Center never wavered.

"My hope," she continued, "is that we will be able to take care of all children with exceptions — the exceptionally bright children who will be brilliant leaders of tomorrow, the mentally retarded, the palsied, the deaf and the blind children.

"And," she said wonderingly, "just imagine — until this year we never charged. All our services were free to anyone who needed them. But it costs more to operate this building; our bills are so high.

"The best is so expensive and, of course," she added emphatically, "nothing but the best will do for our children."

There is surely no skimping on the quality of education in the center's staff. Ph.D. degrees and impressive records of training and practical experience are the rule.

Sr. Francois herself was a long time readying for her unique role at the center. Her career in the classroom covers many years of experience in academies of Notre Dame, from intermediate grades through high school levels.

She was, for a while, a member of the faculty of the University of Dayton, and supervisor of Notre Dame academies and high schools.

Her wealth of knowledge of children and their ways was gained through many years.

Her success she attributes to a deep reverence for the human personality and unshaken trust in God for guidance in caring for His children.

There is a reward at the top of . . .
THE CLIMB

EVERYONE IN THE CHURCH . . . THE CHURCH IN EVERYONE
The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.
Even when you know the proper way to climb with skis and the way up becomes easier, it still exerts you. However, the way is made even less of an effort when you think of the rewarding ride down.
The reward of an eternal life with God is easier still because it is a gift.
"For the wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord."
Attend church . . . learn more of this wonderful gift.

'Buttons, Buttons . . . This Group Needs Some Buttons'

Our appeal this week is for an unusual item — buttons.

Members of the St. Camillus Serving Circle have used all of their own buttons, plus those of their friends.

The circle sews for overseas mission hospitals, mostly working on nurses uniforms.

The need is for white buttons, sizes one half inch to one inch, either with a metal shank or the usual two or four hole product.

Ten to 14 buttons are needed on one uniform alone. Button-buyers know this has become an expensive proposition, with the current cost of this useful commodity.

Those desiring additional information or who have buttons to donate, may call 444-3217.

Margaret Fielder, 3216 Parsons-av, entered Miami University (of Ohio) as a freshman student this week. The coed received her high school diploma from the St. Joseph Academy.

New residents of 1413 S. 6th-st are Mr. and Mrs. Cliff Marshall, formerly of Michigan.

Southway Post 144, American Legion Auxiliary, has completed plans for formal initiation of new members. The ceremony is scheduled for Friday, Feb. 1 at the Post Home, 874 S. High-st. Jennie Little is the membership chairman of the Southway unit.

Mrs. Harry Esselstein, 808 Jaeger-st, is the premium stamp chairman of St. Mary's parish, and may be reached at HI. 3-6903, by would-be donors.

Meetings, here and there:

Trudeau Guild 25 will meet at 1799 Wilson-av, home of Mrs. Charles Boyd, on Wednesday, Feb. 6, at 8 p.m.

The St. Francis Ramona Society will have a business meeting on Wednesday, Feb. 6, at 8 p.m., at 543 Front-st, followed by installation of officers and refreshments.

The Capital University Mothers Club will meet at 3 p.m. on Sunday, Feb. 3, at Troutman Hall.

The Women's Guild of the St. Paul United Church of Christ will meet at 7:30 p.m. on Wednesday, Feb. 6, for the installation of the new officers.

The PTO of St. Paul's Lutheran Church Day School will meet at 9:45 a.m. on Thursday, Jan. 31. The new officers will be in charge of the meeting.

The Schiller Park Golden Age Club will hold its regular business meeting on Tuesday, Feb. 5, at 1 p.m. The executive board will meet at noon, prior to the meeting of the membership. Cookies and coffee will be served during the social hour.

The Rosary Altar Society of Corpus Christi Parish will hold its annual casserole supper on Tuesday, Feb. 5, at 6:30 p.m. in the social hall. Mrs. John Welch is the chairman of the affair. An 8 p.m. meeting will be held following the supper. Mrs. Charles O'Connor will preside.

The Young Women's Circle of Gates-Fourth Methodist Church will meet Monday, Feb. 4, at 7:45 p.m. in the home of Mrs. John McKee, 1224 Lockbourne-rd. Final plans will be made for the group's annual smorgasbord, which will be held at the church on Wednesday, Feb. 27.

Happy birthday also to teen-agers Gregory Clark and Patty Ann White.

We also wish happy birthday to Ellis Wesner, Edna Siebert, Clementine Easterling, Sue Brixner, Gary Eichel, Howard Penrod, Edward Dorn, Alice Colegrove, Herb Germaine, Maureen Ruden, Priscilla Dicke, George Swisher, Erwin Moehrmann, Helen Wolff, Cornelia Dillon, Elizabeth Lee and Mamie Killian.

The Ed Pfeifer family, formerly of 1082 Kelton-av, are now residents of Gahanna, Ohio, in the Rocky Fork Estates development. Now occupying the Kelton-av home are Mr. and Mrs. Julius Borghese. Mrs. Borghese is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Pfeifer.

Used Christmas cards, particularly those with religious pictures, are being used by the WOTC of Emmanuel Lutheran Church for overseas mission work.

There is also a need for old calendars in the mission field.

The church parish worker, Mrs. Jack Maxim, has coordinated the collection drive for the WOTC and may be contacted at HI. 3-9491.

Unusual Italian foods will be the feature of the Tuesday, Feb. 5, "Cook's Tour," held at 10 a.m. at the YWCA. For complete information, contact the YWCA office, CA. 4-9121. Mrs. Bert Charles will be the demonstrator.

Columbus Chapter of Gold Star Mothers, will meet on Thursday, Jan. 31, at 1507 S. Champion-av. Mrs. F. A. Fischer will be the hostess of the noon casserole luncheon.

The Corpus Christi PTA is sponsoring a chicken dinner on Sunday Feb. 17, from noon to 6 p.m., at the Desert Inn. The public is invited. Adult tickets are $2 and children's portions $1. Tickets may be secured from the general chairman, Mrs. S. Sinacola, HI. 4-7917; the ticket chairman, Mrs. F. Schneider, HI. 3-3393, from the PTA room mothers or at the door on Feb. 17.

The Friday Nighters Club, of the YWCA, will learn about the world through foods, at the "World Dinner Night" which they will hold at 6:30 p.m. on Friday, Feb. 1.

Carolyn Rettemnier, 1248 S. 22nd-st, will become the bride of Tom Turner, 1674 Newfield-dr, on Saturday, Feb. 2, at Corpus Christi Church. The bride-elect is a Rosary High School graduate, the groom-to-be attended OSU.

Also on Saturday, Feb. 2, at St. Leo's Church, a wedding ceremony will unite Patricia Moskus, 363 Sheidon-av, and John Witmer of Canton, Ohio. Miss Moskus is a graduate nurse of the Mt. Carmel School of Nursing. Mr. Witmer is majoring in industrial engineering at OSU.

Cheering cards would be thoughtful at this time for Jane Wolfe, who is hospitalized in Room 844, at Mt. Carmel Hospital, and for Mary Esselstein, 880 Beech-st.

The Byok C. E. group recently honored one of its members, George Siebert, with a farewell party. The South High graduate left this week for service in the Marine Corps.

C. H. Campbell

C. H. Campbell Is Appointed To Health Board

Mayor Ralston Westlake has appointed Charles H. Campbell to a four-year term on the Columbus Board of Health, effective Friday, Feb. 1.

Campbell, who lives at 91 S. Westmoor-av, succeeds Joseph S. Goodwin, 2909 Sullivant-av, a member for eight years who asked not to be returned because of increased demands on his time by his pharmacy business. The appointee is associated with Hartley Newspapers in the advertising department.

Campbell is secretary of the Central Ohio Academy of Pharmacy and also is executive secretary of the Hilltop Business Association.

Speaking of the Campbell appointment, Mayor Westlake in a letter to COAP President Walter Stewart said: "... for this position business administrative ability is more important than in any one profession, and Charles has both.

"He has been my valued friend for 40 years and I know he will serve on this important body with the same distinction that has marked all of his past activities."

Childrens' Hospital Urban Renewal Project Gets Federal Help And City Council's Okay

A South Side project — approved by voters in a 1956 bond issue — got off the ground Monday night thanks to an okay by Columbus City Council and a shot in the pocketbook by the Federal government.

The Federal contract on the Children's Hospital project was received by the city and work on land acquisition can proceed immediately after the contract is signed.

The contract provides a direct Federal grant of $2.3 million, covering two-thirds of the net cost. It allows $129,774 for the relocation of residents in the area.

Total cost of the Urban Renewal project has been set at $4.5 million. It covers 55 acres.

John P. Willison, urban renewal director, presented the legislation to council and said the city will purchase 280 parcels of land in the area bounded by Fourth-st, Monroe-av, Livingston-av and the Fulton Expressway.

It is expected the properties can be purchased by May. The project itself is divided into two sections. One is east of Parsons-av and the other is west. The city is to provide the full cost of the land east of Parsons while the other half can be paid from the direct grant funds.

The area immediately to the west of Children's Hospital is slated for a medical center with the land west of Parsons-av scheduled for restricted industrial use

Willison said plans call for a small motel near Children's Hospital to house parents of hospital patients. Also in the vicinity will be apartment units to house persons working at the hospital and at the industrial sites.

The federal contract also provides a clause offering a direct federal loan for undertaking the project, up to a maximum of $3,718,524 at 3⅞ per cent interest or the use of government backing to borrow the funds from private sources at lesser interest.

Under the contract, the city will maintain and supervise the project activity

Open Those Valentines With Tact

By JOHN AUBLE, JR.

Without proper instruction, some gals can be in for trouble with a capital "T" this Valentine's Day

And, "T" stands for "tact" and this is where the trouble lies

You probably think that it's a mere task accepting a Valentine from an admirer. "Oh, sure," you reason. "Another Valentine . . . ho hum." Actually, the fine art of accepting Valentines is the most important of all virtues.

Throughout the years, gals have had to exercise said tact with the finese of a Cleopatra when opening the blushing-message — bearing envelope. And, times haven't changed much as of this year.

History points out that there are three basic types of Valentine openers. First is known as the "Rip and Reader." This one, as her name may imply, simply runs her index finger swiftly under the glued flap with a resounding "Rip-p-p-p!"

VALENTINE PAGES INSIDE

Needless to say, this type is often frowned on by the opposite sex which usually prefers a bit more reverence in opening the package that took him so much nerve and brain-racking to conjure up.

Which brings us to our second form of card accepters. This is the most popular and most frequently used method of all. It's called the "Sonofa-gun-You Shouldn't Have" approach.

Caution is needed in applying this one, however. If the guy doing the giving is a joker with a message of love something like "Roses are reddish, Violets are bluish; There's plenty of goils so who needs youish" type then he's not going to cotton to this blushing bride bit.

However, a girl really on her toes can foil this joker at his own game simply by putting the emphasis on the "Sonofagun" phrase so that it rings with sarcasm. He'll get a big kick out of that.

The third and final basic Valentine opener is commonly known as the "Let's-Hope-This - Is - All - In - Fun-

Dems Have Most At Post As Primary Race Deadline Finalizes All Filings

Franklin County political candidates have made it a dead-heat for the filing deadline as various races throughout the city take on partisan appearances for the May primary.

Final filing time was 4 p.m Wednesday. Heaviest filings have come from the Democratic camp while Republicans are relying heavily on incumbents.

In the face of mayor incumbent W. Ralston Westlake has received the Republican endorsement for another term. He will be opposed by former Columbus Mayor M E. (Jack) Sensenbrenner, a Democrat, who served two years of an unexpired term as mayor, and was re-elected to a full term from 1956 to 1960

A West Side businessman is the third candidate to enter the race for mayor. He's John E. Bricker, 33, assistant vice-president of John Getrew and Son, Inc. He will seek one of the two nominations in the non-partisan primary.

Besides the mayor race, other candidates from the individual parties include:

REPUBLICAN

Ed Becker: One Of The Best Pals A South Side 'Y' Youth Ever Had

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the second in a series of articles written to better acquaint residents with the South Side YMCA its work and its leaders The new "Y," at 190 Southwood av, is currently staging a fund raising drive for furnishings and it's hoped that these notes will help show the drive's worthiness.)

"Friend Of The Boy" is the motto of the Optimist Club, but one of its members spills the philosophy over and applies it to his work with the South Side YMCA

This man is Edward P Becker, 1017 Euclair-av, who has put a gargantuan amount of time into the South Side "Y," its work and its beliefs of developing the youth of the area

Becker is an active member of the Columbus Optimist International Luncheon Club, a past president (1957) and, at present, active in the Junior Optimist membership committee

The Optimist Club sponsors many programs for youth and one closest to the work of the "Y" is the South Side YMCA Boys' Junior Optimist Glee Club

The club was organized in 1935 and Becker has become an instrumental "note" in the musical group's activities

He has served on the South Side Branch YMCA Board of Management since 1948 and was its chairman in 1955. He has worked for a number of years as the South "Y's" representative on the Camp Willson YMCA Board

Becker is superintendent of the auditing department of the Ohio Inspection Bureau and presently is working on the fund-raising campaign for Capital University's expansion program

He is a charter member of the South Side "Y's oldest club—the Americ. Seniors organized in 1926. The club has held many state basketball championships as well as the city softball championship for a number of years.

This "Y-worker" recently

RECEIVING due recognition for his work with the South Side YMCA is Edward P. Becker (left). The award was made recently by the "Y" which presented a plaque to Becker for his "work with youth." Making the presentation is M. V. "Cap" Hoover, former South Side YMCA executive secretary.

"SENSENBRENNER'S the name—and I want to run for mayor." This was the scene at 4 p.m. Tuesday at the Franklin County Court House Annex as M. E. "Jack" Sensenbrenner filed as candidate for mayor of Columbus. Thus began a renewal of the 1959 race for mayor between Sensenbrenner and W. Ralston Westlake, both Hilltoppers. Westlake filed Tuesday morning, a day before the deadline. Seen here accepting Sensenbrenner's petition of 5,600 signatures, and the filing fee, is Harold Holtzworth, 831 Montrose-av, clerk of the Board of Elections.

Southview Park Expansion Work Set For Summer

Work is slated this summer for 22 additional baseball and softball fields and two football fields at Southview Park, 300-400 Greenlawn-av, according to Nick Barack of the City Recreation Division. The announcement was made Feb. 2

The project will take two years to complete, Barack added

The expansion is made possible by the leveling of the last of buildings used for veterans housing there, Barack said.

The Division of Parks and Forestry plans to develop an area immediately west of the Scioto River for recreation, including picnicking.

Barack said the additional area provides space for a fieldhouse which may be constructed later.

Southview Park will eventually house 20 softball and eight baseball fields and five football fields, the recreation director said.

Libertarian Exponent To Speak At Exposition

Leonard E. Read, president of the Foundation for Economic Education, Inc., will be the kick-off speaker for the Fourth Biennial Electrical Manufacturers Exposition, Tuesday, Feb. 12.

Read will speak at the kick-off luncheon prior to the opening of the three-day show in Veterans Memorial Building.

An out-spoken exponent of Libertarian Government, Read will speak on the subject of "The Essence of Americanism." Exponding on the "American Miracle," he states it is economic in this sense: "If an individual has the right to his life, it follows that he has a right to sustain his life—the sustenance of life being nothing more nor less than the fruits of one's own labor."

Read began his early education in economics at the age of eight when his father started him milking cows on the farm. He says, "I learned the relationship between hard work and a quart of milk. All else in economics is but embellishment on this primary lesson."

The special program is the second in a series of farm seminars designed to acquaint corn growers with the latest efficient practices being followed by successful growers, and recommended by agricultural authorities.

The main discussion will center on how proper farm management is the key to increased income.

The harvested crop is only one of the farmer's resources. Along with seed, he must also consider his soil, labor, equipment and capital investment; and all of these must be coordinated throughout the year so that a profitable operation is the result.

Showing how this can be most efficiently achieved will be the aim of the panel program.

The participants will take management out of its stereotyped picture as "just bookkeeping" and translate it into a vital and essential procedure.

'Belle' Style' To Be New Spring Rage

These two coiffures show two different and distinctiv lines in the romantic "Belle" hair fashions designed for spring and summer.

The "Easy Elegance" coiffure is designed in the "down" line, especially for the free and easy look in many spring couture collections, as well as for the long and fluid lines for evening.

It has the understated quality of simple elegance with lovelocks curved at the temples, and a graceful swing of waves hugging the head, framing the face.

A regal sweep of rising wave curls at the crown and overthrown waves and lovelocks at the sides distinguish the "Magic Belle" coiffure for the "up" line of new hair fashions to give harmony with rising waist lines and Empire influences in clothing.

Both require professional hair shaping and permanent waving to give the hair its ease of care and soft lustre, as well as its convertibility from the "down" line into an "up" line.

The new coiffures will be featured during National Beauty Salon Week, Feb. 10-16.

Plant Tour Scheduled

The Foremen's Club of Columbus, Inc., will hold a plant tour of the Nippert Electric Products Co., 1759 W. Mound-st on Friday, Feb. 22.

The plant will be open from 7-9 p.m.

Club members, their families, and friends are invited to attend. Members are asked to notify the club office regarding the number of persons planning to attend.

Sportsmen Hunt On Public Area During Season

Sportsmen from 33 counties hunted during the month-long season on the Franklin-Pickaway public area, according to the Ohio Division of Wildlife. During its second year of operation the numbers of game animals taken were: 452 pheasants (released), 40 rabbits, 22 quail and 24 native pheasants.

A total of 2,123 hunting permits were issued.

Located just south of Columbus, this leased public hunting area is useful in relieving pressure from private land, said Virgil Scott, district game management supervisor for the division.

"While a number of counties were represented, 77 percent of the hunters were from Franklin County," he commented.

The area was in operation from Nov. 15 to Dec. 15. Free permits were issued for the total time, giving a fairly exact figure on the game harvest. Ninty-five percent of the hunters reported back to the checking station.

Special Beauty Tribute Set For Feb. 10-16

A special salute to the beauty of women in the United States will be made Feb. 10 through 16 during National Beauty Salon Week.

The week has been so-named in order that richly deserved honors can be given well-groomed American women who have been called, "the most precious and inspiring assets in the nation."

As one female beauty expert described NBSW, "This is the time for all of us to recognize the great strides made by the beauty profession which brings the finest beauty care to American women."

The slogan for this year's program is, "There's Magic For You in a New Hairdo."

Cosmetologists from coast to coast will conduct special programs to highlight the "beauty magic" their special services bring to community and individual welfare throughout the year.

As part of the program, in more than 1,300 cities, experts will provide beauty care to persons confined to hospitals. This service has been lauded by members of the medical profession for the beneficial results it has had on the morale of patients.

Other public services to be rendered by cosmetologists are personal appearances at fashion shows, hair style displays, and lectures and demonstrations before women's groups.

LT. FRANK GRASHEL, editor of the Columbus Fire Department News, gives instructions to his "dog-watch editor," Rusty. A "dog-watch editor" handles the news when the editorial staff is gone for the day. Rusty, who has filled this slot on the News since the paper was started, has no trouble with the job since he lives in the newspaper office, located in Fire House 12, 3200 Sullivant-av. The News was started seven years ago by Grashel and Capt. Ralph Burton, now a fire department battalion chief.

Firemen Read Monthly Paper For 'Hottest News In Town'

By LEE STILLWELL

"The Hottest News In Town" is an appropriate motto for The Columbus Fire Department News published by Local 67, International Association of Firefighters.

Under the guidance of Lt. Frank Grashel, editor, and Lt. Charles Smith, assistant editor, the paper is celebrating its seventh anniversary.

The idea of starting a local paper for firefighters originated during World War II. Fire officials published a monthly paper to send to department personnel serving in the armed forces.

The paper was discontinued at the end of the war.

Firemen pressed for their own paper once again in January 1956 and Grashel volunteered to edit the publication for "only a year." The lieutenant has remained as editor since then.

Grashel takes pride in the paper's record of having never missed an edition.

Local 67 picks up the "tab" for paper expenses and postage is paid through donations from subscribers. Grashel said the postage fund has never been empty during the paper's existence.

The Fire News is distributed throughout Columbus on the first of the month to department personnel and mailed to over 400 persons. The publication is mailed to retired Columbus firemen, city and state officials, local news media and firefighters serving in the armed forces.

One paper is sent monthly to a fire chief in Cholon, South Viet-Nam.

The fire chief spent some time with the Columbus Fire Department under an exchange program.

The paper's nine members, working on their own time, strive to publish an informative paper.

"Our goals are to bring Columbus firefighters closer together," said Grashel.

Promotions, deaths, and news about local firemen are considered "the hottest news in town" by the staff.

"The importance of this information can be shown through the firemen's card system. Each fireman donates $3 to a fireman's widow following his death. The money is taken from the pay checks of retired men living out of Columbus. These individuals would not know why the money was taken unless the death was listed in our paper," said the editor.

Staff members of the paper, in addition to Grashel and Smith, are Ray Beougher, art and cartoons; John Melfi, sports; Bob Throckmorton, reporter.

Dan Bonzo, Bill Bruce and Frank Reeves are responsible for printing the paper.

Marian Grashel, wife of the editor, has handled the typing and stenciling for the paper the past seven years.

160 YEARS AGO . . .

Labor-Saving Appliances Popular With Homemakers

Manufacturers were attempting to make housekeeping chores — particularly in the kitchen — less arduous for mother even in the early 19th century.

The Ohio State Museum here has opened a kitchenware exhibit from collections of the Ohio Historical Society to show the extent of the labor-saving attempts.

The 'wares, modern appliances of their era, were designed to take the drudgery out of corn shelling, ironing clothes, pitting cherries, stuffing sausages, and the three-time daily cooking chores.

Today, many of the items turned out in that "iron era" linger on in the home, forming decorator pieces, the coffee grinders turned into lamps or flower holders, and the trivets gracing walls.

The modern-day housewife has a variety of pressing irons, and there was no shortage of varieties in 1825 either.

The hand pressing irons of that day vary from one that is self-contained in that it was heated by alcohol carried in a small reservoir, and those heated on the cook stove. The irons were changed as they cooled.

Fluting irons, odd creations much like scrub boards, were used to crimp milady's collars and cuffs. Others look much like old style clothes' wringers.

All items were manufactured to be utilized either on wood, coal or gas-fired stoves, and include waffle irons, kettles, ladles and other wrought iron wares.

Also in the appliance category are apple parers and corers, cornshellers, an early style pencil sharpener, and cherry stoners.

The exhibit is on the first floor of the Ohio State Museum, High-st at 15th-av. Museum hours are 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily, and 1 to 5 p.m. on Sundays and holidays. Admission is free.

FOOD MARKETS THIS WEEK

Food Marketing Costs Remaining Stable

By ESTELLE B. FRANKS

THIS WEEK LOOK FOR:

Fruits — Apples, bananas, small grapefruit, canned apple sauce.

Vegetables — Cabbage, potatoes, yams, carrots, onions, frozen lima beans.

Meats — Fryers, chuck roasts, Boston butts, hams, bacon.

For the first time in more than 10 years, food shoppers can't complain about "rising marketing costs." The cost of getting food from the farmer to you did not increase during 1962, according to U.S. Department of Agricultural economists.

Mrs. Franks

The retail cost and the farm value of foods in a typical market basket did, however, rise slightly, the economists report.

Last year the estimated retail cost of the market basket foods was $1,064 compared with $1,060 in 1961. The farm value of these foods increased from $404 to $408. But note, that the farm-retail spread (the much-complained-about marketing costs) stood at $656 for the past two years.

The market basket — used by U.S.D.A.'s Economic Research Service to compare food costs — contain the average annual quantities of farm food products purchased per wage-earner or clerical working family in 1952.

Canned And Frozen Vegetables Can Lower Your Food Bill

Families have always used more processed vegetables during January, February and March than other months of the year. This winter, in view of the current prices and quality of some fresh vegetables you may want to consider even greater usage of frozen vegetables.

Supplies of canned vegetables into mid-1963 are expected to be substantially larger than a year ago and for the recent 10-year average. In many areas during 1961-62, vegetable growers had bumper crops. Some items which you'll likely see featured due to large supplies include: corn, snap beans and tomato products.

Higher prices on citrus juices have resulted in accelerated shipping of tomato juice. Catsup, chili sauce and tomato paste are also in heavy supply. You're wise to carefully compare the costs of the 12-ounce vs. the 14-ounce bottles of catsup before buying in quantity — there's a much larger pack of the 12-ounce size, making it the size likely to be a bargain.

Total supplies of frozen vegetables are expected to be slightly smaller this year than last, but many major items are still in heavy supply. Corn, peas, lima beans and French fries are likely to be especially good buys from the frozen food chest. You might watch frozen asparagus too; while stocks are down from last year, new packaging will begin in about three months.

Prose And Rhymes — Loving Lines About Valentines

Hearts

By M. M. Stewart
Groveport

Hearts and flowers, moon and June.
Girl and boy, bride and groom.
Love is my business, Cupid's my name,
Love and romance has brought me fame.

But I'm in a state of confusion,
As I write this letter today.
I need some solid answers,
Please send them right away.

Won't you guard my secret, Abby, as I write you for advice.
Does cupid's bow and arrow,
Call for shoes and rice?

Do lovers need a reason,
For petting in the park,
Or should they seek a counselor,
Before they embark?

I know I should be up-to-date,
That's why I'm writing to you.
So send me your answer, Abby,
I'm somewhat in a stew.

I Think of You

By Dave Newman
Carroll, O.

I saw your paper at my pad,
And from the front page saw the ad.
I thought that I would do my my best,
And write a poem for your contest.
Altho to me its sounds so stupid,
It's the best I can write about Cupid.

I think about you all the time.
Why won't you be my Valentine?
I sit and wish that every day,
Cupid would shoot a shot your way,
Hit your heart and make you mine,
My one and only Valentine.

I sit and dream of castle towers,
It helps me while away the hours.
I sit and dream of things so fine,
I want to give my Valentine.
I want to give you this for sure,
My heart is yours for ever more.
So why not say that you'll be mine,
My one and only Valentine.

VERSE VEXES VAGABOND LOVER

HAIG MENENDIAN, 1782 E. Main-st, always thought writing flowery poetry was a cinch until he decided to create his own Valentine. Haig's fiance, Loretta Gasparian, lives in Asbury Park, N.J., and the courtship has been a long-distance affair. He is shown here trying to find the words for his home-made Valentine. Haig and Loretta plan a spring wedding unless the lovely lass changes her mind after receiving the make-shift verse.

A Riddle

Marjorie Altenbach
298 E. Moler-st

It's a riddle I'll never be able able to guess
Out of all the world, why do I love you best.

A thousand people have passed me by,
As I stand here waiting at Broad and High.

I find that I'm feeling a little sore,
When I think of the times I've waited before.

And mentally, to my self, I am saying to you,
As I shift my weight from shoe to shoe.

For Heavens sake, when we have a date,
Why in the world, are you always late?

But there you are, and watching your face,
The blood in my pulse begins to race.

While I tuck your arm in the crook of mine,
And eagerly ask you, "Where shall we dine?"

Forgetting the thoughts of the hour just past,
I only know you are with me at last.

Yes, it's a riddle, I cannot guess,
Out of all the world, why do I love you best.

Hartley Men

By Mrs. David Acker
150 E. Whittier-st

If I could pick my Valentine,
I'd pick a "Hartley man."
But if you're not available,
I'll do the best I can.
But if you're that little Cupid,
That always has the dart,
I don't want to know you,
'Cause you'd shoot it thru my heart.

My Favorite

By Mrs. Kenneth Toy
632 Stone-av

I think about you, Valentine,
When near or apart,
On Lover's Day, and the whole year through,
You're number one in my heart.

So be my favorite Valentine,
And thru the years we'll stride,
And never will we ever part,
The two big hearts will be as one.

Legend Of Cupid

By Mary Farmer
945 Studer-av

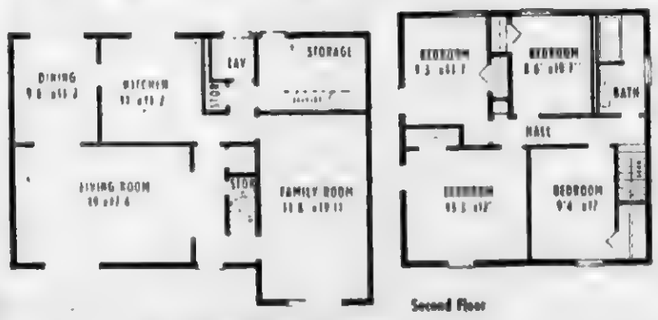
One spring day, Zeus, chief god of all the Greek gods and goddesses stood on Mt. Olympus, home of all Greek gods and goddesses, and said, "Our young people quarrel too much. Let's discover a new god to put an end to it."

At that moment, beautiful gentle Athena, goddess of arts and crafts, walked in. "I suggest," she said, "that we find a gentle, kind, and loving god. The new son of Venus and Mercury fits the description perfectly."

Zeus said, "Tomorrow have Venus and Mercury bring their son to me, and if he is anything like his parents, he should be perfect for the job."

The next day Venus and Mercury brought their young infant son, Cupid, to Zeus, who knew the minute he saw him what Athena said had been true.

After questioning his parents, Zeus gave Cupid the great job of guarding and protecting love. They gave him a pair of lovely wings and a bow and quiver of magic arrows.



Cupid would fly around shooting arrows into the hearts of young quarrelers.

Today he is remembered on Valentine's Day because it is a day dedicated to lovers.

American Cancer Society Needs Volunteer Workers

Many people would like to do volunteer work but abstain from joining a group because their free time is unpredictable. Such people should consider working for the Franklin County Unit of the American Cancer Society.

a little BIG NOW

We all get a thrill out of seeing our children put on our hats or shoes. Obviously they don't fit now, but some day he, or she will grow to fit them. At the same time imagine that they are trying on our lives. Would they fit? . . . or do you live the type of life that you would want them to grow to. Live a life of worship of the Lord.

"Thou wilt shew me the path of life: in thy presence is fulness of joy; at thy right hand there are pleasures for evermore."

ATTEND CHURCH SUNDAY

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

Hartley Men

By Mrs. David Acker
130 E. Whittier-st

If I could pick my Valentine,
I'd pick a "Hartley man."
But if you're not available,
I'll do the best I can.
But if you're that little Cupid,
That always has the dart,
I don't want to know you,
'Cause you'd shoot it thru my heart.

My Favorite

By Mrs. Kenneth Toy
632 Stone-av

I think about you, Valentine,
When near or apart.
On Lover's Day, and the whole year through,
You're number one in my heart.

So be my favorite Valentine,
And thru the years we'll stride.
And never will we ever part,
The two big hearts will be as one.

Legend Of Cupid

By Mary Farmer
915 Studer-av

One spring day, Zeus, chief god of all the Greek gods and goddesses stood on Mt. Olympus, home of all Greek gods and goddesses, and said, "Our young people quarrel too much. Let's discover a new god to put an end to it."

At that moment, beautiful gentle Athena, goddess of arts and crafts, walked in. "I suggest," she said, "that we find a gentle, kind, and loving god. The new son of Venus and Mercury fits the description perfectly."

Zeus said, "Tomorrow have Venus and Mercury bring their son to me, and if he is anything like his parents, he should be perfect for the job."

The next day Venus and Mercury brought their young infant son, Cupid, to Zeus, who knew the minute he saw him what Athena said had been true.

After questioning his parents, Zeus gave Cupid the great job of guarding and protecting love. They gave him a pair of lovely wings and a bow and quiver of magic arrows.

Cupid would fly around shooting arrows into the hearts of young quarrelers.

Today he is remembered on Valentine's Day because it is a day dedicated to lovers.

American Cancer Society Needs Volunteer Workers

Many people would like to do volunteer work but abstain from joining a group because their free time is unpredictable. Such people should consider working for the Franklin County Unit of the American Cancer Society.

Much of the work done by the society is of an educational nature, so there is a need for typists and people to stuff envelopes.

The work can be done at the W. Mound-st building or in the volunteer's own home. There is also a need for transportation volunteers. There is no door-to-door campaigning involved.

The work is done the year-round, but the peak months are Febraury, March and April.

Dorothy Fornof, of 103 Fornof-rd, is the volunteer chairman of Franklin County. She will be most happy to give complete information if contacted at HI. 4-8225.

a little BIG NOW

We all get a thrill out of seeing our children put on our hats or shoes. Obviously they don't fit now, but some day he, or she will grow to fit them. At the same time imagine that they are trying on our lives. Would they fit? . . . or do you live the type of life that you would want them to grow to. Live a life of worship of the Lord.

"Thou wilt shew me the path of life: in thy presence is fulness of joy; at thy right hand there are pleasures for evermore."

ATTEND CHURCH SUNDAY

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

Hocus Pocus, Fish Bones Choked Us As Magicians Took Over Columbus

By JOHN AUBLE JR.

Keeping with the time honored tradition of the world of magic, this story was not written. It was produced, conjured-up or prestidigitated.

The bunny-pullers were in town last week, carrying on their 32nd annual Magi-Fest in the Neil House, and nothing was sacred with the slight-of-hand artists.

Even the chamber maids, busy going from room to room, were halted on occasion—to have eggs or silk handkerchiefs pulled from their ears.

Even this story came close to being written from memory since a local magician, Gus Neussle, snatched this reporter's notes, tore them into little pieces and then produced them intact once agan.

Neussle, 71, is one of the old-time convention highlights. He's an Ohio State physics professor, retired, and now devotes most of his time entertaining with hocus pocus. He was the 1962 Columbus Magic Award winner for the best magical effect.

This was the story with most of those attending. Magic, it seems, started out as a part-time hobby and later developed into a full-time venture.

What do magicians do when surrounded by other magicians? Perhaps "Satan," a Philadelphia resident, summed it up best. He explained "they come to see what the other fellows have and then try to steal it."

Columbus resident Donald Tanner was chairman of this year's convention and produced a talent-filled "Headliner Show" at the Masonic Temple Auditorium Saturday night.

One of the high spots of the convention was the magical mastery of Everett Duncan, 135 E. Main-st, Hilliard. Duncan, former Youngstowner, has become one of the better-known wand wavers in the Columbus area and continued to delight the crowd this year.

But magic is no longer a male profession. The gals are invading the industry fast as Pittsburgh's Sue Schmitt will testify. She's a 17-year old who goes under the stage name of "Su-Jay—Maid of Magic" and she certainly was.

She's the daughter of the immediate past international president and has a 12-year-old brother, Dave, who's taking the magic trail, too.

Candy and Alexis Krumm are two other examples. Alexis, 18, a student at Ohio Wesleyan, helps her Dad, Robert, while Candy (12) is working into the act with the finesse of a seasoned veteran. The Krumms are Virginia residents.

Let's not overlook the fact that feminine Dell-O-Dell, now deceased, ranked among the greatst magicians in the world, the gals pointed out.

The female foolers admitted they were seeking new material for their acts, as are the men. Acually, they commented practically all the "new" tricks are just improvements of old-time classics.

The linking rings, card tricks and producing devices remain the same even though these talented people develop tricks that take on a new appearance.

Appearing to be the "newest of the new" was a man named Karrell Fox, a Detroit resident, who performed with three others Saturday afternoon at what's called "close-up magic."

The other magicians sit around a table while Fox performs right under their noses. The experts watched open-mouthed.

Next year's convention, according to Tanner, has been scheduled for Jan. 31 and Feb. 1. That is, of course, unless someone found a way last week to make the Neil House disappear.

BSA 53rd Anniversary Celebration Starts Feb. 7

Members of the 648 scouting units in the nine county areas of the Central Ohio Council, Boy Scouts of America, will celebrate the 53rd anniversary of the movement beginning Thursday, Feb. 7 through 13.

Theme will be "Strengthen America . . . Be Prepared, Be Fit." The members will hold open house meetings with parents, prospective members and families of adult leaders.

"By holding these open house meetings," said Council President Arthur D. Bogen, "we hope all our guests and the boys themselves will get a greater understanding of the aims and objectives of the Boy Scout movement.

"Scout Week is the occasion when members show their accomplishments in an exciting and dramatic way," Bogen added. "Parents, we find, take a greater interest in their son's development when they meet his volunteer adult leaders and the boys with whom he associates."

A rededication to the ideals of scouting, the Cub Scout Promise, the Boy Scout Oath and the Explorer Code, is planned by many units.

Scouts are being encouraged to attend in uniform at their own church or synagogue on Scout Sabbath, Feb. 9, or Scout Sunday, Feb. 10.

Paint Sale Record Set

R. S. McKay II, President Dean & Barry Co., reported a six per cent increase in paint sales during 1962 at the annual meeting of directors and stockholders recently held at the firm's offices, 296 Marconi-blvd.

A 71-year record high in both unit and dollar volume of paint producers sold was set for the year. A four per cent increase in total sales of both paint and jobbing items was also recorded.

McKay said steady progress is being made in the firm's program of opening new retail paint and wallpaper outlets in Ohio and neighboring states. Three additional stores in Delaware, Springfield and Toledo Southland Shopping Center were put into operation in 1962.

Balloon Days Scheduled To Help Heart Fund Drive

Big red heart-shaped balloons will make their appearance in downtown and suburban shopping areas Friday and Saturday, Feb. 8 and 9, when Ohio State University students from the residence halls observe Balloon Days for the benefit of the Heart Fund.

Approximately 400 men and co-eds will have the inflated balloons for sale at 12 shopping centers Feb. 8, between the hours of 6 and 9 p.m., and at the same centers and 10 downtown corners Saturday, Feb. 9, from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Balloons sell for 25 cents.

Balloon salesmen will be on hand at the following shopping centers: Great Eastern, Great Western, Great Southern, Miracle Mile, Northern Lights, Amos, Graceland, Kingsdale, Lane Avenue, Tremont, Central Point and University.

James Unrue On Maneuvers

James T. Unrue, seaman, USN, son of Mr. and Mrs. F. G. Unrue of 5199 Kornwal-dr is serving aboard the fast amphibious transport USS Ruchamkin, which is engaged in a two-month amphibious exercise in the Caribbean.

The exercise, dubbed Phibulex 1-63, involves five ships with more than 3,600 Navymen and Marines embarked. The purpose of the exercise is to train the men in amphibious strike force tactics.

Suburban Absorbs Subsidiary

James R. Riley, president of Suburban Motor Freight, Inc., has announced the "complete integration" of Liberty Highway Co., with the parent line.

Suburban Motor Freight acquired control of Liberty Highway Dec. 31, 1956, through purchase of capital stock. Liberty has been operated as Suburban's major subsidiary since that time.

"All services performed by each company before the Interstate Commerce Commission confirmed the merger will be continued and, in time, expanded by Suburban," Riley said.

Suburban is a national regular common carrier. It's certificate of public convenience authorizes direct service in the six-state area of Illinois, Indiana, Kentucky, Michigan, Ohio and West Virginia, and interline accomodations to 41 other states, Washington, D. C., and Canada.

Rose Week Slated For March 21

This will be a big rose year for Columbus, according to Richard Lawwill, superintendent of the Division of Parks and Forestry.

March 21 will begin Rose Week, according to Foster Franks, horticulturist with the division.

In an expanded service to the city, nine workshops will be held in various communities on rose planting and culture: Mar. 21, Franklin Park Shelterhouse; Mar. 23 and 24, Whetstone Shelterhouse; Mar. 25, Schiller Park Recreation Center; Mar. 26, Southview Park Shelterhouse; Mar. 27, Linden Park Recreation Center; Mar. 28, Westgate Park Shelterhouse; Mar. 30 and 31, Whetstone Park Shelterhouse.

State School Lists Uses Of Donations

Columbus State School, 1601 W. Broad-st, has a number of projects which organizations or individuals might be interested in financing.

Funds can be used for dentures, glasses, corrective shoes and orthopedic devices or research.

Checks may be made out to the Columbus State School Special Gift Fund with the specific use noted on the lower edge of the check.

Wheel chairs are also needed at the school. Chairs meeting the school's needs cost $80 and organizations wishing to assist the school in making wheel chair purchases are asked to call the school for further information.

Jan. 7, 1929, U.S. Army airplane "Question Mark" landed at Los Angeles with an endurance record of 150 hours and 40 minutes. The Pilots, Maj. Carl Spaatz and Capt. Ira Baker achieved even greater fame during World War II as Air Corps generals.

Scouts Build Strong Nation

As the Boy Scouts of America marks its 53rd anniversary during Scout Week, Feb. 7 to 13, it is timely to look into the "Fit For Tomorrow" program which was launched last fall as a continuing activity.

The President's Council On Youth Physical Fitness reported last year that about half of this nation's young people would probably fail a simple physical test. The council asked that youth be given more opportunities to develop the kind of fitness they need.

Dr. W. W. Bauer, health education director of the American Medical Association, feels that the Boy Scouts, "have been working quietly and effectively toward youth fitness a long time before the present interest in fitness started."

A scout's promise to "keep myself physically strong, mentally awake, and morally straight" — one of the aims of scouting — is said to be a good definition of personal fitness.

Cub Scouts learn the "why" of fitness activities when they work on feats of skill and health achievements. They learn to get along with others in their den and pack program features. All-around fitness is developed through inter-troop Boy Scout events such as camporees where boys compete against and visit with others.

Personal fitness is one of the six basic Explorer experience areas. The fitness emphasis comes into play through canoe trips, mountaineering, water sports and swimming meets. Bowling, golf, tennis and other sports that last a lifetime are natural Explorer unit activities.

The 19,557 Cub Scouts, Boy Scouts and Explorers of the Central Ohio Council keep an active interest in this project. They are doing their part in "building a stronger America" through building strong men. We believe they will succeed.

Another Way To Share . . .

It is worthy to note the effort again being extended by the six thousand Camp Fire Girls of Greater Columbus in behalf of the patients of the Columbus State Hospital.

In making life more meaningful for patients, the Camp Fire Girls in their community services project for February, called the "Friendship Walk," will be collecting books, records, sewing materials and cosmetics.

It is our hope that residents of this county will respond and "share their wealth with mental health, the Camp Fire way" by contributing those items they may have around the house gathering dust. Donors are asked to call the Camp Fire Girls office at HI. 3-9713 or the Franklin County Mental Health Association at CA. 8-4344 for pick-up service.

Says Motion Pictures Adequately Policed

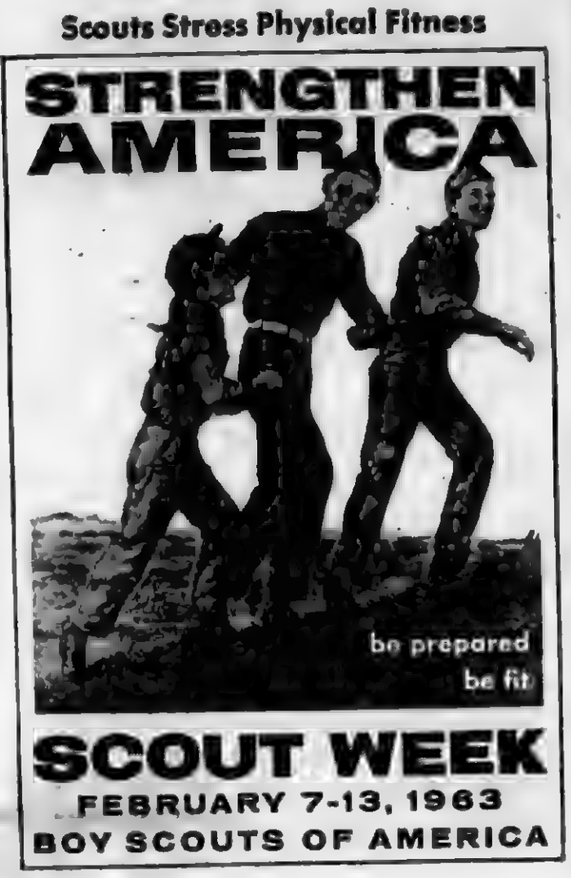
To The Editor:

The recent article in the columns of your newspapers entitled "Smut Movies Dirtying Theater Screens Here" was, I felt, shocking.

The article left the strong inference that all motion picture theaters are guilty of the offense described by the writer. Quotations taken out of context carried implications never intended by the persons quoted. Indeed, the reference to 16 mm. film eliminated, in practically all cases, the commercial motion picture theater. Another inaccuracy — the reference to acetate film — also eliminates all motion picture theaters. There is documented evidence from the Eastman Kodak Company to the effect that no flammable acetate film has been produced since 1945.

The author of the article quite properly may express his outrage at obscene motion pictures. The smoker movie, just like printed smut, is indefensible. Obscenity is a clearly-defined violation of law in Ohio. Convictions are a matter of record. To allege or leave the clear impression, however, that "local" theaters are "peddling miles and miles of smut" is, it seems to me, an irresponsible statement. All but a tiny fraction of the people involved in the production, distribution and exhibition of motion pictures are hard-working, dedicated people. The Columbus Movie Review Board, which was implemented by an ordinance of the City Council, has done a creditable job in investigating complaints. In cases of law violation they have acted effectively.

It is entirely possible that the author has seen or has known of a motion picture that offended him personally. This is inescapable since no two people that read a book or attend a movie are likely to have the same opinion. But, as you know, the First and 14th Amendments of the Constitution are designed to protect all media of the public press not only because opinions differ but in order to produce such differences.



Finally, the suggestion in the article that youth is the primary target is not in accordance with the facts when you consider that theater owners of their own volition bar the admission of juveniles and adolescent youths when the film content is adult in nature.

The publication of the article was particularly amazing in view of your reputation for accurate reporting and in the light of your long-standing opposition to censorship. We know that you share our view that governmental dictation of the content of movies is not proper and will never be successful. However, the inaccurate inferences left by this article cannot help but be of assistance to those who would impose their personal taste upon all people.

In closing let me repeat that the duly constituted authority, the Columbus Movie Review Board and the courts are doing an adequate job in protecting the public against the unlawful showing of obscene movies. The cooperation of all phases of the industry is forthcoming in legitimate endeavors along this line. Let's have no censorship except censorship at the box office. This is the American way of the right of selection.

The Door Of The Sheepfold Offers Salvation

"Verily, verily, I say unto you, he that entereth not by the door into the sheepfold, but climbeth up some other way, the same is a thief and a robber. But he that entereth in by the door is the shepherd of the sheep. To him the porter openeth; and the sheep hear his voice; and he calleth his own sheep by name, and leadeth them out. And when he putteth forth his own sheep, he goeth before them, and the sheep follow him, for they know his voice. And a stranger they will not follow, but will flee from him; for they know not the voice of strangers.

Elder Fry

"This parable spake Jesus unto them, but they understood not what things they were which He spake unto them. Then said Jesus unto them again, 'Verily, verily, I say unto you, I am the door of the sheepfold. All that ever came before Me who testified not of Me are thieves and robbers, but the sheep did not hear them. I am the door; by Me if any man enter in he shall be saved, and shall go in and out and find pasture." John 10:1-9.

The rugged beauty of the Highlands of Scotland have a special attraction for me. The endless stone-fences winding their way over the hills to disappear beyond the horizon lend a sense of mystery to this fascinating scene.

One day my attention was drawn to sheep grazing quietly in the valley. Above them on the hillside were small enclosures which my traveling companion informed me were sheepfolds. With interest I noted these enclosures had no gate or door.

My thoughts turned to the parable of the Good Shepherd as told by Jesus. "I am the door of the sheepfold . . . I am the Good Shepherd . . . the shepherd giveth his life for the sheep." This parable immediately became more beautiful and meaningful. At night all of the sheep of the flocks are gathered into the fold, and the shepherd lies down across the opening of the sheepfold. No sheep can pass out, or any wild beast enter without the knowledge of the shepherd. Truly the shepherd is the door of the sheepfold.

I noted further there was no roof over the enclosure to protect the sheep from the elements. So it is with us in life. To be within the fold of the Good Shepherd does not protect one from all of the difficult experiences of life, but as He permits the lilies to grow in the fields, and notes the sparrow's fall, so He knows of our trials and sufferings and stands near when we call. One develops strength of character as he overcomes temptations and the storms of trial and difficulty.

Christians believe the Good Shepherd lives, and whatever He has done for people in the past He can do today. "I am the Good Shepherd" is spoken in the present tense. He is still the Good Shepherd in 1963.

Today as you go about your tasks, and meet the problems and perplexities which are common to all men, may the confidence and assurance of faith come to you as they are expressed in the 23rd Psalm. There are words to live by:

"The Lord is my shepherd, I shall not want. He maketh me to lie down in green pastures; He leadeth me beside the still waters. He restoreth my soul. He leadeth me in the paths of righteousness for His name's sake. Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil, for Thou art with me; thy rod and thy staff they comfort me. Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies; thou anointest my head with oil; my cup runneth over. Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life, and I will dwell in the house of the Lord forever."

Frosting On The Cake

By
"UNCLE DOC" ROSS — U.S.A.

It is way past time for someone who is interested in the truth to get up on his "hind legs" and sound off, but good, about the present day idiocy of "putting everyone on the shelf" at age 45 to 50. If there ever was a cockeyed phobia now poisoning the minds of supposedly smart top management of business, it is the idea that no one is a capable or "safe employe" after age 50.

Look at the record of men like Henry Ford and the Wright Brothers who just got started after 40. I travel constantly in my professional work and meet many amazing men and women at age 75 and older who are still very much on the job and doing far better work than any green man or woman can possibly do — all because they have been on the job long enough to know what they are about.

Everytime some so-called executive throws out a good set of brains or skills, just because of age, it costs money. Any personnel director who refuses to hire anyone for a new job at any age over 35 is just plumb crazy. Old and experienced experts still working up to age 85 on important, high-rated, skilled responsibilities, are still a far better investment than many youngsters, no matter how many diplomas they have.

To many young women are strictly husband hunting, and too many young men are scheming out a way to "meet and marry the boss' daughter," as the late and great Prof. Rogers said many years ago.

Any company that does careless hiring has no one to blame except its own personnel executives. Men and women who are in good health and whose records over the years are clean are most often the "better bargains."

TWO BIRTHDAYS

In February we remember the birthdays of our two greatest Americans. The one was father of our country, the other its savior.

George Washington sacrificed the ease and comfort of his plantation home at Mount Vernon to lead the ragged farmers, tradesmen and mechanics of the Continental Army against the disciplined ranks of the British. After hard-won victory he went home, but again yielded to the call of his countrymen and became our first President.

Abraham Lincoln was truly a man of the people, not an aristocrat as was Washington. He was the poor man's poor man, but had acquired enough for comfort by the time the people chose him for the White House.

Washington's problem was to build and launch a government fit to serve a nation destined to grow into what we have now, although none in his time could foresee entirely all of its greatness. As architect of military victory, he had to change hats to direct his able and dedicated helpers in building the structure of peace.

Lincoln's task was to preserve the national unity threatened by honest but misguided men who believed in state sovereignty over national. At first slavery was a secondary issue, with emancipation an incidental but inevitable result of Union victory.

Neither Washington nor Lincoln was a sophisticated intellectual. We could even say, perhaps, that neither was a genius in our sense of the word. But both knew and did their work, each in his time and place. Without them, would we have become the people we are today? Something to think about.

It says here . . .
When we need a man, he always appears.

Objects To 'Testing'

What sweetness exists in this world seems the development of innate springs of humanity, largely the province of the very young.

How much this quality of sweetness is damaged by injections of vitriol at the hands of the bitterly mature, is another matter.

The scope of the "testing" craze has now spread to the point of encroachment upon the time of student and teacher alike. The practice of entrusting the test material to the student leader is a twist in the direction of a junior spy system, a devious way of side-stepping the issue regarding responsibility for carrying on an unpopular program.

The currently illuminating discussions, regarding the controversial psychological "testing" practices in many of our schools, should be expanded to include those tests handed out in classes purporting to be English, French, or other classes, organized for the purpose of instruction.

Now that "comic-books" have been enlisted in the campaign to indoctrinate our younger generation in the benefits to be discovered in socialism, it seems only a matter of training for service is required of our children.

The relationship between parent and child is undergoing a shameful battering, it is about time we realize the truth of the warning voiced by J. Edgar Hoover: "Communist Target, Youth."

Time To Rewrite Law

The general public has been so busy chasing the almighty dollar, working night and day, and often both husband and wife work two or more jobs a day, so they demanded that merchants stay open an extra day each week (The Sabbath). If they believe the Word of God, they should be in the House of God on that day and not in a grocery store, drug store, hardware store, carry out, etc.

I agree with the harassed city and county officials (the present law, due to the above conditions is not only un-workable but can not honestly be enforced impartially. It must be completely rewritten by the Legislature and the bugs taken out of it by bringing it up to date with 1963 conditions.

Here are some musts: They should specify that if a merchant now observes some other day as the sabbath, he must close on what he now generally accepts as the sabbath. If he carries items prohibited by the new law (for sale on Sunday) he must close on the sabbath, no matter what day he considers it to fall on.

The new law must be positive in language and nothing left to the imagination of those interpreting it. They have shown by the mess they made of interpreting the old law, that they can't be trusted to an honest interpretation of any law. Let's demand that they re-write the present law in its entirety now!

Our Complacency Is Shattered Again

Just as our Defense Department's propaganda about the "relatively insignificant devastation" America would suffer in event of a nuclear war, plus the tremendous boost in national morale that came when we called Khrushchev's bluff on Cuba, had begun to lull me into complacency (I had even begun to think in terms of a possible normal future for my children), what happens?

Mao Tse-tung stokes up the flames in his great Red dragon.

McPeek

Like many people, until recently I hadn't paid much more attention to Mao's fumings than had the Russians. I was much more concerned about the long-range threat of Red China's mushrooming population.

I had figured that Mao's earlier rantings were designed to goad Russia into a nuclear war with America that would have left the Western world, including the Soviet Union, a helpless prey for eventual Chinese domination and provide the necessary additional lands to absorb the rapidly proliferating Chinese.

But the Russians made it clear, or so it seemed to me, that they weren't about to be duped into paving the bloody way for a world-wide chain of Chinese laundries.

Even Anastas Mikoyan, No. 1 trouble-shooter for Khrushchev, a few years ago tried to tell us this, I believe, when he confided that he saw Russia's future linked much closer to America, rather than with China.

But since the Cuba episode and subsequent softening of Russia's attitude, Mao's blasts of anger and challenge to Moscow's leadership of world communism have taken on the frenzied urgency of an old man who thinks he may not live long enough to see his cherished nightmare materialize.

Who among us doesn't shudder when the undisputed leader of more than an estimated 700 million fanatical followers spits out views such as:

"History has not witnessed a single example of peaceful transition from capitalism to socialism. Those who no longer distinguish between just and unjust wars have lapsed into the position of bourgeois pacifism. A war would inevitably end in the destruction of imperialism and the victory of socialism."

Earlier he was quoted, I forgot the exact words, as saying that he believed a few million Chinese lives would be a small price to pay for a communist victory.

And, as if that isn't terrifying enough, our government now tells us that Red China will develop atomic bombs within "a year or two," which probably means our government is trying to soften us for the shock that will come when the Chinese explode a test A-bomb within the very near future.

What worries me is what may happen when a man who not only is not appalled by war, but is downright anxious to create one, will do when he gets his claws on a couple of A-bombs.

It would be nice if someone could figure out how to shut China's big Red Mao—permanently.

Cites Volunteer Aid

The patients and staff of Columbus State Hospital wish to express appreciation for the part played by many friends in relation to our Christmas Party and Gift program. The Volunteer Service Council of Columbus State Hospital received wholehearted support in providing, for patients, many of the experiences traditionally associated with Christmas.

Special thanks go to the Franklin County Mental Health Association which undertook this project in your county. The chairman of the Christmas Committee was Mrs. Robert J. Nekervis, 4308 Lawnview-dr. Many other groups and individuals also gave support and personal effort.

Not only did groups of patients benefit by this concern on the part of citizens, but many received individual attention. All of this contributes to earlier recovery and return to normal life for many now hospitalized.

This expression of goodwill at Christmas, and in many ways throughout the year, is of lasting value.

'Little Miss Heart' To Greet Public At Fund Kick-Off

Patti Ann Cope, seven-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Cope, 199 Little Flower-ln, Whitehall, will be introduced to Franklin County residents as "Little Miss Heart" at kick-off ceremonies for the 1963 Heart Fund Campaign in Franklin County Thursday, Feb. 7, at 12:15 p.m. on the Statehouse grounds.

"Little Miss Heart" will greet Heart Fund volunteers and the general public on the west steps of the capitol building.

Patti underwent open heart surgery for an inborn heart defect when she was only two years and nine months old—the youngest local girl ever to have had an open heart operation performed here.

Others participating in the noonday ceremonies will be Woody Hayes, head football coach, Ohio State University, general chairman for the campaign; Dr. James V. Warren, president of the American Heart Association, several heart surgery patients; and campaign officials.

Featured will be the 93-voice freshman choir of Jones Junior High School, Upper Arlington, directed by Ray Vermilya.

Receipts received during Heart Month (February) support the activities of the Central Ohio Heart Association and its fight against heart attack, stroke, high blood pressure, inborn heart defects, and rheumatic fever.

"Little Miss Heart" was operated on at Children's Hospital by Howard D. Sirak, M.D., for a ventricular septal defect (hole between the lower chambers of the heart). In the course of regular check-ups, the pediatrician noted a heart murmer which led to further diagnosis.

Open heart surgery, which mends faulty hearts, is accomplished with the aid of the heart-lung pump, developed by heart-fund supported research.

LITTLE MISS HEART will be introduced to Franklin County residents during kick-off ceremonies for the 1963 Heart Fund Campaign at the Ohio Statehouse, Sunday, Feb. 17, at 12:15 p.m. The charming little lady, seven-year-old Patti Cope of 199 Little Flower-ln, Whitehall, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Cope. Patti is shown above, center, with her big sister Marsha, 13, left and her mother Mrs. Frank Cope. Patti attends Aetna Road School. Brother Ricky, 11, not shown, is also a student there.

The Aerie's Ritual and Drill team will assist in the initiation. All Eagles are cordially invited to attend the district meeting and initiation.

Refreshments and dancing will follow the meeting.

'Village' Aims To Please Anglers

A UNIQUE BUSINESS that has grown in popularity with a lot of fishermen is that of the Rowe Brothers Ice Fishing Village at North Bay, Ontario. Pictured here is the entrance to the village, a collection of individual fishermen's huts on the very thick ice of Lake Nippising, seven miles off shore near the Manitou Islands. Large pike, pickerel and white fish abound in the area and many fishermen who have found great delight in that section during the summer are now finding ice fishing and the hospitality of the Rowe Brothers an equally interesting experience. Transportation to the spot is provided by the specially-built Snowmobile. Lodging is available in nearby Lakeshore Drive motels. Even refreshments, in the form of fried fish, soup and hot coffee are available to the fishermen while he tries to lure the big ones through a hole in the ice.

TYPICAL ice fishing cottage and the Rowe Brothers Snowmobile. Information regarding this fishing spot and rates is available by contacting Loren Rowe, 276 Lakeshore, North Bay, Ontario.

Admit Attorney To Supreme Court Practice

Joseph J. Murphy, Columbus attorney, was admited to practice before the Supreme Court of The United States Thursday, Jan. 31.

Murphy, who resides with his family at 5397 Ivyhurst-dr, Pine Hills subdivision, was sponsored for admission by former Governor Michael V. DiSalle and James R. Burchfield, Columbus attorneys. Solicitor General Cox of Washington D. C. made the oral motion at the Bar while Murphy's wife, Virginia watched.

In the wide arena of the world, failure and success are not accidents as we so frequently suppose but the strictest justice. If you do your fair day's work, you are certain to get your fair day's wage in praise or pudding, whichever happens to suit your taste.—A. Smith

East Batters South; St. Marys Wins Pair

A LITTLE BIT BETTER—in the height department is East's Avery Godfrey (right), as he gets his fingertips on a field goal attempt by South's Marion Iverson Friday evening on the Bulldog court. Also hanging around to make matters more difficult for Iverson is the Tigers' Ed Waller (55).

South's Bulldogs battled state-ranked East on near-even terms for one period Friday night before the Tigers' height and speed advantage wore the Rebs down in a 70-54 decision.

The Bulldogs trailed only 18-10, after one period but East called on a tight defensive maneuver which, coupled with their lightning-quick fast break, sent South into the second half with an 18 point deficit.

Lloyd Pate sparked the Reb offense with 19 points while Fred McGhee supplemented the total with 13 additional markers. Four on East's starters finished in the double figures but big Ed Waller paced the Tiger scoring with 15 points and a bucket full of rebounds.

ST. MARYS added two more wins to a successful cage season over the weekend—keeping its flickering hopes a share of the County League title alive with a come-from-behind 54-52 win over Dublin Friday and topping Lancaster Fenwick, 66-53, Saturday evening in a non-leaguer.

Elsewhere in the County circuit, ineligibility-ridden Rosary got a double dose of Hamilton Township, dropping a pair to the Rangers, 64-42 Friday and 53-48 Saturday.

The Crusaders got off to a costly slow start Friday on the Ranger court and were never quite able to recover. Hamilton led, 28-14 at intermission. Jim Groce keyed the Green and White offense with 22 points.

ROSARY HAD MORE success shooting at the home nets the following evening, holding an eight-point advantage at halftime. The Rangers came out shooting in the third period, however, to pull ahead to stay, 41-40. Groce hit for 14 and Ed Roehrenbeck meshed 12 to lead the Crusaders scoring.

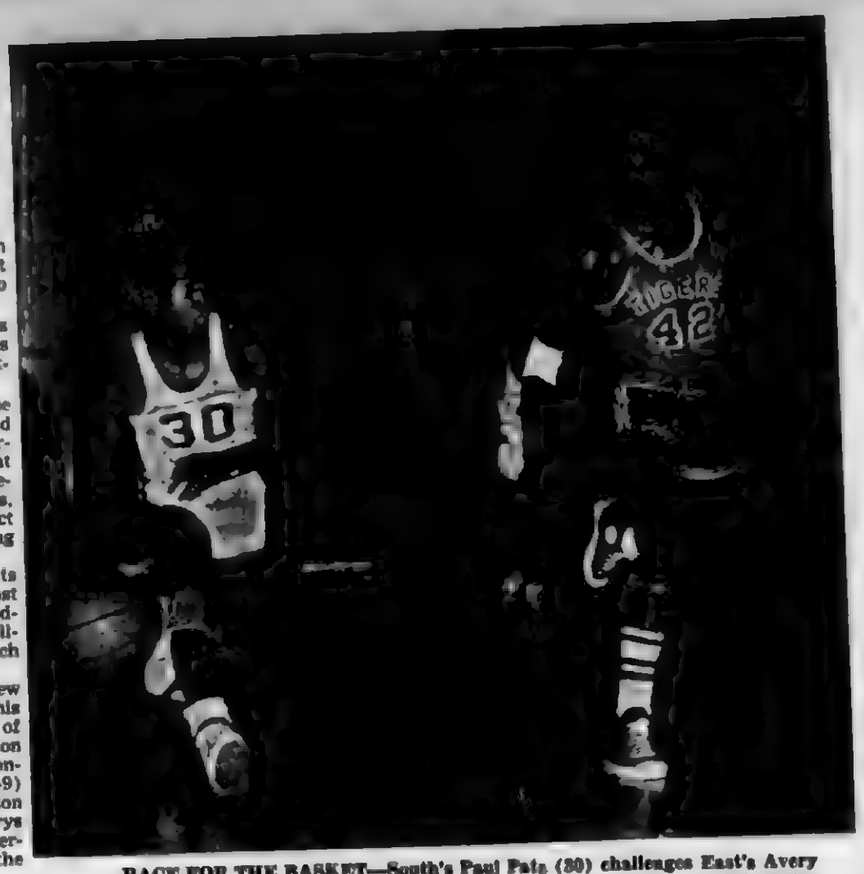
St. Marys played give and take with Dublin's scrappy Shamrocks for the better part of the game Friday before closing fast to nab the win.

Dublin led by six after one period and again by four after three periods before the Rams rolled up their sleeves and got down to winning. George Maurer topped all scorers with 24 points while Mike Gray notched 10 more.

THE ROAD to victory was a little less bumpy the following evening as the Rams jumped off to quick lead and made it hold up the rest of the way against Fenwick. Maurer's 27 markers once more set the pace with Bob Yates sinking an additional 12 points.

Marion-Franklin came up with one of the Red Devils finest efforts of the City League season Friday before bowing to North in the final eight minutes of play.

The Devils held a slight advantage for one half and entered the final period all even but the Polar Bears got a hot hand late in the game to emerge victorious.



Four of the M-F starters finished in the double figures with John Jackson's 18 markers showing the way.

AQUINAS TOOK IT on the chin twice over the weekend in a pair of thrillers. The Terriers battled Central right down to the wire Friday before losing out by three points, dropping a tight 54-52 verdict to Watterson the following evening.

Mike Welling's 23 points were tops for Aquinas against the Pirates while Tom Woodward split honors with Welling against the Eagles — each with 12 points.

ALL AREA TEAMS renew hardwood competition this weekend with a full slate of cage activity. Friday's action finds Linden (9-5) at Marion-Franklin (2-12), South (4-9) at Aquinas (7-7), Hamilton Township (7-6) at St. Marys (12-3) and Rosary (3-10) versus New Albany (2-15) at the Catholic Center.

Three additional games are on tap for Saturday evening as South entertains North (6-5), Rosary hosts Reynoldsburg (5-9) at the Catholic Center and St. Marys closes out regular season play by hosting UNBEATEN University.

RACE FOR THE BASKET—South's Paul Pate (30) challenges East's Avery Godfrey (42) to a foot race as the Bulldog cager drives for the basket Friday night. Pate managed to elude Godfrey but found some addjtional opposition in the form of the Tiger cager's teammates closer to the basket. East defeated the Rebs in a City League encounter, 70-64, to maintain its league-leader position.

Come On Fellows— Call Off The Feud For Valentines Day

Pro football, apparently unwilling to be elbowed out of the sports headlines by competing basketball news, hung onto its share of the spotlight last week as bed-ridden Jim Taylor reopened some old wounds by taking another verbose punch at that fuzzied image of the New York Giants—Mr. Sam Huff.

Sam, never one to slink away from a rebuttal, replied in so many words that his public image was being unduly tainted by Taylor's unkind oratory.

IN PRE-TELEVISION days, this kind of feud was usually endearing to the heart, reputation and wallet of a well-known sporting figure. Established stars like Babe Ruth, Jim Thorpe and Battling Siki supplemented box office appeal with their varied off-the-field antics.

But not so today in a world where now every second baseman is clean-shaven, all NBA guards wear only the finest swim suits and every pro-football end engages in the Vitalis 60-second workout.

The competition for that gleaming TV commercial smile has become about as firce as preserving that starting spot afield.

IMAGINE THEN the "fading image" problem confronting Sam Huff each time Taylor tags him as some kind of a "dirty old man."

Mr. Huff, all milk and sugar, currently is involved in a cute little breakfast food commercial that depicts him as that nice veteran pro fooball player next door who probably would not even kick tires on a used car lot.

Taylor, who as far as we know isn't involved in any "image" commercials, simply doesn't have the problem so the feud probably isn't cutting down his trips to the bank.

Maybe the whole idea is rather trite but then what American mother would want her pint-sized litle leaguer stuffing down the same "Sugar Wheats" that "some dirty old man" eats to sustain his rough-house tactics on the gridiron.

BUT WAIT A minute, this week shouldn't be cluttered up with feuds and the like. In keeping with the spirit of the season (Valentine's Day), we would like to dedicate the following humble offering to those unsung bench warmers who really make the game tick.

They're the only sporting link we could find to help commemorate this particular edition. Our only other association with Valentine's Day was some action that took place in a Chicago garage a few years back but we guess that was rather one-sided and certainly not very sporting.

HERE GOES:

When sports wags set their minds to words
To sound the praise of warriors brave,
We wonder how they can neglect
The gals the guys enslave.

For where, we ask, in this fair land,
Where ever sports are played,
Is there a lack of female fervor
That never dims or fades?

For fame can flee and glory die
On diamond, field or court,
But there's one that's always waiting
With loving, stout support.

Whether mom or wife or girl friend,
You'll find she's always there
When games are won or games are lost
To give or take a share.

Dinners are reheated,
To dances always late,
She keeps her temper and her poise,
And just accepts her fate.

Who's there for every brooding coach
To lend attentive ear.
Or after that black Friday night,
To quiet "benching" fear.

Enduring smoky, replay meetings
Providing ego shove,
Enduring locker room aroma,
Believe me, men—THAT'S LOVE!

Main, Kennys Deadlocked In Center Loop

Main Auto Parts defeated a hard fighting Duratile team with a 51-49 overtime win to remain undefeated in league play.

The score was tied 45 all at the end of regulation time. Main led all through the game until the fourth quarter when Duratile scored 19 points to knot the contest.

The three-minute overtime saw Bob Swedlow hit two field goals for the Mainmen. The overtime period ended as a Duratile shot bounced on the rim and fell out.

Kenny's Loan had no trouble with an undermanned Ontario team as they scored a resounding 87 to 34 win.

Bill Mackin again led the Loan men with 27 points. Sandy Solomon and Stan Robbins chipped in with 20 points each in the rout.

Howard Banchefsky led with six field goals for 12 points.

Bonnie Builders, led by Herb Gradner's 16 points, ran over Raybo Vending with a 64-39 win. Preston Gurwin hit for 15 points in the Bonnie attack.

Buster - Because - I - Think-You're - A - Square" type.

This can be the most dangerous approach of all, obviously, since the possibility of stepping on feelings already honed sensitive by the spirit of the season is very great.

The consensus of opinion is that this final category be used as little as possible. Even if you think the guy's a clod, it's only proper and fitting that you accept his gift with a smile, flutter your fake eyelashes at him for not less than 20 seconds before going on your not-so-merry way.

Which brings up another point. The rules for Valentine acceptance, of course, can be relaxed considerably when opening ones sent through the mail. However, have a word of praise ready when you meet the bashful bundle on the street or at the office.

Now, here's a list of some "don'ts" ruled out by our panel of experts, when it comes to opening Valentines:

• Don't tear the card in little pieces right in front of his saddened eyes.

• Don't fall all over yourself thanking him. Danger here is he might think you were really desperate for his card and that you seldom get other ones.

• Don't say, "Land sakes! I got one like this from Poopsie just the other day."

• Don't smack him in the face with a left jab, regardless of the message.

Armed with this advanced preparation, you'll be the hit of any Valentine gathering. It's even better than knowing how to play the piano.

was honored by the YMCA for his service to activities for youth. He was given an award by M. V. "Cap" Hoover, former YMCA executive secretary, for his efforts.

At the award presentation, Hoover recognized Becker by saying:

"Ed has given countless hours of volunteer service in the construction and improvement of Y-Park and has been continuing such service throughout the planning and construction of the new South Side YMCA building."

This, in itself, is much more than many men do—civic-improvement-wise—in a lifetime. But to Ed Becker it's all in a day's work.

I believe that this is the largest ranch home in Whitehall. There are about 3,200 square feet of living space on one floor; one of the three bedrooms is 18x24 feet and the living room is 15x30 feet and carpeted with parquet floors plus a 14x18 library off one side of the living room. Huge kitchen has eating space and there is also a dining room. Two full baths. Outside there is a lot just a little under an acre with many tall trees. Very convenient location close to Town and Country and bus. Price is unbelievably low and far less than reproduction cost Call me and I'll be glad to show it to you.

MOLING AND MANSFIELD
. . . Or, Body Guarding Made Easy

DOWN, BOY!

Like To Be A Body Guard For Jayne Mansfield? He Was!

By JERRY WOLFROM

When lovely Jayne Mansfield needs a body guard on her visits to Ohio, her agents pick up the phone and dial 237-7433 on Columbus East Side.

They talk to a man named Richard Moling who operates one of the most successful private-eye enterprises in this part of th country and are assured that the star will be safe from exuberant autograph seekers, among other things.

To Moling, president of Moling and Associates, 2487 E. Main-st, it's all in a day's work.

His detective bureau has insured the safety of many of the world's famous personalities during their public appearance jaunts through the Buckeye state.

Moling's staff has served as body guards for such notables as Les Paul and Mary Ford and other TV stars. Most recently, they served as guards for members of the Cleveland Browns football team even though these hulking athletes would be the last persons expected to need protection.

Moling, who also serves as general manager of the rapidly expanding investigation and guard service, coordinates projects to guarantee the safety of personalities throughout the state.

Moling, with a staff of about 100, has broken the organization into two districts — the Northern Ohio district and the Southern Ohio District.

The president is a 15-year veteran in investigation work and has attended a number of schools, clinics, and seminars on criminal investigation.

Several of the Moling staff are experienced in polygraph (lie detection) work, and have aided law enforcement agencies in solving several Ohio murder cases.

Recently the agency was responsible for the guarding of the famous Woolco diamonds ($2 million) when they were exhibited in Columbus. In addition, Moling's men regularly are employed by the U.S. Trotting Association during Ohio State Fair Week.

"We often serve on fire check projects all over the state," Moling said.

Moling is past president of the Ohio Association of Private Detective Agencies and currently serves as safety director of Whitehall. He is also a member of the Council of International Investigators.

His wife, Jean, is secretary-treasurer of the firm.

Alternative In Feed Grain Program Told By Economist

Participation in the 1963 Feed Grain Program depends on diversion from the feed grain base acreage, according to Dr. Wallace Barr, OSU extension ecoriomist.

The alternatives for diversions are:

(1) A minimum of 20 per cent of the feed grain base must be diverted to conserving use to participate.

(2) Above 20 per cent and up to 40 per cent (or 25 acres, which ever is larger) of the acreage base may be diverted.

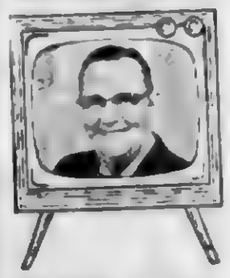
(3) On small farms where the feed grain base is 25 acres or less the entire acreage may be diverted.

Farmers participating are eligible for direct payments, loans, and diversion payment, according to Dr. Barr.

The direct payment of 18 cents a bushel for corn, 29 cents a hundredweight for grain sorghum and 14 cents a bushel for barley apply to the normal production of acreages of feed grain planted for harvest.

All participating farms receive this payment, whether fed, sold or placed under loan.

Price support loans and purchase agreements in the U.S. will average as follows:



Corn, $1.07 a bushel ($1.12 in Ohio); grain sorghum, $1.71 a hundredweight; barley, 82 cents a bushel; oats, 65 cents a bushel, and rye, $1.07 a bushel.

Church Group In Movie Clean-Up 'Crusade'

By JOHN AUBLE, JR.

A church-affiliated group of young people, going under the name of "Crusaders," is making a big attempt this month to show the movie industry what the public wants in films.

The "Crusaders," 18-26-year olds from Broad Street Methodist Church, are entering into the challenge for a movie "clean-up" in their long-range efforts to learn to live better lives.

"We are not trying to clean up the movie industry as such," said Mrs. David Skeen, wife of the Broad-st church pastor. "This, at any rate, is not our long-range view.

"We're trying to teach youth to live better Christian lives and smut movies are just one thing that we feel a necessity to do something about."

In this direction, the "Crusaders" have bought out the New Main Theater, on E. Main-st, and are selling tickets for a movie entitled "Whistle Down The Wind," a suspense thriller starring English actress Haley Mills.

The movie is not religious in nature. It is certainly not a classic in movie-making but it is, as these young people see it, the type of film that the public wants and are thus setting it up as an example.

Much has been said in the Hartley Newspapers about the sex and violence that has been dirtying theater screens across the country. The "Crusaders" are taking the same view.

What makes this effort particularly significant is the fact that this is the first ime a church group has ever endorsed a film and actively participated in promoting it.

Perhaps Student Chairman David Conlin summed it up best by saying, "If we encourage better pictures, we'll get better ones."

The "Crusaders," who have obviously given much thought and consideration to this precedent-setting venture, emphasized the fact that they are "not condemning films" but, rather, "just crusading for better motion pictures."

This group is, make no mistake, not making any moves to tear down the industry . . . an industry which is as much of an American tradition as apple pie.

"This movie we're endorsing," according to student leader David Sullivan, "is being singled out as an example to the movie industry of the type of film the public is demanding."

Of main concern to these workers are movies to attend on dates. Usually, groups of this type are concerned with the corruption of the moral standards of youngsters.

"Naturally, we hope to have children some day and we take the long-range view," commented Sharon Noftz. "But, right now, we're concerned with films suitable for kids of our age to see when dating."

They said there are "very few" movies suitable to attend on dates. The boys mentioned the fact that "some girls take a dim view of a boys' character if he takes her

Cooperative Association Sets 'Goal-Drafting' Next Monday

John Maloney, president pro-tem of the South Side Cooperative Association, has issued a statement drafting the "goals and objectives" of this new South Side civic organiation.

The list will be acted upon at a meeting of "South Side neighbors" slated for Monday, Feb. 18, at St. Ladislas School, 277 Reeb-av, at 7:30 p.m.

A six paragraph statement preceeds the list and was presumably written by Maloney. It reads:

"Neighbors in the South Side say bitterly, 'When no other part of town wants it, we get in the South end.' "

There is a sense of an area running down, showing more and more blight-slipping, with nothing to hold the erosion.

What is the answer?

Some move. Some wish they could move. Some just complain.

There are others, however, who want to remain in the South end. For us it is home and community.

We are willing to work together, to take responsibility for seeking change in a positive direction.

The 12-goal list reads as follows:

1 To make the South Side a better place in which to live, to work, and raise children.

2 To free the South Side of blight spots and deterioration.

3 To help keep private homes and public property attractive and in good repair.

4 To seek more adequate recreational and cultural facilities.

5 To bring neighbors together to work at solving their common problems.

6 To work for neighborhood stability and growth so that people will want to live in the South Side.

7 To work for adequate housing at reasonable rentals for the tenants of the South Side. To end exorbitant rentals for sub-standard housing.

8 To make South Side a place of neighborliness, equality, opportunity, and fair play.

9 To build neighborhood solidarity and community spirit.

10 To enlist the cooperation of existing industry in making the South Side attractive both in industrial and living space.

11 To create the kind of community which will attract preferred industrial developments to the South Side.

12 To work for local ordinances and inspections to remove eyesores created in non-preferred industries and thus enhance the appearance of areas where such industries now exist.

Advertising Paid Off

Coca Cola men of this area were guests of their company at a big wing-ding Saturday at North High School and it brings to mind that this little item that you can buy in some places for less than a dime today is sold in 119 countries around the globe, the most widely distributed article in the world.

And it all came about through constant advertising. Back from the time the first bottle was produced, that name has appeared time and time again in newspapers, magazines and any way it could be advertised.

President of the company, Dick Renspie, speaking here Saturday, points out that the business climate is extremely healthy. He points out that the original 13 colonies made up the first common market and that tax barriers between states did not work.

High-Speed Chase Nets Two Teens

A stolen truck, driven by two teenage boys, led police on a high-speed chase down S. High-st through the center of Columbus early Friday.

Patrolmen said the truck speed reached 85 m.p.h. as it raced through the Broad-st intersection.

The boys were arrested at 1:15 a.m. near Hartman Farms, south of Columbus, when the engine of their truck burned out. The chase began at W. First-av and Perry-st some 10 minutes earlier.

The boys missed death or injury at S. High-st and Frank-rd by inches, as a semi-truck entered the intersection from the west side, officers reported.

The boys escaped the accident by going between the truck and a utility pole.

Delinquency charges have been filed in Juvenile Court against a W. Rich-st boy in connection with the incident.

A McDowell-st lad pleaded innocent Saturday in Municipal Court to an auto theft charge and was released on $5,000 bond. The case was continued until Thursday.

For Sweethearts

Corpus Christi Athletic Association will sponsor a "Sweetheart Ball" Saturday, (Feb. 16), from 9 to 12 p.m. in the Social Hall, Deshler and Studer-avs. Admission is $2 per couple with tickets at the door. Rush Smith's orchestra furnishes the music with Rush Thomas calling the square dancing.

'Variety' To Spice Life At South High School On Saturday Night

By BONNIE CANFIELD and LAUREN WERLING

It'll be VARIETY (in capital letters) Saturday night at South High School.

Under the sponsorship of the instrumental music department, "Showtime '63" will hit the footlights at 8 p.m. Feb. 16 in South High auditorium.

The show is divided into two acts — the first featuring a variety of acts (all student talent) and the second is South High's version of the stage hit "West Side Story."

The entire production is under the direction of instrumental music head Howard Cozart, vocal director Max Bunker and dramatics instructor William Wilt.

First phase line-up goes like this.

South High band opens up with "Everything's Coming Up Roses," danced by Anna Dills, Sue and Gloria Thompson. The "Young Folk" singers then take the spotlight. They include Jim Westlake, Marc Werling, Tom Ewing (guitars) and Paul Lofton (bass).

Next is the exciting magic feats of Larry Dunning and his "Magic Zombie" routine. This is followed by the Mickey Simmons Quintet and the Marc Werling Trio.

Judy Miller does a vocal number and pert Sandy Matheny does a tap dance to "Cinamon Kisses" played by the entire South High band.

Other acts include "The Great Pretenders" pantomine by Phil Spohn and Jim Robinson, music by the Renegades (Ralph Denny, Jay Young, Bob Castle and Tom Flockin) and a pantomine of "I Enjoy Being A Girl" by Barbara Druggan.

The second half, "West Side Story," will feature the opening, gym and balcony scenes from the Broadway musical. Leading characters in this include Donna Cunningham, Tom Ewing, Alan Cook, Jerry Peters and Barbara Druggan.

Admission is 50-cents for students and 75 cents for adults. Tickets available at the door.

Lawwill To Talk About Heimendale

Heimandale School will be the main area of discussion tonight Thursday) when J. Richard Lawwill, superintendent of Parks and Forestry, makes his first appearance before the Council of South Side Organizations.

The meeting will be held in the new South Side Branch YMCA, 190 Southwood-av, at 7:30 p.m., according to President Mike Mileusnich.

"There have been proposals for development of Heimandale for some time," Lawwill commented. "We think we'll pick up the idea and see what we can do for it."

Lawwill said he has a committee studying the problem and feels that a school-park set-up would "work well" in the area. Parks and Forestry has developed 15 such school-park complexes throughout the city.

The reason Lawwill's department is interested, he says, is because the Columbus School Board is requesting Parks and Forestry to see what arrangements can be made.

Besides Heimandale, Lawwill expects to present a summary of the parks program in the South Side area, highlighted by the development of Schiller and Southview sites.

He'll also discuss the 11.5 acre Stockbridge land acquisition.

Dance Dated Friday At South YMCA

Friday, Feb. 22, the South Side Branch YMCA Young People's Inter-Church Council will sponsor a round and square dance from 8 to 11 p.m. Proceeds will go toward furnishing the new South Side "Y" building.

The dance wil be held at the new "Y" building, located at 190 Southwood-av.

Jim Wagner, executive secretary, will call the square dancing. There will be a small donation taken from those with a full South Side YMCA membership.

GRA-Y CLUBBERS TO SELL MINTS

That "hint of mint" will fill the South Side air beginning Friday, Feb. 15, and South Side YMCA Gra-Y Clubbers hope it'll develop into the sweet smell of sucess.

The 19 Gra-Y clubs, associated with the South Side Branch YMCA, will join Gra-Y clubbers throughout the area in selling the annual boxes of thin mints—a community and world-wide service project.

According to Robert Davis, associate executive secretary at the South "Y," more than 550 boys and girls will be knocking on doors in the fund-raising effort.

The sale ends Monday, Feb. 25.

New Dramatic Group Set-Up At Schiller

Every Wednesday evening, at 7:30, there will be new dramatic group meetings at Schiller Park, according to director Tom Crawshaw.

Any teen interested in acting, stagecraft, set designing or backstage property work should contact Ruth Ann Marriott at Schiller, Crawshaw added.

The meetings are to teach more about the theater and dramatics, Miss Marriott said. The groups will, eventually, stage plays of their own, also.

THIRD IN SERIES

Industrious Olbert Now Heading 'Y's' Membership Drive

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the third in a series of articles written to better acquaint residents with the South Side YMCA — its work and its leaders. The new "Y," at 190 Southwood-av, is currently staging a membership drive to help furnish the building and it's hoped that these notes will help show the drive's worthiness).

Just like at grandma's, there's always room for one more in the busy schedule of Kenneth Olbert whose main duty is administering operations at Barrett Junior high school.

Olbert typifies South Side YMCA workers, who always seem be able to manage a new project in a fast-paced schedule that would leave even a Marine sergeant panting.

Most recent duty assumed by Olbert is that of membership chairman for the South Side "Y." He'll head the drive designed to beef-up the "Y's" roster and aid in the building's furnishing fund.

This membership campaign is the first organized membership effort of the branch for participating enrollment in its 45-year history .

"The campaign date has not been set," Olbert ex-

Peggy Estep, Charles Gray Repeat Vows

MR. AND MRS. CHARLES L. GRAY

Southwood Church of Christ was the scene of the wedding of Miss Peggy Jean Estep, daughter of Rev. and Mrs. Jackson Estep, 150 S. Warren-av, and Mr. Charles L. Gray, son of Mrs. Emma Gray, 48 E. Welch-av, and the late Mr. George Gray.

Rev. Ellis Werner read the double-ring, candlelight wedding service at 5:30 p.m., Jan. 12.

The bride chose a gown of mira mista taffeta, designed with a scooped neckline outlined with Alencon lace and seed pearls, molded bodice and three-quarter length sleeves. The skirt, with bell-shaped front, was accented with an apron of Alencon lace and seed pearls, with a fan-pleated back forming a short train.

Her shoulder-length veil with lace trim was caught to a crown of pearls and sequins, and she carried a bouquet of white carnations, bridal wreath and a white orchid on a white Bible.

Mrs. Harold Gray, sister-in-law of the bridegroom, served as matron of honor, and bridesmaids were Miss Sharon Coffman and Miss Rose Newsome.

They wore gowns of sapphire blue satin with bell-shaped skirts and scooped necklines with bodices of nylon over satin. Each wore white satin accessories and carried pink variegated carnations over eucalyptus foliage.

Junior bridesmaids were Miss Patty Ann Estep and Miss Freddie Jean Herron, sister and cousin of the bride. They wore gowns of pink Alcenon lace and nylon over taffeta, with pink satin headbands, and carried bouquets identical to those carried by the bridesmaids.

Mr. Harold Gray served as best man for his brother, and ushers were Mr. Lloyd Gray, brother of the bridegroom and Mr. Gordon Bartee.

A reception followed the ceremony at the church.

The new Mrs. Gray was graduated from South High School and is employed by Grange Mutual Casualty Co. Mr. Gray was also graduated from South High School and is serving with the U.S. Air Force as airman second class, stationed at Kinchelo AFB, Mich.

Mrs. Gray is living at 466 S. High-st until she joins her husband.

Soap Box Derby Plans Announced

Columbus boys will have the opportunity this summer to take part in the biggest Soap Box Derby yet, the 1963 running of the famous All-American coasting classic.

An official race franchise has been awarded to Columbus by All-American Soap Box Derby headquarters in Detroit.

For the second year the race, which will determine the city's representative in the national championship, will be sponsored by the Columbus Jaycees, local Chevrolet dealers and WLW-C. The race will be held July 13.

At stake for the young pilots of their small, self-built, gravity propelled racers will be $30,000 in college scholarship awards.

The Soap Box Derby is open to all school boys 11 through 15 years of age, inclusive. Any boy of qualified age living in the Greater Columbus area may enter the local race by registering with a parent or guardian. Youngsters will receive a free copy of the 1963 Soap Box Derby rule book and a brochure explaining the program.

Among prizes to be awarded the local champ are a $500 savings bond, a championship trophy and an all-expense paid trip to Akron to take part in the All-American.

Complete details of the 1963 race, including the site and schedule of clinics and other preliminary events, will be announced later.

Teen Death Deplorable

Some of Columbus' best known people gathered at Gladden Community House, Monday night just as they do once every year to hear annual reports . . . traditionally happy ones.

It could have been that way this year — except for last Saturday night. A 17-year-old boy died in the street that night in front of the settlement house. The boy was stabbed. This "West Side Story" took place not in gang-infested New York, but in Columbus, Ohio.

The homicide was a tragic ending to a Valentine dance. It seemed to be a spontaneous thing — some youths from the other side of town began mingling on the dance floor. Then came a challenge, a dispute and an order to leave. Suddenly "automobilized" youth appeared from everywhere. So did police. But before the crowd could be dispersed a swift knife slashed down a life.

The hard working personnel at Gladden House deserve the greatest sympathy and understanding in this crisis. Their determined efforts to "do something nice" for boys and girls growing up in a chore-free, too-often — Godless existence is commendable. They certainly didn't deserve the death-black headlines that swept across Page 1 of the Sunday paper.

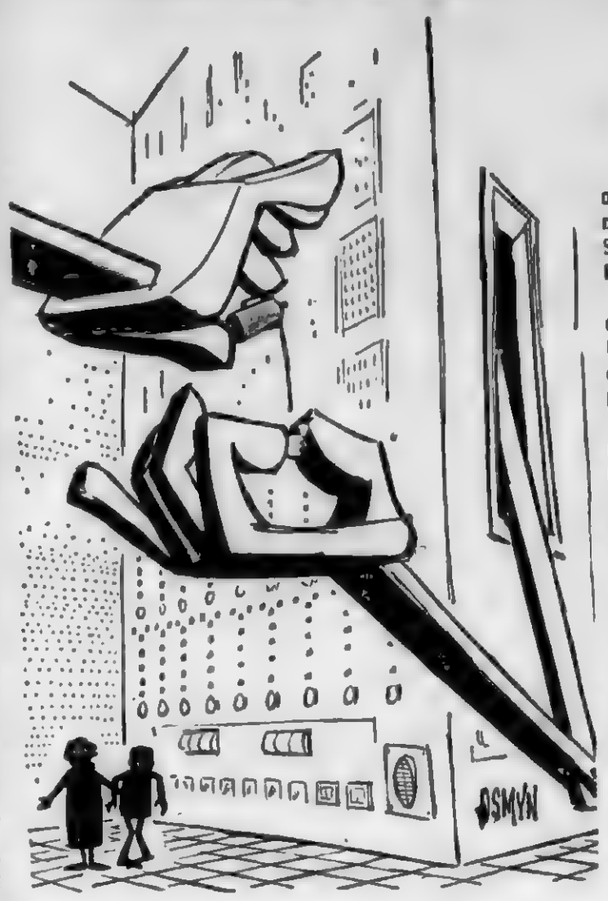
Our long and close association with Gladden's trained social workers has made us familiar with their careful, conscientious planning. They seldom publicize a teen dance loudly, hoping to keep trouble-seeking outsiders out. Chaperones are firm and effective. But Saturday night was too much. The heart and spirit of St. Valentine was punctured, bled and died.

We hope the tragedy will not discourage the gallant people of Gladden in their good works. And while we're hoping, let's insist that: parents must keep their youngsters from trouble-hunting migrations across town; organized youth gangs must never get a start in our area; and especially that Feb. 9's West Side story must never be repeated!

Public Won't Buy Criticism

A woman we know says she's always shopped her community merchants before she made any large purchases for her home or family. But she vows she's ready to reconsider the wisdom of this — and the reason may surprise some of our small business friends.

"It's not because the local businessman can't equal the downtown boys in value and price — they can. It's the occasional bad taste of their sales technique that's driving me away," she frowned.



It seems that twice recently she had to listen to her "frenzied neighborhood dealer" (the term is hers) devote most of his sales pitch to what is wrong with his competitor's product, instead of giving the plusses of his own merchandise. "I came out of one neighborhood store reeling with the faults of the competitor's brand, but without a single substantial reason why the product I'd just seen should be the one I buy," she said.

In another instance our distressed damsel relates," "I fidgited for 20 minutes while the local man figured how a downtown store was probably trying to cheat me on a custom home furnishings estimate. I'd much rather have heard more about why he thought his store could do a top-notch job for me."

No doubt comparison shopping is important to the small retailer. But he should expend his own energy, not the customer's, exploring it.

It's time to "accentuate the positive" in sales tactics. Bombarding the consumer with derogatory data about the competition won't eliminate anything — unless it's that customer's faith in the integrity of her neighborhood retailer.

"It Always Forgets the Sugar!"

Variety . . . by I. F. Howell

VALENTINE

This is the time when hearts entwine,
When your love and mine I hope combine,
So I'll be yours if you'll be mine,
Remembering Saint Valentine.

Perhaps we should not destroy too many of our illusions, for the pleasant ones help us live more enjoyably. But here are some facts about St. Valentine's Day, according to the Encyclopedia Brittanica.

According to legend, probably based on historical facts, there were two saints named Valentine. One was a Roman priest who suffered martyrdom during the persecutions of the Emperor Claudius (A.D. 41-54). He was buried on the Flaminian Way.

The other was a bishop of Interamna (Terni), martyred also in Rome, and whose relics were also translated to Rome.

It is possible that these two stories spring from the same original account, referring to only one person.

St. Valentine's Day as a lovers' festival, the choice of a valentine, and the modern development of sending valentine cards — all this actually has nothing to do with any saints' lives. These customs rather seem to be connected with the pagan Roman festival of the Lupercalia, which took place about the middle of February, or with the early spring season in general.

The origin of St. Valentine's Day customs is less important than their observance. Expressions of love, serious or not, may help balance the scales against too much hatred.

It says here. . . .

A love note outweighs a curse.

Decisions Should Please God, Overrule Self

Genesis 13: 8-13: And Abraham said to Lot, "Let there be no strife between you and me,—if you take the left hand I will go to the right, or if you take the right hand then I will go to the left." Lot lifted up his eyes and saw that the Jordan valley was well watered everywhere like the garden of the Lord, — and Lot chose for himself all the Jordan valley—.

Decisions! They must be made every day, and life is the result of those decisions.

Today's problems grow out of yesterday's decisions. Lot's decision was one of greed for wealth, regardless of his family's exposure to idolatry, immorality, and all types of evil. Abram's decision on the other hand was the way of peace, allowing God to direct his pathway and life.

Rev. Lindemuth

Robert Louis Stevenson said, "Every man sooner or later sits down to a banquet of consequence." The wise man therefore tries to foresee the consequence of his actions. He looks beyond the present. Life is like a stick — you cannot pick up one end without picking up the other end as well. If a man is selfish in his thoughts and motives, a smog already dims his view of the real purpose of life and of the end result. He cannot see beyond himself and the earthly smog stifles his spiritual life.

Each of us has stood at one time or another on some high peak and with awe looked off into the distance and has seen things never seen before — from Mt. Pleasant, Clingman's Dome, Lookout Mountain, Harney Peak, Pike's Peak. It is the unselfish soul, the Christian who is able to climb to the top of a mount of transfiguration and there see beyond himself for the first time. He begins to see others, they mean something to him, it is a new dawn, a new day. He is even able to see tomorrow, the future, and a new generation. He sees his purpose in life in relation to others and to God.

The Christian must ask himself these questions, "Is the way I choose pleasing to God? Do I live for Jesus or for myself alone? The things I choose, the things I do, what effect do they have on my fellowman, my family, my community, and my country? What will my choice, my action mean to the coming generation?"

To refuse to open our eyes and see the end results is deadly. "Where there is no vision the people perish." Anyone who looks only at his own feet is sure to stumble. It is the projected and perfected vision that will reveal the end result. Yet even in this our day there are those in positions of power, prominence, and responsibility who have eyes and do not see — ears have they and do not hear the warning rumblings of the effects of their selfish bad choices.

May more and more of the leaders of our great country unselfishly look beyond at the end results upon society, and be led to make right decisions, "a choice pleasing to God."

Leftovers . . . by John McPeek

Speaking Of Grim Fiery Tales . . .

RELAX! RELAX!

Everywhere we turn, some self-styled expert in the art of staying loose is exhorting us to relax. Newspapers and magazines swamp us with advice on how to relax — usually written by some fellow who in a previous edition authored a piece such as "How to Entertain Ulcers at Dinner."

McPeek

Okay, so I want to relax. I read all the articles. I heed the advice with grateful tears. I slump about the house with the rigidity of a piece of spaghetti. I smile warmly when I read about DeGaulle ripping h - - - out of European unity. I roll gleefully on the floor when my spouse scorches the collar of my best shirt.

I chuckle when I read an article describing the theoretical devastation a 50-megaton hydrogen bomb would wreak on Cleveland. I roar delightedly when my boss shucks off last-minute extra work on me. I scoff humorously when I read about the continued build-up of Communist arms in Cuba. I grin idiotically when the kids punch pencil holes in the vinyl seats of the breakfast set. I give friendly waves to the highway cowboy who curses me for my stupidity in stopping for a stop sign.

It works. I have no more tension than a marshmallow lying in the sun. I'm calm, peaceful, relaxed, and totally lovable. My wife, my kids, my boss, one and all they adore me for my new-found passivity.

So what happens? Some jerk kid over in Japan props up a $20 homemade telescope in his backyard and discovers a new comet.

That does it! I'm a quaking mass of frazzled nerve ends, racked with fears. What great evil will beset us?

Since antiquity the discovery of a comet has portended death, plague, pestilence, famine, war.

Listen to the skeptics: "What's this nut wailing about?"

So what about Julius Caesar? A new comet zipped across the skies just as Julie's buddies and enemies put their plumed helmets together and plotted his demise.

Yeah, and not too many years later, what about Emperor Vespasian and the comet that heralded his death? Vespasian, a bullheaded Roman, maintained that the comet had some other significance since it had a "hairy tail" and he was bald, but how come he went ahead and kicked off . . . later?

And we don't have to go back to the Roman Empire to see some of the nasty things that happened on the tail of comets. America, especially New England, has had many unhappy cometary experiences.

In 1652 a comet appeared just at the moment the Rev. John Cotton, the "Patriarch of New England" and a founder of Congregationalism in America, fell ill, and it disappeared at his death.

Only 10 years later, the wicked inhabitants of Boston were warned by a new comet to quit horsing around and abstain from "voluptuousness and abuse of good creatures by licentiousness in drinking and fashions in apparel."

Well right off the good Bostonians stepped up their witch and book burning activities. Some years later they tired of burning witches (you see one burn, you've seen them all) and concentrated on burning books, possibly because there were fewer complaints from survivors than those voiced by relatives of witches . . . and possibly because there were few book readers in Boston then.

What with the advent of stricter fire safety laws, even book burning lost much of its appeal. But some diehards, reluctant to give up their fun, switched to banning books, which has continued as one of the city's favorite hobbies.

So there, skeptics. How can you be so blind as to mock the peril posed by this new comet?

Let's not forget that although the comet was first sighted by 19-year-old Kaoru Ikeya in Japan, it happened just as the 88th Congress was getting under way.

And if there's one thing a new Congress doesn't need, it's some stupid omen flitting around over their heads.

Black Panther? Naw, It's Just February

INSIDE ON THE Outdoors By ROD COCHRAN

Well, I've resisted it for as long as possible, but it apparently is time to comment on the furred monsters roaming these parts.

For several weeks a "black panther" has been reported from several locations in Pickaway, Madison and Union counties. Some strange tracks "big as a man's hand" were sighted on the snow at Hoover Reservoir.

What with the international situation the way it is, spring a good two months off and income tax time to boot, it just seems like too much to worry ourselves about imminent attack from a mysterious beast. Yet, our ancestors worried about such things, for good reason, and perhaps we have inherited a liking for a good story. In any event, it's that time of year — a couple of years or so ago it was a "bear" in western Franklin County. Oddly enough it was February when it was "seen" if my memory is accurate.

This is all great fun for me, for I was brought up on such stories over in Muskingum County. This is real "bear story country" and everyone joins into the game every few years. Posses are formed and airplanes search from the sky. A good bear hunt is better than the county fair, and no one's enthusiasm is ever dampened because a bear has never been shot, or even seen.

So I listen with interest about every detail of the black panther. What could be more exciting? Even non-sportsmen perk up their ears when you start talking about a black panther. If you can speak knowledgeably about black panthers, you are in demand today. But don't rest in your popularity, for soon it will be spring, fish will be hitting and golf courses will open. The black panther will disappear with the last of the snow, only to be reincarnated next February as a wolf, bear or something worse.

Fun is fun, but what are the facts? The only thing to expect in nature is the unexpected, so there could be a black panther. But, since such critters are not native to this part of the world, it would have had to escape from somewhere. These are very valuable animals, and no zoo, circus or traveling medicine show would "lose" one without reporting it. So as far as I'm concerned there is no black panther running loose in Central Ohio. The same goes for large, monstrous snakes. Yes, pythons and boa constrictors make good February stories too, and I'm not joking when I say that I've heard them.

What, then, makes the tracks in the snow? Several things. Men make some of them for jokes. A Delaware County man told me he knows two fellows who took a bear's paw they brought back from Canada, and made bear tracks in the mud along Whetstone Creek. Fortunately, it was not bear season — no one knows what would have happened had this occurred in February.

Mainly, what people see are dog tracks. There are some awfully big dogs around, and these seem to be the ones that run loose. Three-inch dog tracks are common. Now here is the important part, on a thawing day the margins of these tracks will melt before anything else. This enlarges the tracks, and when conditions are just right tracks can be doubled in size and still retain their character.

Marlin Perkins, of television's "Wild Kingdom" (N.B.C.—Sunday), explained the abominable snowman from Tibet in this manner. Rabbit tracks thaw and enlarge, the four footprints melting into a single outline roughly in the shape of a man's foot. Thus each set of four rabbit tracks become a single snowman's footprint. Each jump of the rabbit is a snowman's step.

This is the classic example of how reliable and honest men have seen something that was not there, for it has puzzled explorers and scientists for generations. The explanation is almost too simple to be accepted, and it probably won't be for it is always February in Tibet, they say.

Also on the program will be Dean Jauchius, administrative assistant to Gov. James Rhodes; Dr. Charles A. Frosting On The Cake

By "UNCLE DOC" ROSS — U.S.A.

Snobs are always such interesting people. There are so many kinds that limited space makes it impossible to catalogue them.

There are three kinds that give civilized people a very definite pain in a very definite place. First of all, money snobs who would be nobodies if they did not have money. Secondly, intellectual snobs who have been to school all of their lives but have no practical experience with life and how to get along with other people.

Thirdly, and always most obnoxious are those who suffer so terribly from an over-conditioned inferiority complex. Their total lack of priceless "inner illumination" is so noticeable to the astute and truly cultured that the wise old Emersonian comment still weighs a ton — "what you are speaks so loudly, I can't hear a thing you say."

Truly civilized adults who have both means and breeding through family lines and who have "learned how to live the good life," are rarely snobs or bores. Such delightful individuals have a profound and sincere respect for the genuine proprieties of life.

Intellectual snobs who have nothing but a trunk full of diplomas and half the letters in the alphabet after their names are simply annoying to real doers.

I do not mean to belittle any genuine achievement in life by anyone. Roses still bloom and flourish in dung hills, but they were born with what it takes to get out of any unfriendly environment and get into the real sunshine of opportunity and everlasting self-improvement.

So, rich or poor, eighth grade or Ph.D., all astute observers of human behavior are those who can sort the slobs from the saints and exercise the God-given right to associate with kindred spirits and minds and souls.

Wise old Dr. Thorndyke said it best in what has now become known as Thorndyke's Law, namely, "no man begins to become somebody until he has learned how to respect people who are somebody by breeding, education and above all else, Christian humility or soul health."

plained, "but it is tentatively scheduled for the last of March."

Olbert has announced his campaign steering committee and division leaders. They include Charles Beard, Fred Erfurt, Mrs. Mabel Gaffin, Mike Lower, Cliff Olson, Carl Snedeker, O. P. Wiechers and Dave Wilson.

Team captains are being selected and will be announced by Feb. 20.

Heading up a committee like this is no easy task. It's a job that needs strong leadership and, perhaps, that's the main reason Olbert was selected.

Being a leader is nothing to this Columbus native. Because of his work, he was named one of the top 10 men in Columbus in 1961 by a local daily newspaper.

What's his background?

Olbert was graduated from South High in 1942 as an honor student and president of his school's student council. He attended Denison University from 1942 to 1943 and Ohio State from 1946 to 1948. He earned a BA in business administration and education from Ohio State in 1953 and also holds a masters degree in education from that school.

He was a radio man during World War II from 1943 to 1946 and was an operational officer during the Korean conflict. He currently holds a lieutenant's commission with the U. S. Naval Reserve.

Besides his full-time school duties, Olbert has been active in Grace Lutheran Church efforts, serving in three top administrative posts.

He's a charter member of the South Optimist Club, a member of the advisory council of the Franklin County Welfare Board and past president of the Central Ohio Social Studies Association.

The 39-year old school head also authors radio scripts used for the Ohio High School of the Air, a program conducted by local students.

Married, Olbert and his wife, Dorothy, have two children, Scott and Julie.

to see some of the films being shown in today's theaters."

With this thought in mind, the film endorsement has been planned for Valentine's Day — a usual time for movie dating.

"We have an immediate challenge and an ultimate goal before us," Mrs. Skeen added. "Our goal is to live to the fullest potential of youth in God and our challenge is to 'crusade' for clean movies by sponsoring one."

The older-youth-sponsored film will be shown at 7 and 9:30 p.m. Tickets, available at the door or through members of the Crusaders' Class (Broad-st Methodist Church, Broad and Washington) are $1.25 for adults and 50-cents for children.

Proceeds from the ticket sale will be used for a "Vision Project" whereby the class will support an "adventure in camping and Christian witnessing to enrich our own and other lives for Christ in summer of 1963," Mrs. Skeen concluded.

The group hopes to send members to Puerto Rico to exploit the movie idea there along with other Christian principles.

PERSISTANT PURSUIT—It's a two-on-one situation as St. Marys' Bob Yates (44) and Hamilton Township's John Schreiber both set their sights on that bouncing object to the right of the picture. The race went for naught as the ball rolled out of bounds and to the Hartley photographer who didn't have to move an inch. The Rams' Tim Sauer (12) watches the scramble for possession at the left.

GUESS WHO JUST SCORED?—You didn't have to look up at the scoreboard to answer that question Friday evening if you kept your eye on this happy quintet of St. Marys rooters, exhibiting their satisfaction at a converted Ram field goal attempt. The St. Marys quintet sent their fans home happy with a 56-61 win over Hamilton Township.

ROSARY CLIPS EAGLES

Bulldogs Down Irish; Rams CL Runnerup

By ART KIENZLE

Guided by sophomore Lloyd Pate's hot hand, South High's Bulldog cagers won their second City League game of the season, upsetting Aquinas, 41-35.

Pate, who broke into the lineup late this season, has been averaging 17 points a game and found the range for 18 against the Terriers.

BROTHER PAUL (Pate) was the only other Reb player in double figures with 13 points. Fred McGhee, Jim Walker and Marion Iverson highlighted defensive play while adding five, four and one markers respectively.

South wasn't quite so fortunate the following evening as arch-rival North came from behind in the final minute of play to win, 68-67.

The Rebels, who hit a sizzling 60 per cent of their floor shots, led most of the way and held a five-point lead late in the final period. Lloyd Pate dropped in 22 points to spark the Bulldog offense but Polar Bear Terry Kneisley came up with the big bucket with 35 seconds remaining.

South now stands 2-6 in the City League and 3-10 overall.

ST. MARYS HAD to settle for the runner-up spot in the County League title race as unbeaten University wrapped up the loop crown with a pair of wins — one over the Rams.

While the Bucklings were gaining the full share Friday night against Dublin, St. Marys beat down a late Hamilton Township rally to top the Rangers, 56-51.

The Rams were in command most of the way, holding a 13-point lead entering the final period. The Rangers rallied in the final minutes to cut down the margin but St. Marys converted on several foul shots in the waning moments of play to preserve the win.

TOM SAUER AND George Maurer paced the Ram offense with 16 points apiece while Bob Yates chipped in with 12 more markers.

University's one-two scoring punch — John Howard and Don Durr — notched 33 points between them to pace the Bucklings to their 58-35 win Saturday evening.

The Rams trailed by only five at the first quarter break but University pulled ahead slowly to lead by 15 points or better most of the way. Maurer's 17 was best for the Rams in the season finale.

ROSARY ALSO GAINED a split in county competition over the weekend. The Crusaders toppled New Albany, 71-56, Friday evening before bowing to Reynoldsburg, 63-53, the following night.

The Green and White led all the way in their second win of the season over the Eagles. Rick Stokes paced the Rosary attack with 19 points with Jim Groce and Don Spurlock finishing with 17 and 15 markers respectively.

By halftime Saturday evening it appeared that the Crusaders would repeat their domination of the Raiders. But Reynoldsburg, who had passed its County League title to new champ University the evening before, found the range after intermission to pull from behind for the win.

Groce and Ed Roehrenbeck were Rosary's big guns with 22 and 15 points.

ELSEWHERE AROUND the area, Marion-Franklin battled a tough Linden quintet right through the final period before bowing, 64-51, Friday evening in City League play.

The Red Devil scoring was paced by John and Steve Jackson with 20 and 14 points respectively.

All area clubs jump back into action over the weekend as the '62-'63 season enters its last two weeks of play. One quintet — Rosary — wraps up its season this weekend as the Crusaders (4-11) host Academy (5-11) Friday at the Catholic Center and St. Charles (9-7) the following evening, also at the Center.

Other Friday evening games find Marion-Franklin (2-13) at Central (9-3), Eastmoor (7-6) at South (5-10) and Aquinas (7-8) at West (8-8).

Only Saturday game has Aquinas hosting Dennison St. Marys.

SQUEEZE PLAY—Rosary's Ed Roehrenbeck (with ball) squeezes around Reynoldsburg's Gale Bryant (31) after snaring a rebound under the Raider bucket. The Purple and White did a little squeezing of its own later in the game, bypassing the Crusaders on the scoreboard, 68-53.

PUNTING SITUATION—That's how you might have described this picture a couple of months ago but the situation's a little different now as St. Mary's George Maurer (20) and Tom Sauer battle Hamilton's Jim Browning for a rebound Friday evening. The elusive round ball seems to be in complete control of the situation even if the cagers aren't. The Rams defeated the Rangers in a County League battle, 56-51.

Why Not Coloring Book About Sports Figures?

Next time you're out on the Woolworth or Kresge circuit looking for that 59 cent horsehide to keep Junior on the major league trail — take a gander at the biggest thing to hit the market since hula hoops put Davy Crockett out of business.

The latest fad is the coloring book craze and apparently everybody is trying to get into the act. About the only kind of coloring book we haven't seen around town is one marked "Sports."

ALTHOUGH OUR patent is still pending in Washington, we have confidence that maybe we'll be spending the spring in Florida with the Mickey Mantles and the Stan Musials.

So for those who fancy coloring books (and lots of people do), here's a new one for you. Crayons ready? Begin to color:

PAGE ONE — See the Big Ten basketball coach with the crew-cut? Color him worried. Color his All-American cagers gone. Color his team's long streak of home court victories shaky.

PAGE FOUR — Here's a chunky professional golfer. Color his pockets green and bulging. Color him disgusted because he had to work a whole six days to earn nine G's.

PAGE FIVE — Ready for the Big Ten football coach? Color him outspoken. Black out all the officials around him. Take your scissors out and clip off the coaches' sleeves.

PAGE SIX — See the major league slugging king? Color him frustrated. Color his strike zone bigger and his batting average smaller. Color the pitcher on the mound happier than he's been for many a season. Color the umpire's eyes as weak as ever.

PAGE SEVEN COME ELEVEN — Work diligently on this series of professional football players. Color them controversial. Color the NFL investigators tailing them behind billboards and bushes, scribbling away in notebooks.

PAGE 12 — Here's an ex-All-American cager. Color moss growing on his basketball shoes. Color him anxious—his fans patient — and local sportswriters hopeful of getting the news break this time.

PAGE 14 — Look at the local baseball stadium. Color the seats empty. Draw in the club's general manager up on the roof, looking towards Pittsburgh.

PAGE 15 — Here's the International League's scheduling committee. Color them confused and unsure of who's really playing in the league this season.

PAGE 17 — See the Hartley Sports Editor? Color him all out of ideas, crayons and pages. Color him looking for a new job when all the libel suits start rolling in.

Jack Davis (14) and Jim Lewis (8) weer the best shooters for Southwood while Dave McGraw and Larry Bentley kept the crowd on the edge of their seats with some very accurate shooting.

Piketon Lanes Opening Set For Late March

Southside bowling fans will shortly have one more outlet for their kegling enthusiam with the opening of the new Piketon Lanes at S. Parsons Ave. and Dering-rd. next month.

Owner Al Wiseman announced this week that the 40 lanes will be ready for the first set of pin spilling by late March. The bitter cold wave this winter slowed down progress for the lanes completion but Wiseman indicated that the new lanes will be ready for bowling in plenty of time for the summer circuit.

PLAN TO LIVE IN LUTHERAN CITY

POINTING OUT the site of the new Lutheran Senior City scheduled for completion in late 1963 on a 20-acre site at 977 Parkview-av, is left, Russell Bachman of Rt. 2, Canal Winchester. Beside him is his wife and daughter-in-law and son, Mrs. and Mr. John S. Bachman of 4901 Chevy Chase-dr. The senior Bachmans plan to live in the city when completed. Bachman retired in 1948 from 25 years of service with Columbus Police Department and in 1957 retired from nine years with the Augsburg Press. Mrs. Bachman is employed in the office of the Janitrol Company. The senior Bachmans have explained to their four married sons and 13 grandchildren the city will provide them with a feeling of independence.

J. R. Maleca Participates In Jungle Exercise

Marine Corporal Joseph R. Maleca, son of Mr. and Mrs. Cyril M. Maleckа, 34 Alcott-rd, is serving with the First Battalion of the Ninth Marine Regiment, which was part of the combined United States - Thailand Forces engaged in Exercise Jungle Drum II during January.

The exercise, involving 13 ships of both navies and Marines from both countries, was the largest assault ever staged on the Asian mainland by forces of the South East Asia Treaty Organization.

Jungle Drum was staged to provide training for both countries in jungle fighting. Amphibious landing tactics, dispersal techniques, and aerial amphibious assault were stressed throughout the exercise.

Two forces clashed in the mock exercise, near Sattahip, Thailand.

Catholic Parents Receive Booklet

A colorful, illustrated booklet, "You and Your Child," is being distributed this week to all adult parishioners attending Sunday Mass in the Catholic churches of the area.

It is the sixth booklet in the adult education program for vocations sponsored by Bishop Clarence G. Issenmann, and directed by Msgr. Paul J. O'Dea, director of vocations.

The series covers every aspect of the vocations problem and is directed to parents whom, it is felt, have power to encourage or discourage vocations among Catholic young people to the priesthood or religious life.

Dad's steady influence is needed for . . .

LIFE'S OBSTACLES

We can easily see physical obstacles such as logs, boulders, and many other things that may be too difficult for our children to handle, but things that are not physical are not always so obvious. A young child needs help from his parents in spiritual matters too. The church can be an influence on children's lives, but when you, a parent, are taking part in church worship, you can be an even greater influence. Give your children, the leaders of the future, a hand now when they need it most. Take them to church regularly . . . and you too, will have a fuller and better life.

ATTEND CHURCH SUNDAY

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for men and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding, in the love of God, no government or society, or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny- the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

EVERYONE IN THE CHURCH . . . THE CHURCH IN EVERYONE

Woody Shares Birthday Party For Heart Fund

"It couldn't have been better if I had planned it that way," laughed Woody Hayes.

The genial OSU football coach and chairman of the 1963 Heart Fund campaign in Franklin County was referring to the date of his birthday which falls on Valentine's Day, the day when the awareness of the heart reaches a crescendo, and also the time peak of Heart Month.

"Woody's Champagne Birthday Party for the Heart Fund" will be a highlight for Woody Hayes and his cause Thursday, Feb. 14, sponsored by the Jai-Lai Restaurant.

THE PUBLIC IS invited, and special invitations have been issued to Heart Fund volunteers and local dignitaries to join Woody at his table for the festivities.

The birthday dinner will include prime ribs, pink champagne, and birthday cake, and a percentage of the proceeds on each dinner, as well as on other Valentine Dinners served between 6 and 10 p.m. will be donated by the Jai-Lai to the Heart Fund.

Special musical arrangements to honor Woody, fellow birthday celebrants present, and the heart fund campaign will be featured by Green and Iles, piano and organ duo.

I believe that this is the largest ranch home in Whitehall. There are about 3,300 square feet of living space on one floor; one of the three bedrooms is 16x24 feet and the living room is 15x30 feet and carpeted with parquet floors plus a 14x16 library off one side of the living room. Huge kitchen has eating space and there is also a dining room. Two full baths. Outside there is a lot just a little under an acre with many tall trees. Very convenient location close to Town and Country and bus. Price is unbelievably low and far less than reproduction cost. Call me and I'll be glad to show it to you.

'Rub' Conrad Exits From Scouting After Devoting 47 Years To Youth Activities

By FRED VOELKEL

Appropriately enough, a man who has devoted 47 years to furthering Boy Scouting efforts, "retired" from the organization on Boy Scout Sunday.

Rubert (Rub) Conrad, 381 Mithoff-st, left the reins of Troop 244, Livingston Methodist Church, last Sunday during special services staged by scouts of the troop — a headed by Conrad since 1957.

The South Sider became interested in Scouting in 1916 when he organized Troop 38 at Thurman Methodist Church. He served at this post until 1925.

It was that year that he received the silver cup for participation in Boy Scout shows. In 1931 he moved to the Livingston-av church and organized the present troop.

In 1933, he received the Scoutmaster Key. In 1957 he became scoutmaster of the present troop, 244. He celebrated his golden wedding anniversary in 1961 and 22 men from his original troop honored him on that day.

It was 1962 that he received the highest adult honor in Scouting — the Silver Beaver award — for his many contributions to the Scouting world.

Last Sunday, his church and his Boy Scouts bestowed another honor on him by presenting him with a plaque to commemorate his retirement.

There were 12 Scouts present Sunday, a mere handful compared with the hundreds he has trained since 1916.

'IT'S LIKE COMMITTING SUICIDE'

Beware Of Hike Fad, Warns County Health Commissioner

By JOHN AUBLE, JR.

Dr. Robert Evans, Franklin County health commissioner, spoke out this week against the current hiking fad—even calling it "asinine."

As Dr. Evans sees it, "unless you're in shape for this physical activity, you're trying to commit suicide."

As near as can be determined, the "hiking hysteria" had its bright beginnings in Washington, DC., through some encouragement by President Kennedy.

It has spread across the country with the gusto of the "Twist" and is causing additional woes to feet not yet healed from doing that dance craze.

Greater Columbus residents have latched onto the fad and they're the ones who have Dr. Evans a little worried.

"These people should be aware of their own personal health," said the good doctor.

He's undoubtedly referring to the recent burst of interest in walking being done by folks unprepared to perform spectacular feats with their feet.

"Let's not make a mistake here," the doctor added. "Walking is good exercise but, let's not overdo it. We need more exercise but not this 'duration' type."

Dr. Evans feels there are probably people who could sit around their house and set fire to their fingertips, too, but this doesn't prove much except that they can take it.

The doctor actually has his doubts as to whether or not this "hiking hysteria" is really physical fitness or not. The feeling is strong that it can best be described as a publicity stunt.

He admits he enjoys a brisk walk occasionally, himself. "But not," he added hastily, "when I can get in an automobile."

Meantime, the walking fad continues in the Greater Columbus area.

Radio Station WTVN has been plugging a locally based oil company's offer to furnish the gasoline for a return trip by any 50-mile hikers — providing they do it in 20 hours or less and providing they register first.

They've already made good on their offer for Curtis Carter, 62 Hoffman-st, who hoofed it to Zanesville last weekend in 18½ hours.

HARTLEY NEWSPAPERS Sports Editor Jack Wittenmeier takes a look at the hike fad inside this week's issue.

Two foot-blistered former Marines on the Hilltop took the 50-mile trip to Delaware and back and, when asked if they'd do it again, replied with a firm "No."

They are John W. Kelley, 32, of 3045 Palmetto-st, and George Motil, 27, of 2729 Sullivant-av. "Don't try it unless you're trained and know you're in good shape," they said.

J. Richard Lawwill, superintendent of Parks and Forestry, says he enjoys a walk "nearly every day" around Franklin Park. He goes about a quarter of a mile.

He reports that there's a track around Franklin that's a mile in length and says its open to anyone who might want to try 50 laps.

"I don't think I'd try it — even on a bicycle," he smiled, with vig-ah.

Lincoln Park Recreation Center Heads List Of Public Improvements

A new $329,000 recreation center to be built in Lincoln Park heads a list of public improvement projects earmarked for the South Side in the city's 1963 construction program approved this week by City Council.

Altogether, residents of this area of the city will benefit from almost a dozen projects costing nearly $800,000, according to figures released by Mayor Westlake.

Recreation projects will account for nearly half of the entire program scheduled for the southern section of the city, the mayor said.

In addition to the Lincoln Park recreation center, projects include reconditioning Southview and grading new land when it is acquired at a cost of $30,000; a new wading pool at Schiller Recreation Center, $4500; a parking area at Schiller, $10,000, and new backstops at Southview, $2500.

The 1963 program also sets aside $30,000 for new fire protection facilities, $70,000 for police facilities, $280,000 for sewers, and $41,385 for parks.

City Council allocated $30,000 for acquisition of a site for a new fire station to replace the present run-down structure at Thurman-av, and S. 4th-st. It also set aside $70,000 for a new police substation in Lincoln Park.

Sewer projects slated for construction this year include the Williams-rd subtrunk sanitary, southeast branch extended, $130,000. Funds totaling $150,000 also were allocated for the preparation of engineering plans for the $2,500,000 Alum Creek main trunk sanitary from Williams-rd to a point south of Livingston-av a similar $2,500,000 sewer along the Big Walnut, and the $5,500,000 sanitary main trunk from Williams-rd to the planned new Southerly Treatment Plant.

Council also set aside funds totaling $41,385 as part of a $95,000 program to develop Whittier Park for boating, fishing, and the installation

Boundaries Shortened In Village

The size of German Village in the South Side was reduced somewhat Wednesday through action by the City Planning Commission.

The commission approved revised boundaries for the restoration area which reduces the limits to what is known as the "hard core" of the historic community.

Frank Fetch, president of the German Village Society, said revision of the area's boundaries is "desirable" from the point that it will enable "better control" of the restoration effort.

The main changes were in the western and northern sections. The new boundaries will be, roughly, Pearl-st, just east of S. High-st; the alley south of Livingston-av; a line following Grant-av and Blackberry-st, just east of Jaeger-st and Nursery-ln, north of Mithoff-st.

The former boundaries went to the Scioto River on the west, Livingston-av on the north and Gates-st on the south. The east boundary is relatively the same.

South Sider Gets Honors In Berlin

Gary Pennington, son of Mrs. Earl Pennington, 81 E. Morrill-av, recently earned two distinctions while stationed in Berlin with the U. S. Army.

A 1960 South High graduate, Pennington was chosen Company Soldier of the Month for February and, a day later, was picked Special Troops (battalion) Soldier of the Month.

He reportedly will compete for Berlin Brigade Soldier of the Month at a later date.

He enlisted in the army shortly after graduation and received basic training at Ft. Knox, Ky., and Ft. Leonard Wood, Mo. He was later sent to Ft. Devens, Mass., and then to Berlin where he has earned two ratings since making SP-4.

SOUTH YMCA MINT SALE ENDS NEXT MONDAY

Four South Side Streets Are Still Problem Areas For Traffic Arrests

ROOSEVELT BOASTS DOUBLE WINNERS

THESE ROOSEVELT Junior High students, shown with science instructor Clyde Stimpert, represent the only double winners from a particular school in a recent essay contest on "Thomas Edison's Contribution To the Space Age." They are Steve Harris and Laura Hepner, both ninth graders. The contest was sponsored by the Columbus and Southern Ohio Electric Co.

Four South Side streets were singled out this week by Columbus Police Chief George Scholar in his periodic Selective Enforcement Bulletin — three were labeld "increase enforcement" and the fourth was indicated as an improvement over previous periods.

The streets include Livingston-av (Heyl to Wilson); Main-st (Miller to Bulen); S. High-st (Livingston to Whittier) and Parsons-av (Welch to Hosack).

All but Parsons-av were tagged as "increase enforcement" areas.

Biggest problems on Livingston are turning violations and stop signs from 7 to 10 a.m.

Failures-to-yield-to-cars-on-the-right infractions were noted on Main-st from 4 to 8 p.m.

High-st has the same failure-to-yield problem and reckless operation from 6 to 10 p.m. The principle trouble with Parsons has been intoxication and reckless operation charges from 8 p.m. to 2 a.m.

"Accidents totaled 724 and hazardous moving violation arrests totaled 1,625 for the past 15 days in Columbus,"

FOURTH IN SERIES

Teamwork Typifies The Fisher Family In South 'Y' Work

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the fourth in a series of articles written to better acquaint residents with the South Side YMCA — its work and its leaders. The new "Y," at 190 Southwood-av, is currently staging a membership drive to help furnish the building and it's hoped that these notes will help show the drive's worthiness.)

The only thing better than teamwork in a civic organization is teamwork combined with family ties.

Such is the case with George and Wilma Fisher, 1154 Woodrow-av, a husband and wife team who have devoted much time and energy to the South Side Branch YMCA goals and ideals.

George's association with the "Y" came early in life. One of 12 children, he was graduated from Clarfield Elementary School (8th grade) in 1929 and got his first taste then of "Y" magic.

The taste came subtly at first as he participated in the Leader's Club and the school athletic program — two functions sponsored by the "Y."

He was an excellent athlete. But, then again, so was his wife-to-be who was participating in a similar program at Smith-rd School.

After attending South High, George was employed at Federal Glass Co.

He then spent a hitch in the U. S. Army from 1942 to 1945 and took a job with the Columbus Transit Co. (maintenance department at the Kelton-av garage) after leaving the service.

In recent years, he has been employed as a welder.

Both George and Wilma have been active members of the Hope EUB Church for many years.

Wilma served as Clarfield School cafeteria cook and has helped prepare food for special "Y" groups at the South Side YMCA Park on Rohr-rd.

George has been a member of the Community Program Council, representing the first Marion Township (now the Marion District).

In their YMCA associations, the Fishers are well-known for their work with young people in the Smith-rd School District. George has served the "Y" 23 years

Crime Crackdown Needed, But Won't Come

A Hartley Headliner Report

By JOHN AUBLE, JR.

A startling increase in major crimes in Columbus calls for a law enforcement crackdown—a crackdown that can't be made by the Columbus Police Department.

This was the sad but inevitable conclusion drawn this week by Police Chief George Scholer who went so far as to say that the increased crime rate has him "worried to death."

Actually, the progressive increase in some crimes has worried Scholer ever since his appointment to chief nine years ago. It doesn't take much imagination to picture the chief as a chess player who can, at present, merely move his men around the city rather than concentrate on any particular area.

"All I can do is analyze the various areas of the city and, if I find a high crime rate, shift more men into the area. This, however, leaves another section without adequate enforcement."

"In other words," he continued, "a major crackdown on crimes cannot be made with our current staff."

Just how critical is the crime problem? Check these statistics:

There were 1286 auto thefts in 1961. For 1962, 1651 have been reported. This is an increase of 28.4 per cent.

In comparison, murder has increased 60.9 per cent, rape 10 per cent and burgiarly 6.2 per cent.

The alarming increase in murders doesn't really concern Scholer as much as burglarly and auto theft increases. The chief pointed out that "Columbus, over the years, has experienced a low homicide rate. An upsurge in one year doesn't concern me — this will drop. But, we can't overlook the fact that burglary has been going up continuously and auto thefts have increased 180 per cent in the last 10 years."

Why? What factors have caused an upsurge in crime? The men close to the problem have part of the answers.

For example, Lt. Wayne Morgan of the homicide and robbery squad points out the reason is "population explosion." He added: "It's simple enough . . . the more people in a city, the more homicides you'll experience."

Lt. James Woods of the burglarly and larceny squads feels the same way. "We've been annexing territory for some time. Things previously handled by the county are being done by us, now." Besides population, Lt. Woods attributes part of the increase to his theory that Columbus is "a dumping ground for state parolees."

"Sure, population is a factor," said Scholer. "But let's not forget that the population has been increasing right along and yet we've never had an upsurge as great as we experienced last year."

The chief said that, speaking proportionately, the crime rate has increased faster than the population rate in all crimes in the city during the last 10 years.

As far as the dumping ground theory, Scholer says it "may be true," but added he'd rather not "make a wild

NEW ELEMENTARY SCHEDULED FOR SOUTHEASTERN SECTION

MOLER ROAD SCHOOL to be built on Moler-rd, just east of Fairwood-av, has been approved by Columbus School Board, and a Mar. 28 deadline set for bids. The elementary is one of three scheduled for completion by September. A fourth elementary, Maybury, is scheduled to be built east of Big Walnut Creek and Walnut Bluffs Subdivision, between Refugee-rd on the south and the eastern extension of Myers-rd on the north, as part of the 1963 building program. At its Tuesday meeting the school Board also approved drawings and plans for a one-story addition, with a minimum of four classrooms, to Heimandale Elementary.

Teamwork—

with his wife close behind in service with 19 years.

They have always worked as a team and have helped provide transportation for countless members of gym sessions and council meetings. The annual athletic banquet committee was usually in Wilma's hands.

Always quick to plan a picnic, party or extra activity, many committee meetings have been held at their Woodrow-av home.

"Wilma's flair for refreshments has always guaranteed a good attendance," George said with a smile.

Crime—

statement."

There are other factors, too.

For instance, Scholer sees juvenile delinquency as the biggest contributor. He pointed out that 75 to 85 per cent of the auto thefts in this city are committed by persons under 18 years of age.

Perhaps the darkest cloud in the gloomy crime picture is Scholer's statement that "from indications now, the upper trend in crime is going to continue in this city."

One of the big answers, of course, is manpower. City Council has given approval to 24 new policement but this still falls short of the national average.

"I've stressed this situation continuously to city fathers, the news media, radio and TV," said Scholer. "People say it's a 'sad situation' but that's the end of it. No one assists us in getting more money or more manpower. Maybe some day my plea will reach the right source."

Columbus is now second in population in the state. Comparing the Capitol City with Cincinnai, Scholer showed that the city has 300 more policemen than does Columbus.

"Regardless of statistics," Scholer said, "Columbus is the cleanest city I know of for its size and compared even with smaller cities. It's a healthy atmosphere to live in, despite what the statistics show."

Perhaps. But figures don't usually lie. And they do, in fact, frighten.

AUBLEGRAPH

Television Is Reaching An All-Time High In Content

What's to be said about television today?

"Watch it," that's what.

Program caliber is reaching toward an all-time high and all factors seem to indicate that it doesn't show signs of stopping.

There's some very good reasons for this, too. Leading the list is the fact that the nation's top writers are finding television an interesting outlet.

Besides this, technical advances are providing better lighting, more realistic sets and improved camera work.

Add to this the fact that some of the great producers and directors of our day are turning their talents to TV and it's easy to see why the industry is moving ahead faster than William Tecumseh Sherman — and, perhaps, with more power.

Realism on Climb

Realism, of course, is becoming the key for most television drama. And, with this drive for realism comes another problem—namely, good taste.

Prostitution, alcoholism, narcotics, illegitimate pregnancy and abortions are just a few of the very real things in our world today. Sensitive subjects? Sure. But, they're being woven into dramatic offerings every week with great skill.

It is undoubtedly safe to assume that many eyebrows are being raised over presentations of these types. But much more good is being derived from them.

Let me cite an example:

Early in November, the National Broadcasting Company prepared an "Eleventh Hour" episode. It was the story of a 15-year-old girl in the emotional crisis of an illegitimate pregnancy and it posed, among other possible solutions, the question of abortion.

Accepted Well

Robert Sarnoff, president of NBC, reports that some stations across the country asked to view the show on closed circuit first. All but one decided to carry it—including Columbus' WLW-C, TV 4.

The very next morning, schools, churches and PTA groups telephoned NBC affiliates and asked for prints of the film to show to teenagers and parents.

In Davenport, Iowa, for instance—not very far, incidently, from the community that killed the show for airing there—a station received a letter from a Methodist minister seeking to borrow a print for high school classes and parent meetings.

An identical request came from a Roman Catholic high school in North Carolina.

Now, what does this all mean?

It means, basically, that realistic subjects are being handled expertly. Responsible and effective treatment are being used in dramas of this type with astounding results.

Well Distributed

No particular network has a monopoly on these fine works.

And, you can bet your sweet life that you'll see more. Right this minute top talents in this country are working on drama with themes of civil rights, intolerence, and juvenile delinquency and expectant mother's fear of childbirth.

Add to this list programs about adjustment of a young girl and her family to the knowledge that she is fatally ill or the problem of whether to get married while in college and you'll be coming close to what to expect from your 21-inch tube in the very near future.

More power—and much credit—to these men who are working under the gloom of such phrases as "vast wasteland."

Suburban Topic To Be Televised

"Suburban Viewpoint" will probe the pros and cons of the controversial West North Broadway extension, Thursday, Feb. 21, at 7:30 p.m. on WOSU-TV Channel 34.

At the close of the program, Congressman John M. Ashbrook, 17th District U. S. Representative, will express his views about suburban problems in general.

Fruits — Apples, grapefruit, rhubarb, canned red cherries.

Vegetables — Potatoes, carrots, yellow onions, frozen French fries, canned corn.

Meat and Poultry — Beef "specials," hams, chicken, frozen fish.

Other — Frozen cherry pies, tomato products, tuna fish.

Thinking of baking a cherry pie for your family on Washington's birthday? Cherry pie, of course, is only the beginning when it comes to cherry desserts and other "goodies" you can make using cherries.

Whatever your choice of cherry treats, this is the week to serve them at bargain prices. Because of the good cherry crop last summer, both canned and frozen red tart cherries, as well as cherry products, are abundant and will be highlighted in food markets for the national holiday.

Mrs. Franks

If you're looking for canned cherries, you'll find the one pound (No. 303) can is now the most popular consumer size for red tart cherries, the kind usually preferred for pies and other baking. They are packed in water, in light syrup or in heavy syrup. The intended use will determine the style pack to buy.

For a well-filled nine-inch pie, you'll need two No. 303 cans (four cups).
ounce or 20 ounce cans and they are usually red
You'll find frozen cherries sold in either 16 ounce or 20 ounce and they are usually tart cherries, packed in sugar. Two 16 ounce cans four cups) is about right for a nine-inch pie.

Cherry pie filling now out sells canned cherries, so the grocers say. This product comes in No. 2 cans only, contains red tart cherries and other ingredients for a cherry pie.

All you need to do is to empty the contents of the can into an unbaked pie crust and bake. If you like a well-filled pie, use a seven or eight-inch pan for one can. If making a good pie crust is your problem, nine-inch frozen pie crusts (two per package) are available from the frozen food chest in some stores.

Frozen cherry pies are outstanding values in many stores this week. Available in sizes ranging from an individual serving to a 24-ounce family size, these pies are ready to pop into the oven and bake — a joy to the busy homemaker or inexperienced baker.

However, if you choose to bake your own — and use frozen cherries — do you have trouble getting a filling that's neither "runny" nor "overthick?" Home economists at Cornell University have been test-baking frozen red cherry pies with various kinds and amounts of thickeners, and say, for:

CHERRY PIES THAT DON'T RUN

- Use one quart frozen cherries for a well-filled eight or nine-inch pie. (Two 16-ounce cans).
- Mix 2½ tablespoons of minute tapioca with 1⅛ tablespoons of cornstarch.
- Sugar to taste. Remember, some sugar was added when the cherries were frozen — so don't add too much.

Thaw the cherries only until most of the free ice has disappeared. Drain off the juice and add it to the thickener and sugar mixed together. Heat rapidly until thickened. Put drained cherries into unbaked pie shell, pour the thickened juice over the cherries, and add latticed top crust.

Bake at 400 degrees for 35 minutes or until the top crust is light brown. Put the pie on the lowest shelf of the oven to get a brown undercrust.

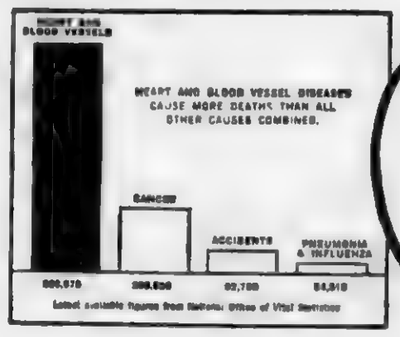
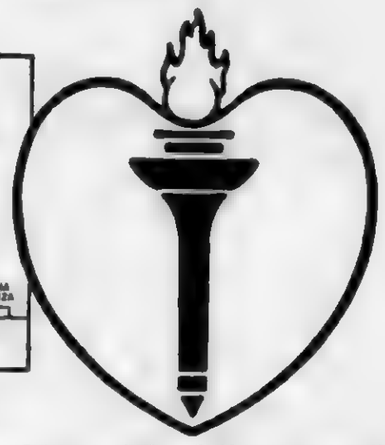
More will live, the more you give

Welcome your Heart Fund volunteer.
The heart you save may be your own.



Your Heart Fund dollars will buy lives.



They will be used to fight heart and circulatory disease, the killer that will take the lives of more people this year—your friends and neighbors, possibly a member of your family—than all other causes of death combined.

Your Heart Fund dollars will buy hope.

Today, most heart victims recover. Three of four return to work. Yet, heart and blood vessel diseases will kill one of every two Americans alive today . . . unless research makes the "break-through" that will slow or stop the nation's No. 1 killer.

Your Heart Fund dollars are your best insurance.

TOURNEY PLAY OPENS

Rebs Top Warriors; Rosary Sinks Vikings

A highly-spirited South High basketball team turned in its best performance of the season Friday as the Bulldog quintet trounced Eastmoor, 72-52, in a packed Rebel gym.

Lloyd Pate sparked the win as he banged in 19 points while Fred McGhee and Paul Pate helped out with 17 and 14 points respectively.

The Bulldogs won the game at the foul line where they cashed in on 26 of 29 shots while Eastmoor picked up only 12 tosses.

South opened the game fast as the Rebs jumped off to a six-point lead (18-12) at the first period mark and really took off after intermission to lead by 14 (45-31) at the third quarter mark.

The Rebs now own a 3-6 CL mark while standing 6-10 overall with one game remaining on their '62-'63 slate.

Rosary split a pair of hardwood battles over the weekend, toppling Academy Friday, 59-51, before bowing to St. Charles, 81-57, the following evening.

The Crusaders came up with a rally in the final period to down the Vikings after trailing most of the way. Rosary pulled ahead to stay in the final four minutes when Rick Stokes drilled in two of his 14 points.

Jim Groce paced the Green and White offense with 20 markers.

It was a different story the following evening as St. Charles' fast-breaking Carolians snapped their losing streak with a win over the Crusaders.

The taller Cards put the game out of reach after Rosary stayed close until late in the first period. Ed Roehrenbeck's 17 points was best for the losers while teammate Paul Meadows meshed 13 more.

Marion-Franklin's second-period rally fizzled in the second half as Central moved one step closer to the City League's runnerup spot with a 66-54 victory.

The Red Devils, battling to stay free of the CL basement, pulled up to within six points of the Pirates at halftime but were unable to keep up the pace afer intermission.

John and Steve Jackson led the M-F scoring with 17 and 12 points respectively.

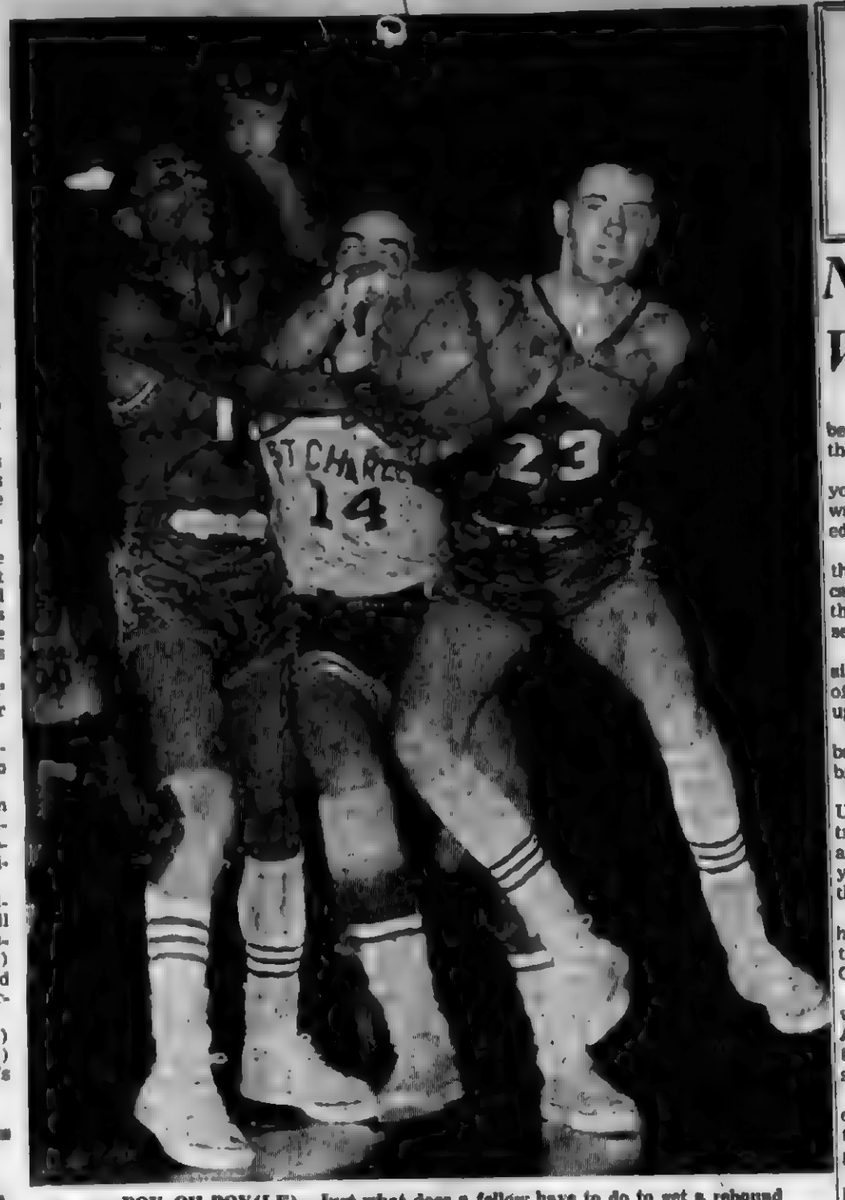
Elsewhere around the area, Aquinas also split a pair of cage tilts — a tight 51-50 squeaker win over West Friday and a 65-58 loss to unbeaten Dennison St. Marys Saturday.

Tom Hartmann's converted foul shot in the final seven seconds was the difference in the West game. The Cowboys led most of the way and carried a four-point margin into the final period.

But the Terriers, paced by Tom Woodward's 16-point performance and a 13-point assist by Pat Mentel, evened it up in the last 30 seconds to set up Hartmann's clincher.

The Irish entertained ideas of ending Dennison St. Marys string of 17-straight wins the following evening before stalling in the final period.

The Terriers entered the fourth period with a six-point advantage but the Irish could score only six more markers the rest of the evening while St Marys piled up 20 points in a hot-scoring finale.



Mike McGrath was Aquinas' most successful point-getter with 14.

All area teams with the exception of St. Marys hop into tourney play this weekend.

Only pre-tourney action finds Marion-Franklin (2-14-entertaining South (6-10) tonight in the City League finale for both sides.

Both the Devils and Bulldogs hit the AA tourney trail Saturday night as Marion-Franklin battles Bexley (4-12) at Grandview (1:30 p.m.) and South faces Delaware at Arlington (7 p.m.).

In "A" play, Rosary (5-12) takes on New Albany (2-16) at 6:30 p.m. on Otterbein's court at Westerville.

BOY, OH BOY(LE)—Just what does a fellow have to do to get a rebound might be the question in St. Charles' Dan Boyle's mind as the Carolina cager (center) finds himself cramped a bit by Rosary's Paul Meadows (left) and Rick Stokes (right) as the three hoopsters battle for possession Saturday evening at the Catholic Center. The Cards didn't have this kind of trouble all evening, however, stacking the Crusaders on the short end of an 81-57 score.

Now The 50 Mile Hike Where Will It All End?

Up until last week, we had considered it fortunate to be living in a country with a sports-minded President as the nation's pace-setter.

After all, no matter what kind of politics you profess, you'll have to admit that after eight years on the golf course, water skiing was a refreshing change of pace. We even brushed up on our touch football when that jumped back into style.

WE GUESS WE should have seen the handwriting on the wall, though, when this whole physical fitness program came to the fore. After all, we mused, how could we expect the youngsters to get away from the TV set, if we didn't set some kind of example?

The situps and leg lifts weren't so bad and we considered ourselves as American as the next guy until a friend of ours began loudmouthing that the real patriots had stepped up the ladder to weightlifting.

So now, three nights a week, we lock ourselves in the basement and huff and puff until everything but the walls break out in a fatigued sweat.

OK — BUT what's all this jazz about a 50 mile hike? Until last week, 50 miles was no more or less than a round-trip ticket to the Circleville Pumpkin Show. But now, you aren't keeping up with the Jones' (or the Kennedys) unless you break out the leads and pick 'em up and 'em down on the asphalt.

Maybe we're just being cynical, but don't say you didn't hear it here first when you read about President Kennedy throwing the first pitch of the '63 season right through the Griffith Park scoreboard.

ON THE BRIGHTER side of the sports picture (and we do mean BRIGHTER), Chuck Finley, owner of the American League Athletics, has a brand new color scheme to help fill up the seats in the Kansas City ballyard this summer.

Finley, who apparently is going to get into the Hall of Fame one way or the other, went whole-hog in breaking the old AL axiom of white and grey uniforms by ordering green and gold play suits for his players.

We should have seen this one coming when Gabe Paul borrowed the old "cut 'em off at the shoulders" Cincinnati style of diamond togs for his Indians this upcoming season.

SUN GLASSES OUGHT to replace bicarbonate of soda as the top seller at the stadium but whether the A's can do better for the new green and gold than they have done for the 'ole white and blue remains to be seen.

Finley, who obviously is convinced that Bill Veeck's old format still has some mileage, had his fans in mind when he suggested some varied pastels for the base umpires —possibly remembering that black makes a pretty poor target—especially at night games.

REMEMBER DOC Cary Middlecoff, the dentist who decided hitting golf balls was more profitable than pulling teeth? We remember the doctor because he was our first golfing champion a few years back.

Nothing seems to come quicker or depart faster than fame on the field of sport. Dr. Cary, who rode the top for two short years, collected a little better than 36 bucks for his efforts in the la.. Phoenix Tournament — barely enough to cover his shoeshine bill.

THANK YOU DEPT. — This corner was very much pleased last week with the announcement that the West Franklin Lions Club will be carrying the ball next year at the Rural-Urban News All-Star Football Banquet by renewing the presentation of the Scholar-Athlete Award.

The award, which takes into account the winner's classroom and leadership abilities, as well as his prowess on the field, will be one of four presentations made by area service clubs in conjunction with the banquet.

The Lions will present two trophies — one going to the individual's school and the other to the honored scholar-athlete.

M-F Jr. Cagers Feted At Banquet

The Marion-Franklin Junior High basketball team, runnersup in the South City Junior High League this season, were honored Tuesday evening at the Berry Building.

A crowd of 110 attended the banquet, which was prepared by the Junior High faculty. Among those invited to the affair were the M-F varsity, reserve team, cheerleaders and their families.

HIGHLIGHT OF the evening was the presentation of the second-place trophy to coach Clyde Trumbull by Columbus City School Director of Health and Physical Education Dan Sheatsley.

Trumbull presented letter awards to his 34 players and six cheerleaders as part of the program. Local radio personality Spook Beckman served as toastmaster.

Westfall Checks Suburban Loop; Circleville 'Out'

The South Suburban League, eager to add new member schools to its present four-team alignment, took a giant step toward solidifying its present foundations last week with the completion and adoption of the loop's constitution and by-laws.

The new league, consisting of Franklin Heights, Pleasant View, Teays Valley and Hamilton Township, was informed at the meeting that Circleville had withdrawn its consideration of league entry.

THE TIGERS, currently a member of the South-Central circuit, had been considered a definite possibility for the loop after Franklin Heights and Pleasant View broke their SCL ties.

However, a representative from Westfall, a newly consolidated school in Pickaway County, attended the meeting and expressed interest in the Suburban setup.

The Westfall school, located about five miles west of Circleville, will be ready to compete athletically in the fall of 1964 — when the Suburban League plans to initiate league schedule.

An invitation has been extended to the athletic directors and football coaches of the member schools to attend the loop's next meeting, set for 7 p.m., Feb. 28 at Franklin Heights.

FCL Will Be Stronger As C-W Returns To Fold

The Franklin County League welcomed an old compadre back into its football ranks last week with the announcement that Canal Winchester had severed its gridiron ties with the Mid-State circuit and voted in competition in the County League for all inter-school sports.

The Indians, who have competed in other CL sports as a member school, will initiate the change with the 1964 football season.

MARION-FRANKLIN VARSITY CAGE SQUAD

Oakwood Quintet Champs In South Y Boys Loop

Oakwood Methodist cinched the Wednesday Junior Boys section of the South Side "Y" Inter-Church basketball program by taking an overtime verdict from the classy South Methodist cagers, 29-23.

Roger Crum topped the scorers with 13 points, followed by John Workmaster (12), Larry Milligan (8) and Phil Swisher with six. In the other game of the card, Gary West and Terry Parfitt led St. John United to an important win over Emmanuel Lutheran despite the fine play of Tony Martin.

GIRL LEAGUE — Action began in the second round of the "powder puff" circuit with Grace United eking out a win over St. Paul United and Emmanuel Lutheran nosing (powdered, of course) out St. John United in real thrillers. Bonnie Frey, Diana Carey, Martha Branson and Sharon Wernert were the high scorers fro their respective teams.

TUESDAY JUNIOR BOYS —Play in this loop saw Ohio Avenue EUB run its win streak to five as the "Little Bucks" downed Williams Road Presbyterian.

In other games Parsons Baptist and St. Paul Lutheran remained hot on the heels of the Ohioans with wins over Hungarian United and St. Paul United. Top pointmakers were Jim Osborn (15), Rex Foster (12), Larry Jones (8), Keith Bugos (8) and "Cam" Roberts (7).

INTERMEDIATES — Frebis Church of God and Ohio Avenue EUB continued their red-hot race for the league championship by scoring their fifth straight win in games played last week.

Frebis won over the strong Oakwood Methodist quintet while Ohio, after a first quarter scare, leveled off to defeat Southwood Church of Christ.

Other contests saw St. Paul United down Trinity Lutheran in a real offensive battle and Williams Road Presbyterian win over South Methodist in a clash to avoid the cellar.

John Evans topped the league scorers for the week with 22 markers, followed by Dave McGrew (20), Mike Rickard, Gary Kipp and Bill Howard (17), Marc Borst, Tom Wright (16) and Larry Sexton with 13.

SENIORS — St John upset Hope Lutheran while Redeemer Lutheran continued its uphill climb for league laurels by winning over the Scottwood Community lads, 35-25. Dale Falknor's 16 points was tops for the evening, followed by Ray Fischer (15), Jim Apel (12), Danny Mitchell (9), Dick Brixner (7) and Jim Richardson (7).

VOLLEYBALL — Interest in this sport continues on a high level as three of the teams approach the finish line neck and neck in their championship drive. Brookwood's winning of a game from St. Paul Lutheran tightened the race as Scottwood Community swept a pair from Christ Methodist and Capital Seminary took two from the men of Livingston Methodist.

BUSINESS REVIEW

Groveport Lady Engraver Rapidly Expands Business

MARGARET MOISEY, owner of M. J. Moisey Engraving, Groveport, is shown with a few of the hundreds of trophies for sale at the shop. Mrs. Moisey also specializes in engraved plagues, plastic signs, and industrial signs. The shop is closed Wednesdays, but is open from noon to 5 p.m. the rest of the week.

Mrs. Margaret Moisey started in the engraving business in 1960 with the idea of having an established business when her husband retires from the United States Air Force late this year.

Today Mrs. Moisey carries one of the largest assortments of trophies in the area. "We have trophies for all occasions," she said.

The shop, located at 505 Elm-st at Hamilton-rd in Groveport, also sells eight different types of desk name plates in 14 colors in either plastic or metal.

Moisey's specialize in door plates with holders, directional and professional signs, plant labels, and lapel pins—all are stain and water resistant.

Mrs. Moisey started engraving in her home. In November, 1961 the business had grown to a point where she had to move it to 637 Main-st.

Late last year she found her business had outgrown that address. Yesterday she moved her shop to a new and larger location on Elm-st.

15-Year-Old Raises Hogs And $$

SPOTS AND MORE spots occupy the time of Freddy Babbitt, young Groveport farmer. Above he shows off his 11-day-old pure bred Spotted Poland China piglets. The heat lamp helps him keep his mortality rate way down and only one of the above litter was lost.

By anyone's standards it's a good business deal when an 18-month investment grows to 3,000 per cent.

And that's exactly what Freddy Babbitt has accomplished.

He took $55 saved from his Groveport paper route and bought a Spotted Poland China gilt. From this humble beginning he now owns stock, equipment and grain worth more than $1,600.

It took good husbandry under the supervision of Franklin Miller, of the Groveport-Madison vocational agriculture department, and a lot of hard work and plenty of 15-year-old energy to make such gains in such a short time.

After his sow had two litters he sold her and the hogs og the first farrow, reinvesting the proceeds in two purebred Spots and a White Hampshire.

He built farrowing pens, which prevent the sow from lying on the piglets and he fenced in a barn lot on the small farm of his grandfather (Fred Barrett, Sr., who is retired).

Although he's not too young to be a first-rate business man, Freddy was and still is too young for a driver's license. But this transportation problem was soon solved — he drives a farm tractor out to the farm every morning and his dad, Orin Babbitt, takes him out in the evening.

Ambition like this doesn't go unnoticed and this winter Pete Everhart of Groveport stepped in.

The Groveport farmer bought two exceptionally fine gilts from champion blood lines at a price Freddy couldn't touch and turned them over to the boy.

The only string attached to the bargain was that Everhart will have the privilege of selecting his pick from each litter.

"It's a case of a man liking the FFA program in general and liking the boy in particular," Miller explained.

When a project to up-grade the breeding of stock is put into action, as Freddy has done, it has a tri-fold effect, the teacher pointed out.

"It helps the other farmers, the boy and the community"

A HELPING HAND was given to Freddy Babbitt when Pete Everhart of Groveport bought a couple of bred-gilts, of champion blood lines, and gave them to the young farmer, asking only for the pick of each litter. Freddy, left, and Franklin Miller, Groveport vo-ag instructor, admire one of the Black Poland Chinas.

Poultryman Predicts Giant Birds

"It may sound ridiculous, but 100-pound turkeys are being talked about in the poultry business," says Gene Mock, who owns Mock's Poultry, 104 E. Moler-st.

He continued, "It's been only a few years ago that it took 15 weeks to market a chicken—now they do it in eight."

Mock's Poultry has been at the same location for 45 years. Although the business was started by his father, Mock has operated it for 21 years.

Specializing in fresh-dressed poultry and eggs, Mock sells to independent grocers, restaurants and individuals who call at the store.

The owner said consumer demand for turkeys increases each year, and that Arbor Acre Whites (hy-bred chickens) make the best fryers. He added that he can supply guineas, rabbits, squabs, geese and ducks.

Halt Import Of Red-Built Goods Here--Nationally Too

The question of purchasing goods manufactured in Communist or Communist-bloc nations has spread to Central Ohio. The movement started several months ago in the East when consumers discovered they had unwittingly purchased an item manufactured behind the Iron Curtain.

Many of these distraught buyers, joined by anti-Communist groups, formed committees and "raided" the guilty stores by placing little printed cards on each item suspected of being a Communist import. This, in turn, led to boycotts and near riots at several respected business institutions in a large metropolitan area of the East.

Now the same situation is beginning in Central Ohio. Columbus City Council has asked that an ordinance be prepared making it the law of the city to compel all merchandisers displaying items from a Communist country to also display a large sign proclaiming the source of said merchandise.

One councilman even proposed a fine of $500 be tacked onto the ordinance to punish any violators.

It might in some instances, but the problem goes much deeper than the local level. It goes back to a Federal government that allows trade with nations who have avowed to bury us.

Whether the consumer purchases the goods from the individual merchant or not, may eventually have an effect on future purchases by the merchant. But in the meantime tons of Communist manufactured goods already have been purchased, with the blessing of the U.S. Government, and are on the shelves of department and variety stores across the nation.

If a successful boycott of questionable products is pulled off, the one affected will be the individual merchant and not the Communist manufacturers . . . they've already been paid for their product.

So it would seem the wise move for those objecting to these goods would be a letter to their representative in Congress. Enough pressure by interested voters and the wheels of government begin to turn.

Protest marches and boycotts need not take place if enough interested citizens will take the time to tell their congressmen how they feel on this subject. Thus, the wheels of American democracy will turn in an orderly fashion as they were intended.

We Can Have Spiritual Feast Or Famine

The season of Lent is approaching once again. The question often arises as to how we may better observe this penitential season in our every-day living.

There are those who believe fasting in its variety of self-denial forms is the best way to observe this season which also vividly points up the obedience of Christ to His Father's will. Luther has stated the evangelical position as regards fasting when he said, "Fasting and bodily preparation (to receive the sacrament of the Lord's Supper) are indeed a good external discipline; but he is truly worthy and well prepared who believes these words, 'Given and shed for you, for the remission of sins.'"

Rev. Mann

Lent is a time of preparing even as every day of every week should be a time of preparation to be ready to meet our Lord, as we meet Him in the sacrament and in the proclaimed Word. Since obedience, submission of Christ's will to the will of His Father was Christ's "food" (John 4:34), we as followers of His ought to reflect a similar hunger.

What kind of hunger do we reflect in our living example? Too often our lives reflect the take-all give-nothing attitude. In a very real sense with this attitude we are actually experiencing a spiritual famine. Our stomachs may be overloaded but — much like the sailor on a raft in the middle of the ocean surrounded by water, yet without sufficient water to assuage his burning thirst — we become "living" starving examples of people without God who is all around us but in whom we have not placed our trust.

What is your life like? Are the monotony of everyday living and the tensions of home life, world conditions, causing you to feel that something is missing from your daily diet? If this is so, Lent is a fine time for you to examine your present life and see if the food, the sustenance you are missing in your present diet can't be received through the sustenance of faith in Jesus Christ.

Your food and mine ought to be to do the will of our Father in Heaven. This is the only feast in which our hunger can be truly satisfied.

A Steadily Retreating Foe . . .

The Heart Fund gift you make this month (Feb. 24 is Heart Sunday) is a gift for health.

Thousands of people who receive medical care now survive heart and blood disorders that were considered hopeless only 20 years ago. Knowledge uncovered through research has made this possible.

Still, heart disease is the nation's No. 1 killer. When people talk about "heart disease" they usually mean heart attack. Heart attack, however, is only one of the many different forms of heart and circulatory disease. The other major ones include stroke, rheumatic heart disease, inborn heart defects, high blood pressure, hardening of the arteries, heart failure, and even varicose veins.

Together these diseases cause in excess of 925,000 deaths a year in the United States, which is more than 54 per cent of the nation's death total from all causes. In Ohio, heart diseases accounted for 56 per cent of all deaths in the state in 1961.

Despite the many battles won thus far in the fight against these diseases, the war is far from over. There are still great gaps in our knowledge. Chief research targets now are the discovery of the now-unknown causes of atherosclerosis, high blood pressure and rheumatic fever.

In the past year, the Central Ohio Heart Association awarded $151,864 for research, bringing its total investment in local research since 1950 to over $1,300,000. Nationally, more than $75,000,000 Heart Fund dollars have been channeled into research since 1949, year of the first campaign.

When you give to the Heart Fund you are adding strength to the forces aligned to achieve the retreat of this enemy of mankind.

Must End Service

To The Editor:

The Sertoma Cilub of Columbus regrets to announce that effective Mar. 1, its Youth Employment Service (YES) office is being discontinued.

The necessity has arisen whereby both a new office location and a new secretary-manager would have to be obtained and these facts bring to light the long-known truth that our current operation is not what it should be to properly serve the youth on its rolls.

The Sertoma Club is proud of the fact that its Youth Employment Service office in the past three years has interviewed and counseled more than 5,600 teenagers and has found part-time jobs for more than 2,000 of them.

We take this opportunity to express our appreciation and gratitude to the school authorities, guidance counselors, news media, and the many businesses who have contributed to the successful operation of this project.

Boat Buyers Have Their Pick

INSIDE ON THE Outdoors By ROB COCHRAN

Why do firemen wear red suspenders? What's black and white and red all over? Why do people go boating?

While you must attend primary school to keep up on the latest answers to the first two questions, the third should be obvious to everyone who keeps an eye on the outdoors. People go boating because it's fun. (The new answers to the old riddles are: (1) It's in the uniform regulations, and (2) A chocolate sundae with catsup.)

What kind of boating fun do people have?

According to a research study by the Outboard Boating Club of America, boats are used for a wide variety of on-the-water recreational pursuits. Fishing leads the list, with some 70 per cent of new outboard motor purchasers saying they were going fishing.

There is a lot of overlapping, of course, for modern boats are suitable for a number of sports. Forty-six per cent said they would "go cruising." Water skiing attracted a response from 37 per cent, six per cent say hunting and seven per cent listed other activities.

The versatility of boating has probably been the main reason for its tremendous growth in recent years. At this time of year it's easy to conjure up an attractive summer day, with fishing in the morning, water skiing in the afternoon, a cruise in the evening while you prospect a shoreline for a good duck hunting location come fall. This leads to a lot of boat and motor sales, and is not entirely fantasy. Such a day comes true for many boaters every summer. But all boats are not suited for all purposes.

Fishing has been the number one reason for purchasing boating equipment for years, and fisherman demand led to the creation of the first sputtering outboard and its continued development year after year. Sport fishing experts estimate that at least 50 per cent of the nation's 35 million anglers use boats regularly.

This leads to the obvious question, what makes an ideal fishing boat? I can not tell you, for it depends on where you fish, what kind of fishing you do and how much you have to spend. The canoe is an ideal fishing craft for many, while others make Lake Erie their personal fishing pond with 18, 20-foot and larger cruisers. No boat is perfect for all purposes, and you should decide in advance your main use and key your buying to it.

Luckily, it is a buyers' market in the boat business today. Not that they are inexpensive, far from it, but there are more choices than ever. Looking at boats, will make car-buying seem easy. Not only is there great variety in sizes and styling, but you also have to decide about construction materials and power.

In my notion, these last two factors have kept the boat pot bubbling in recent years. A wooden boat of lapstrake construction was acknowledged for many years as the best there was. Fiberglass and aluminum were slow to compete, until manufacturers got the idea of moulding in lapstrakes and similar grooves. Along with this trend was a movement to deeper "V" hulls and away from the flatter, pounding type of craft. This has been a significant development.

At the same time power has undergone great changes. The outboards have been getting steadily larger and more powerful. And then came the inboard-outboard. For a couple of years only two types of inboard-outboards were available, but now the choice of units and horsepower is almost astonishing.

It is a lot easier to answer why people go boating, than it is how to have the most boating fun. It all depends on you.

CRISES

Apparently the President of the United States and other leaders believe we are living in a time more perilous than any others in our history. Perhaps they are right, considering the terrible weapons in the hands of our obvious enemies.

But there have been other times of great danger in this land when even the stoutest heart saw little hope in a gloomy picture.

One time was when George Washington and his few faithful troops suffered at Valley Forge, ill clad and ill fed, while the less patriotic, some rich, some poor, lived amicably beside British troops in Philadelphia, doing much to hurt the cause of freedom.

Civil War buffs need not be reminded of situations that existed a century ago. In the first big conflict at Bull Run the Federals were driven back in panic to D.C. Had the Confederates followed, we could well have lost the nation's capital.

Another gloomy time was the deep winter, 1862-1863. Lee's invasion of the North had been turned temporarily in a costly conflict at Sharpsburg. Grant had dealt the Confederates a grievous blow at Shiloh, but at great cost to himself and to his men in blood and supplies. Vicksburg and Gettysburg had not yet been won.

Many Northern newspapers favored the South editorially. Even the staunch McCormick, of Chicago, despaired of victory and would have settled for a divided nation.

Actually, because of Northern strength, the Southern cause was doomed, but it was to take much doing to seal it. National danger is not a stranger.

It says here. . . .

It takes a hard wedge to split a tough log.

Frosting On The Cake

By
"UNCLE DOC" ROSS — U.S.A.

It is no great wonder or deep mystery today why millions of perfectly fine and decent citizens are going cuckoo. Since TV came along, the hucksters have seduced this country into acceptance of more plain bunkum than anyone ever saw or heard before in his whole lifetime.

We are living most of every 24 hours on a constant deluge of blah-blah. Blah about beer, blah about cigarettes, blah about hair goo, BO, carburetor dirt, dry skin, hands with the soft touch - - add infinitum, ad nauseum.

The hucksters are giving headaches to so many that their business is actually booming just treating those who swallow all of this moronic drivel. If people would just get their own lives organized with real professional health care via their own private family doctor, they would not need to swill down so much worthless junk — some of which actually can be dangerous.

If people would learn how to eat, how to think and keep the kinks out of their muscles and joints, this idiotic patent medicine racket would not be able to buy millions of dollars worth of TV time, just to purvey so-called entertainment.

The whole thing comes down to an amazing fielder's choice that all of us can make every day in this land. What a marvelous thing it would be if more people were soundly educated to the point that they had a constant watchman at the gate of their own mental health and stability.

But, so long as the adult-infants of physical maturity, continue to resist and even violently reject anything that really makes good sense, we will see the hucksters wax fatter and fatter and the country become goofier and goofier. Unless general education rescues this land [illegible] soon from "spoilie," we will see this bunk engulf most of us into our own built-in destruction.

Youth Spouts Alarming Views

It is indeed a paradox that the recent stabbing on Columbus' West Side is being viewed by local citizens with mixed emotions. It therefore came as rather a shock to us to learn that some teenaged factions in the city are willing to condone the killing by labeling it justifiable.

A Hartley Newspapers' staff member this week had occasion to give a 17-year-old youth a ride as he was hitch hiking west in the 600 block of W. Broad-st.

Wolfrom

Immediately after getting into the car, the youth began talking about the Gladden House incident. The boy identified himself as an East Sider who had quit school but was unemployed. He also admitted being "in the vicinity" of the stabbing that Friday night.

Spouting a rather lengthy tirade of paraphrased misinformation, the youth said ("X"), the alleged killer, should get a medal for what he did "As far as we're concerned, he is a hero."

He further exclaimed that the odds were 20-1 against "X" whose car was smashed up. "We think the West Side bunch was pretty chicken to gang up on him like that." The boy refused to identify "we."

Our reporter asked him if he felt a 20-year-old father had a good reason for being at the Gladden House. "Certainly," was the reply. "He's a good guy — he was doing some of his buddies a favor. Anyway, it's a free country."

Apparently this vein of thought roused a certain amount of patriotism in the youth because he said if "X" were prosecuted, the country might as well sell out to the Russians.

"There ain't no justice here anymore," he stated flatly. "Everyone is against kids and when one of us defends ourselves, they throw the book at us."

As the youth got out of the car in the Hilltop area, his parting remarks were. "There's gonna be plenty of trouble between the East and West sides. We got a gang that won't hold still if they do anything to "X." We know about a West Side gang that is coming over to our side of town to get revenge. We're ready for them."

There are many who will shrug off the thinking of the unidentified boy as "kid's stuff." However, if there is any truth whatsoever in his hint of further gang warfare—if he might indeed be reflecting the thinking of a large part of our high school students, then a serious problem is facing all of us.

We, here in Columbus, have been rather fortunate that juvenile rumbles are few and far between. We can only hope that something will be done to prevent any kind of East-West revenge battle that might easily result in more spilled blood.

Members of the Harmony Glee Club will serve a homemade sausage dinner for $1.25 on Saturday, Feb. 23. Serving in the club, 435 E. Kossuth-st, will start at 5 p.m.

Meetings, here and there: C. L. Dumaree will moderate the panel meeting of the Barrett Junior High School PTA program at 7:30 tonight. The parents and youth will discuss "Social Life of Youth." The Fidelis Class of the Southwood Church of Christ will meet for a 6 p.m. potluck supper on Saturday, Feb. 23. Circle 4 of Emmanuel Lutheran Church will meet at 12:30 on Tuesday, Feb. 26. Edith Hiser is the chairman.

The Deshler PTA Parent Education meeting will be held at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, Feb. 26. Gerald Chappell, Deshler's principal, will speak on "Homes That Nurture Intellect." The Mission Circle of St. Paul's Lutheran Church will meet on Tuesday, Feb. 26, at 8 p.m. Mrs. Louis Freytog, Miss Leonora Mack and Miss Minerva Prior will serve.

Mrs. Fritz Metzger, 1363 Lilley-av, will be the hostess for Cloverleaf 2 Tuesday, Feb. 26. The Christian Fellowship Class of South Methodist Church will meet Sunday, Feb. 24, at 6:30 p.m., at the church. The Loyal Workers Class of Gates-Fourth Methodist Church will meet at 8 p.m., Tuesday, Feb. 26.

The Harmony Glee Club men's meeting will be held at the club house Sunday, Feb. 24, at 3 p.m.

PERS, Chapter 2, will meet Tuesday, Feb. 26, at 1439 Lockbourne-rd. Hostess, Mrs. Carl Trott, will serve a noon dessert luncheon prior to the meeting.

Members of the South Methodist Wesley-Weds are preparing for their annual fish fry to be held this year on Friday, Mar. 1, from 4:30 to 7:30 p.m. If they prefer, the diners may order steak. The public is invited to attend.

Although the following children will probably never chop down a cherry tree, they share a common birthday week with the Father of our Country: Mark Ort, Emily Beal, Bononi Hurlbut, Susan Crum, Jack McKinney, Edward Nagy, Sandra Buchanan, Sherrie Linville, Sandra Harvey, John Milam, Carol Koon, Donna Obert, Steven Hellman, Michael Kirby, Glenna Bowers, Vicki Colmery, James Bauman and Molly Fornof.

Adults to receive birthday salutations are Louise Spohn, Martin Mitchell, Kathryn Gregory, Kate Krause, Shirley Fenneman, Hazel Brockerman, Mrs. Ray Ellis, Dorothy Husse, Pat Speakmon, Agnes Dorn, Bertha Heller, Hertha Lightfoot and Louise Thomas. Belated greetings to Roberta Bowers.

Anniversary greetings to Dick and Clara Jane Stahr, Bob and Verna Jean Reuter.

The membership committee of Chapter 206, Women of the Moose, will be in charge of the Wednesday, Feb. 27, dinner at 36 W. Sycamore-st.

Mrs. James Mason, chairman, has chosen to serve a roast beef dinner (or fish if preferred). Portions are $1 for adults, 50 cents for children.

On Friday, Feb. 22, the Hospital Committee is sponsoring a bake sale in the lobby of the Moose Lodge. Chairman will be Mrs. Richard Lively.

The recent Valentine party of the Friendly Page Hobby Club was a luncheon. Secret pals were revealed and new names drawn for the coming year.

The group, which works for shut-ins and invalids around the world, had previously sent Valentine's Day gifts to 200 people on their list. The members are very clever at concocting practical and interesting little gifts from things that people throw away. As a suggestion, the following items are always in demand: scraps of yarn, embroidery thread, quilt pieces, crochet cotton, scraps of felt, sequins, scraps of lace, etc.

As an example of the sort of items that are made, picture a needle case that looks like an apple, a soap "fish" covered with netting, beads and sequins, or a felt heart book mark. Interested donors may contact Glee Oleta McNutt at 380 E. Whittier-st, or by phone, HI. 4-5524. Mrs. McNutt, incidentally, is making nice progress following an early winter operation on her hip.

The Men's Brotherhood of Thurman Avenue Methodist Church is holding a sauerkraut dinner tonight from 5 to 7:30, at the church. Tickets are $1 for adults, 50 cents for children.

Abigail Circle of Oakwood Methodist WSCS will meet at 7:30 tonight in the home of Mrs. I. Fraggiotti, 1396 Moler-rd.

Mrs. H. Gutknecht, of St. Ann's Guild 59, is chairman of the prize committee for the games party to be held at St. Magdalene's Parish Hall on Saturday, Feb. 23, at 8:30 p.m. Mrs. Gutknecht is a resident of 1245 S. Champion-av.

Among South Siders who escaped the harsh Ohio winter for a brief vacation were Mr. and Mrs. James Voss, 510 E. Moler-st. Their address is unknown to us, but Mr. and Mrs. David Georger also made the trip with the Vosses.

Though not an area resident, the passing of Carrie Gearhart will leave a great void in the charitable work of the city, for her interests were wide and varied. Our sympathy to her survivors.

Brownie Troop 686, of the South High EUB Church, will meet with other troops at Hope Lutheran Church, Sunday, Feb. 24, for a "Thinking Day" program. The occasion is in honor of Juliet Lowe, founder of the Girl Scout movement.

If the variety show sponsored by the Mohawk PTA tonight is as good as previous ones, it should be worth a visit. Starting time is 8 p.m.

Congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Augie Graumlich, who are now the parents of "Chip," born Feb. 2. The Graumlichs reside at 1280 Linwood-av.

Clothes, furniture and appliances are offered by the Wesleyan Class of Oakwood Methodist Church for trading stamps. A piano for the sanctuary is the goal. Norma Jacks, HI. 3-5291, is the person to call.

The ailing list includes Henry Scheiderer, Sr., who spent some time in the hospital as a heart patient. Mrs. William Rau is home again after being a patient in Mercy Hospital. Mrs. Callie Humes, 49 Southwood-av, would be cheered by thoughtful cards. Richard Donovan was favoring a sprained ankle for a while, but is getting around a little better now. Hilda McAthern was in Grant Hospital a short time ago. If the cold that caused postponement of her open-heart surgery was conquered, Florence Bailey should now be recuperating from her Feb. 19 surgery at University Hospital.

Junior and Senior High C. E. groups of the Southwood Church of Christ will be among those attending the Teens for Christ Birthday Rally at Indianola Church of Christ on Sunday, Feb. 24.

The Young Women's Circle of Gates-Fourth Methodist Church is prepared to serve a capacity crowd at its annual smorgasbord, which will be held Wednesday, Feb. 27. Adult tickets are $1.75, children 75 cents.

Emmanuel Lutheran Brotherhood enjoyed the annual father-son banquet this past Tuesday, Feb. 19. Luther League members of Emmanuel will hold their meeting at 7 p.m., Sunday, Feb. 24. Following the business meeting, Clinton Friedley will discuss problems of dating with the Leaguers.

Mary Beth Whitacre, 158 Southwood-av, and her fiance, Valerio Macivee, 671 Thurman-av, will repeat their wedding vows Saturday, Feb. 23.

Another bride and groom-to-be are Nancy Emmenegger, 960 Fairwood-av, and William Curran Jr., 4938 Medfield Way. They will be wed in Holy Rosary Church Saturday, Feb. 23.

"An earnest and sincere desire on the part of every enforcement officer to reduce the accident rate is of primary importance. This goal can best be achieved by selective enforcement of all hazardous traffic violations at the time and place the accidents are occurring," Scholar added. The chief pointed out that there have been 14 fatal accidents reported in Columbus up until February 15.

"I DON'T SEE ANYTHING"
THERE IS ONLY ONE WAY TO SEE THROUGH A CAMERA
Did you ever try to look through a camera from the front side? Yes, most of us have... out of curiosity... but we would not even consider trying to take a picture in such a manner. There are many though, who go through life never giving themselves a chance to really see God. In order to see God, one must look at him through faith. Attend church regularly, seek God where others can help direct you in your search for God.
"So then faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the word of God."

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

From Here And There

When it comes to people who say, "There ought to be a law . . ." we are reminded of Uncle Doc Roes' reference to Henry Thorndike's law: "No man begins to be somebody until he has learned how to respect folks who ARE somebody." But it must be remembered that the somebody should be legitimate and genuine.

Diamond Anniversary

There are acres of diamonds at the Main Federal branches these days as they celebrate their 75th anniversary.

Tuesday noon they spread cheer among members of the news fraternity by passing out diamonds to each one present. But one of the diamonds is real and that is our problem to determine which one.

Anyway, just the mere fact of staying in business for 75 years is worthy of note, according to Prexy Harold Esper. And he is right! A doff of the topper to the Main Federal organization.

Watch next week's papers for an announcement of interest and maybe you will have diamonds too!

Local Council To View 'Degenerate' Condition

The question, "What can be done when a neighborhood degenerates from lack of concern and leadership?" will be under fire Tuesday, Mar. 5, by the Broad - Main - Livingston Area Council.

According to Chairman Linwood Walker, "some citizens in the area have found the beginning to the answer." Council members have been delegated to encourage proper upkeep of the area and "building a neighborhood community spirit."

Tuesday's meeting, which is scheduled to begin at 7:30 p.m. in the Old First Presbyterian Church (S. Ohio-av and Bryden-rd), will feature a panel of city officials.

These include Capt. Philip Momberg, juvenile bureau, Columbus Police Department; Joseph Blair, president, Near North Side Area Council and Jack Willison, director, Urban Renewal Commission.

"This 'information' meeting will deal with specific problems related to inner-city living," Walker stated.

Besides the meetings, the council is encouraging the organization of "block clubs."

The council has been helping interested persons to form groups to deal with the specific problems in their respective blocks.

"By cooperating through the council," Walker added, "these block clubs can also deal with some of the problems common to the whole area."

A steering committee has been set up by the group. It includes:

Robert Baker, Rich-st Captain; Cecil Miller, Wilson-Fulton Captain; George Miller, Oak-Wilson Captain; Vernon Barkstall, recreation commitee; Capt. Robert Smith, St. Paul's Episcopal; Florence Suzuki, Central Community House, and Rev. William Yuelll, Old First Presbyterian.

Go Fly A Kite Says South 'Y'

Some 1000 South Side youngsters will be told to go fly a kite during the March-winds-time and, at the same time, boost the first-ever membership campaign at the South Side Branch YMCA.

Robert M. Davis, associate executive secretary of the "Y," announced plans this week to stage a kite-flying contest for youngsters 8 to 15 who live in the area served by the South Side "Y", newly-relocated at 190 Southwood-av.

This is how the contest works:

Youths will be issued kites free of charge through Mar.1 at the South Side "Y" and will also be given registration cards. They will then fly the kites on their own time and under parental supervision.

Anytime before March 15, they must return the cards with a certification by parents as to how much string they used in flying them.

The highest entries will be selected to participate in the finals, which have been scheduled for March 23 at Smith Road School.

A number of awards have been arranged for winners with top prize being a free week at Camp Willson, near Bellefontaine, this summer.

Actually, everyone is a winner, since each youth is allowed to keep the attractive kite.

There is no entry fee. The only cost is the purchase of string, which must be only of cotton. All other types will be disqualified. This regulation string is available for a slight charge at the South Side Branch building.

Each kite is imprinted with YMCA membership information in order to get parents interested in the program, commented Kenneth Olbert, campaign chairman.

Olbert, who is also principal at Barrett Junior High, added that membership monies will be used to pay costs of the expanded South Side YMCA program now being carried out at the new building.

SMOKING IS TARGET OF STUDENTS
. . . Habit Made Easy For Youngsters
AT CONFERENCE

Students Seeking Stricter Smoking Sale Supervision

By JOHN AUBLE, JR.

At an age when most youngsters are trying to scrape together 30 cents for a package of cigarettes, more than 500 Central Ohio students Friday were discussing ways to abolish "the habit."

Mostly non-smokers, they put their heads together to discuss smoking and shouted at the top of their nicotine-free lungs for stricter enforcement of the smoking laws.

The youths — seventh-through-senior-high-aged —were all part of a "Student Conference on Smoking" sponsored by the American Cancer Society at Central High School.

Law enforcement was the most frequently talked about topic during the 18 individual sessions; the students wondered why "anyone" could buy cigarettes.

The law is supposed to prohibit the sale of tobacco to minors, but the students felt that the law wasn't being enforced strictly enough by law officials.

"It used to be that a youngster needed a note from home to buy cigarettes," one pretty blonde exclaimed. "Now, anyone can buy them, and I've seen some pretty young kids make purchases."

The majority obviously felt that the smoking habit was starting at a too early age. They concerned themselves, however, with smoking as a whole and gasped a bit when told of its dangers by health officials.

During a preliminary warm-up session in the auditorium, Dr. George Morrice, Jr., of the Central Ohio Heart Association, and Dr. Charles Meckstroth of the thoracic surgery department of Ohio State, briefed the youths on some scientific data concerning smoking.

Dr. Morrice termed smoking a "demonstration of self-destruction," while Dr. Meckstroth added that "one million school children in the United States today will die of lung cancer before they're 70 years old."

The students took the information seriously — perhaps, frightened by the staggering statistics shown in regards to smoking and death.

One of the main points under fire was that of cigarette advertising. Reports showed that agencies spend $140 million a year "to get you kids to smoke," Dr. Meckstroth commented. "They're not after your money," he continued, "but, your life."

Some of the comments during the sessions went like this:

• One boy pointed out that he sees his parents, older brothers and sisters smoke and figures it's all right for him to indulge.

• A young gal suggested they do away with cigarette machines that are easily accessible to the "school crowd."

• Young people groups (DeMolay, church gather-

PROGRESS REPORT ON EXPRESSWAYS VIEWED

The face of the city is ever-changing as bulldozers make way for modern, multi-million dollar expressway systems. An up-to-date progress report reveals the following:

Work is proceeding on the Fort Hayes Interchange, Parsons Expressway, Parsons Interchange and Fulton Expressway.

The Parsons Expressway is to be completed in 1964, from the Fort Hayes Interchange to the Parsons Interchange.

The Fort Hayes Interchange is to be completed and opened to traffic in October. Much of the excavation work on the south portion of this system has been finished and pavement construction is expected to start in a few weeks.

About 30 structures remain to be razed for the Fulton Expressway. This system will parallel Fulton-st, which is to become an access street.

If financial arrangements can be made in time, construction bids on the Fulton Expressway will be taken this Spring, and it may be ready in late 1964 by taking advantage of two construction seasons.

SOUTH HIGH GRAD HIKES IN HAWAII

A South High School graduate, along with another Ohioan, joined the 50-mile hike brigade last week—in Pearl City, Hawaii.

Lt. Leon Cohan, 29, son of Mrs. Ethel Park, 669 Jenkins-av, left his U.S. Marine desk job along with Capt. F. C. Fisher, 30, of Warren, O.

They journeyed 25 miles to Makaha and back to Pearl City for the 50-mile round-trip total in 16 hours and 10 minutes, according to a news source in Hawaii.

Both men are stationed at Fleet Marine Fort Pacific with headquarters at Camp H. M. Smith.

Fisher finished strong, the source reported, but Cohan was troubled with leg cramps part of the way back.

Cohan, 29, was graduated from South in 1951 and is married to Janice (Henkelmann), formerly of 1427 Parsons-av, a 1954 South High graduate.

Are Settlement Houses Slipping?

A Hartley Headliner Report

BY JOHN AUBLE JR.

A noted social worker warned that settlement houses in this city will "slip away" if workers fail to make a more vigorous effort to concern themselves with community problems.

Richard M. Kelly, executive director of both the Catholic Youth Service Bureau and the Catholic Child Guidance Clinic in Cleveland, brought his plea to the annual meeting of St. Stephen's Community House in the far South Side Tuesday night.

He cited a belief that both community and settlement houses had once found a "niche" in the community that eventually turned into a "groove" and that is now becoming a "rut".

The 44-year-old native Bostonian urged volunteer social workers to "engage in the task of having a stronger effect on community life."

According to Kelly, settlement houses are faced with a "great challenge" to work on the basic and clear community projects. "If the problems aren't clear, it's the settlement's job to clarify them," he added.

Kelly also mentioned:

"The pace of human need continues to gather momentum. The 1960's are a period of challenges unequaled in the history of social endeavor.

The pace of social change is gathering momentum. It's also confusing and conflicting.

"We've lived through depression and war and can count the physical, mental and moral casualties. Things have changed now and we've become eminently successful. But, although the 'profits' are up, the 'incomes' have decreased".

"We now have a feeling of success that's more apparent than real. It's hard to realize

Since most folks like to know the results of our various pleas throughout the year, it is a pleasure to report tht the St. Comillus Serving Circle received 400 or more buttons that will be used on nurses uniforms in the overseas mission fields. One kind reader donated two shopping bags full of nurses uniforms.

The members do not know the name of the kind lady, and asked that this medium be used to convey their gratitude. The Sewing Circle also collects used sheets and men's shirts, which are used for bandages and hospital gowns. When housecleaning days roll around, won't you lay these articles aside for the St. Comillus Sewing Circle?

Marse Esselstein, premium stamps chairman of St. Mary's, will gladly accept these items for use in the Summer Festival. Her phone is HI. 3-6903.

Preparing for FLIGHT

The beautiful breezy skies turn our eyes upward to watch the flight of the kite and the soaring of the airplane. The pilot must prepare for his flight in order to remain aloft, to reach supersonic speeds, to soar to highest blue sky. In our lives, to prepare for the speed of our times, and to pave the way for soaring to the highest success in living, we need God's word as it is preached in His Church. Isaiah 41:31 reads, "But they that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength; they shall mount up with wings as eagles; they shall run, and not be weary; and they shall walk, and not faint."

EVERYONE IN THE CHURCH
THE CHURCH IN EVERYONE

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for mankind of His demand for man's response to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny, the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

Nothing Like A 50-Mile Hike—On Conveyor Belt

Don't look now, but the movie industry has latched onto President Kennedy's physical fitness program and if this latest muscle-building exploit can't be called a publicity stunt I'll turn in my dumbbells.

Bud Rosenthal, publicity man for Columbia Pictures in New York, informs that Winsted, Conn., is —in a roundabout way—making it easy for 50-mile hikers.

If the idea was tried in Columbus, merchants would scream at the top of their lungs—to say nothing about the bottoms of their feet.

Here's the plan.

On Mar. 13, cash will be outlawed in Winsted by a decree of the town fathers and the 10,000 inhabitants will have to do all business on credit.

The outlawing of cash for a day is in "honor" (Rosenthal writes) of the Danny Kaye, Columbia Pictures comedy "The Man From The Diners' Club" that will have its world premiere in Winsted on Mar. 13.

What about the physical fitness bit? Here's how that works:

Merchants and local officials in this small Yankee city will "turn in" any residents attempting to spend money on that day. A treadmill will be set up on the town hall green where violators will hike out their 50-mile walk sentences on an endless conveyor-type belt.

Whew!

Weak-kneed offenders and money spenders won't have to worry if they get caught using currency, Rosenthal assures. They will have the alternative of setting out their sentence confined in a pair of wooden stocks, those pillars of old New England justice with their holes for confining legs and arms of minor offenders.

"Anyone who attempts to pay cash for so much as a lima bean or even a limousine, may find himself sentenced to join the latest national fad and take a walk, like the Marines of Teddy Roosevelt's day," concludes promotion-minded Rosenthal.

Sounds more like an answer to Sunday sales law woes in Ohio, doesn't it?
